Dewey Hits New Deal for "Spendthrift" Spending

Declares Government Is Taking In only 55 Cents For Each Dollar Expended

Charges Seven Years of Maladministration Have Temporarily Held Back Growth of Country

Boston, Jan. 23 (AP) — Thomas E. Dewey, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, charged the New Deal with "maladministration" tonight, and declared it should be condemned because its policies have prevented the employment of nine million Americans who want work."

Thomas E. Dewey

Massachusetts Republicans gave the young New York prosecutor a rousing welcome as he keynoted his drive for New England support with an atack upon the New Deal fiscal policies.

Bunting - bedecked Mechanics hall, one of the largest in the city, was filled to capacity. Hundreds of persons stood and several hundred more poured into an adjoining auditorium to hear Dewey over an amplifier.

The New York district attorney's speech — the third major address of his campaign — was broadcast nationally by NBC.

Dewey described the New Deal fiscal policies as "unbridled and spendthrift," and he declared the Roosevelt administration was "fostering a defeatist attitude on the whole subject of our economic future."

He drew a round of applause when he said

"The national administration which will succeed the New Deal next January must again release the energy of private enterprise to transform unemployment into employment, relief into jobs."

He was applauded when he asserted the federal budget "can not help be balanced, it can be brought down to a reasonable figure."

At another point, he declared

"Seven years of maladministration in Washington have temporarily held back the growth of our country. But I deny that the American people are finished. America is not the morning of its destiny."

In opening his attack upon New Deal spending policies, he asserted that "it is perfectly plain that the New Administration is too tired to do anything about its budget." And as he came to the end of his prepared address, he added:

"Only a new broom can sweep clean the budgetary litter of the New Deal."

The lawyer from Michigan, who rose to national prominence as a "racket buster" in Manhattan, maintained that x x x in its first responsibility to the men and women seeking a livelihood, the New Deal has utterly and completely collapsed."

Dewey maintained that the federal government was spending $17,000 every minute, but was taking only fifty-five cents for every dollar spent.

He said that "even waste of money is not the greatest offense of this administration. The crime of the New Deal is its denial of human opportunity to millions of people."

Dewey declared the seven "lean"

Dies Committee Given New Life By House Vote

Representatives Favor Continuance by Vote of 341 to 21

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP) — The Dies committee was given another year today to investigate un-American activities.

After two hours of loud and some times angry debate, the House voted 341 to 21 for continuance. The opponents were twenty Democrats and Rep. Marcantonio (AL-NY). All the Republicans who voted — and most of them did — were for it.

The committee was organized in 1938 and extended in 1939. The vote continues it until the end of the present Congress — Jan. 3, 1941.

The Democrats who opposed the extension — some of whom stated their positions vigorously — were: Bradley, Dunn and McGranery of Pennsylvania; Thomas F. Ford, Geyer, Havenner and Izac of California; Coffee and Wallgren of Washington; Fried, Keller, McKeough, Mitchell and Sabath of Illinois; Hook and Tenerowicz of Michigan; O'Day of New York; Pierce of Oregon; Shannon of Missouri and Schulte of Indiana.

The continuance was voted in the absence of Chairman Dies, who is ill at his home in Orange, Texas, but the other six members were there and asked for the renewal. The committee's office and investigative staff were also out in force occupying three rows of a public gallery. These employes were cut off the payroll on January 3, when the committee went out of existence temporarily.

Dies still must request the House to vote more funds. He indicated before his departure for home last

Four Reasons Given State Department Why U. S. Ships Are Delayed

By ROBERT BUNNELLE

London, Jan. 23 (AP)—The British government stood adamant tonight in defense of its war blockade practices in an increasingly serious conflict with United States interests, even at the risk of new strain on Anglo-American friendship.

Britannia, confident it "rules the waves," indicated sympathy with American annoyance at lengthy delays of ships and partial seizure of cargoes, especially at Gibraltar, just as it did on the questions of the Pan-American Neutrality belt and interference with United States oceangoing mails. Again, however, it had a ready and uncompromising reply.

Four Reasons Cited

In this case an official British spokesman replied to an aide memoire given to Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador at Washington, last Saturday, by Secretary of State Cordell Hull. This diplomatic document, a formal reminder of preceding oral representations, objected to "discriminatory" treatment of United States shipping in the Mediterranean and expressed the United States government's "serious concern."

The British spokesman, on behalf of the Ministry of Economic Warfare, gave four reasons why United States ships were delayed at contraband control stations three times as long as those of Italy, which, incidentally is the object of intensive British diplomatic courtship:

(1)—Failure to supply advance information concerning their cargoes;

(2)—The mixed nature of these cargoes, often including as many as 300 items, thus requiring a longer time for examination than those of Italian ships, which are largely bulk.

(3)—Varied destinations in the Mediterranean of United States ships, whereas Italian ships usually go only to Italy.

(4)—Neglect by United States shippers to take full advantage of various British schemes of guarantees that goods carried will not reach Germany.

The French government, at the same time, issued a statement refusing to renounce the right of Allied ships to counter-attack if fired upon by German warships in the 300-mile Pan-American safety belt. This followed a previous British declaration.

Like the British, the French suggested that the American governments give "satisfying assurances" against the presence of German

Four Army Men Killed in Crash

Bomber Bursts into Flames after Crashing in Rainstorm

Riverside, Calif., Jan. 23 (AP) — Caught in a blinding rainstorm, an army bomber struck a hillside near here today, killing four of its six occupants.

Two, Sgt. Cecil C. Purvis, Glennville, Ga., and Private Frank Carroll, Hyde Park, Mass., parachuted to safety, the March Field public relations office reports. They were unhurt.

Others in the twin-engined craft:

First Lieut. Raymond W. Sumi, of Nashwauk, Minn., the pilot; First Lieut. Benjamin G. Holloway, Columbus, Ohio; Sgt. Gerald D. Wilcox, Bennett, Iowa, and Private Leonard E. Riley, Wichita Falls, Tex.

The plane crashed two miles northwest of Riverside on Box Springs Hill, only seven miles away from its army air base desination at March Field.

D. M. Stephenson of Riverside, only witness to the crash, said Carroll landed near him by parachute and together they ran to the wreckage.

Carroll's account of the accident, as told by Stephenson:

"We were flying high—about 9,000 feet, I guess — when the motors missed and the ship went into a spin, and we were all ordered out of the plane.

SOS Call Says Ship with 146 Aboard Sinking

Call Relayed to Boston Coast Guard by Retired Army Officer

Boston, Jan. 23 (AP)—A short wave radio SOS call relayed to Coastguard Headquarters by Capt. Byron C. Brown, U. S. retired, tonight reported an unidentified vessel sinking with 146 passenger and crew members aboard between Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket islands off the southeastern tip of Massachusetts.

Shortly after 11 p. m. (E.S.T.) the Coast Guard Cutter General Greene reported to headquarters that she had arrived off Cross Rip Lightship, about half way between Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard islands, and that there was no sign of any vessel in trouble.

The terse report was:

"Off Cross Rip. Seas smooth, visibility good. No sign distressed vessel."

Unaware of any passenger ships plying between the islands off the ice-bound coast, the Coastguard dispatched four cutters and the U. S. Navy Destroyer Breckenridge to investigate the report.

The Coskata, Madaket and Gay Head Coastguard stations were notified by radio and telephone to get boats to the scene if possible.

In a telephone conversation with the Coastguard Headquarters from his West Tisbury home, Capt. Brown said he heard a short wave broadcast on on the lowest band on his special radio at 7:02 p. m. (EST).

"I distinctly heard an SOS," he said, "and then the radioman and captain of the vessel both spoke and both said 'we're sinking.'"

Neither man gave his name, the captain said, nor named the vessel, but both shrieked that "there are 146 men aboard."

Both men, Brown told the coastguard, "seemed terribly excited and they dropped off the air suddenly."

Censorship of American Mail Stirs Senators

England's Interference with Mails and Shipping Causes Protests

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—England's wartime censorship of American mails and interference with American ships stirred some senators today to voice caustic protests.

Senator Lundeen (FL-Minn), frequent critic of British policies, said in an interview that England was using the State Department "as a doormat."

Senator Mead (D-NY), in a lengthy floor speech, charged the British government with violating the International Hague Convention on mails on neutrals and inflicting a "humiliating indignity" upon the United States.

Senator Reynolds (D-NC) suggested to reporters that repeal of the American arms embargo to permit sales of war materials to England and France led to the recent British policies.

"There were no unlawful seizures or interferences until we removed the embargo," Reynolds said. "We have gone further to aid Great Britain than at any time in history and she is taking advantage of our friendly attitude."

He suggested that the United States should "take retaliatory measures" but declined to say just what these should be.

Lundeen said this country should demand that Britain surrender Bermuda and other nearby British possessions "in payment of our war debts."

"Our officials continue to send scented notes and perfumed protests to England," the Minnesota Farmer-Laborite said. "What we need is a little of the old-fashioned, red-blooded diplomacy of the Andrew Jackson type.

"When the French failed to pay a debt, then Jackson threatened to seize their islands. We ought to try the same thing. There would

England Loses Destroyer and Crew Members

Admiralty Says Exmouth Sunk Either by Mine or Torpedo

London, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Admiralty announced tonight that the Destroyer Exmouth had been sunk by a mine or a torpedo with all hands lost.

"It is feared that there are no survivors," said the announcement. Her normal complement is 175 men.

The 1,475-ton Exmouth was the second British destroyer lost since Saturday, when the Grenville went down in the North sea wtih a loss of eighty-one men.

The Exmouth was a flotilla leader of the "Admiralty" type. She carried five 4.7-inch guns, seven smaller guns and eight twenty-one-inch torpedo tubes.

Since destroyers in wartime usually carry crews about ten percent greater than normal, it is possible that nearly 200 men lost their lives aboard the Exmouth. In the case of the Grenville, 118 men were saved.

Cost $1,650,000

The Admiralty communique said:

"The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that H. M. Destroyer Exmouth, Captain R. S. Benson, has been sunk by either a mine or a torpedo and it is feared that there are no survivors. Next of kin have been informed."

The craft, capable of thirty-six knots, was built at a cost of about £330,000 (about $1,650,000 at the

Paderewski Says Poland Will Rise From the Ruins

Accepts Election as President of the Polish Parliament-in-Exile

Paris, Jan. 23 (AP)—Weak with the weight of his seventy-nine years but undaunted in spirit, Ignace Jan Paderewski stirred the Polish Parliament-in-exile which elected him its president today to tears in pledging that body to raise Poland "from the ruins."

The slender pianist has not touched a keyboard since Germany invaded Poland.

"I do not know," the white haired musician said as tears streamed down the faces of the delegates in the grand ballroom of the Polish embassy, "if God will let me take part much longer in the work of the national council."

Although he had to be helped to his feet by a secretary, Paderewski's voice gained strength and rose almost to a shout as he cried:

"Poland is immortal. We will deliver her from captivity and will raise her from the ruins. We take this engagement before God!"

The one-time premier of Poland declared the creation of a powerful army was the government's first aim and appealed for unity in internal matters to concentrate on rebuilding Poland.

He gave special thanks to America's Poles "to whose generosity we owe a great part of our power to aid the Polish refugees and population in distress."

With a show of the old time political vigor with which he led Poland's fight for freedom during World war days, Paderewski said he was sure that Polish "governments in the last thirteen years were in a large part responsible for the fate which has stricken Poland."

Apparently the acceptance of the council presidency meant the end of the great pianist's musical career, which earned him millions and the adoration of music lovers all over the world.

Paderewski for the first time in two decades, left his piano at home in Switzerland when he came to Paris.

"I do not want it," he explained. "I have no need for it."

A large portion of the millions he earned—particularly in the United States—has been donated to Poland. He retired as Polish premier in 1919 to devote his remaining years to music.

Finns Claim Russian Army Loses 1,000 Men in Furious Battle Lasting Two Days

By WADE WERNER

Helsinki, Jan. 23 (AP)—Soviet warplanes swarmed over Central Finland anew today, killing nineteen persons and wounding many at the rail center of Nurmes with a single bomb, while the Red army was reported to have lost upwards of 1,000 men in a furious but futile land offensive against unyielding Finnish lines.

The casualties at Nurmes were caused when a Soviet air bomb scored a direct hit on a crowded air raid shelter. Other persons were wounded in subsequent machine-gunning of the population.

The raid on Nurmes, which is on the Northern shore of Lake Pielinen, apparently was aimed at the railroad which runs Northwestward across the country to the Swedish frontier.

In another raid on Hyrynsalmi, 100 miles north of Nurmes, a hospital was reported bombed but there was no immediate report of any casualties.

Many Sections Raided

Unofficial advices said that Hanko, Finland's "Gibraltar of the Baltic," and Tamisaari also were raided. Other Soviet raiders appeared over Helsinki and Rovaniemi, in the Northwest, but were driven off by anti-aircraft guns.

Coupled with official reports of futile Soviet land attacks in the Southeast were unofficial advices which told of additional blows to the Baltic Red fleet, described as a heavy loser in the first eight weeks of the war.

Snow and poor visibility dogged the new Soviet offensive Northeast of Lake Ladoga and on the Karelian Isthmus where the Finns again capitalized on their ability and experience in fighting under difficult winter conditions.

North of Lake Ladoga, the Finnish high command's night communique said the Russians left upyards of 1,000 dead after two days of unsuccessful mass assaults in the vicinity of Kollaanjoki.

One Russian tank was destroyed and two more were put out of commission on the Karelian Isthmus, the communique said, during a violent artillery duel which broke up Soviet reconnaissance patrols.

Six Planes Downed

Six, and possibly nine, Soviet warplanes were reported downed while Finnish aircraft carried out photographic and reconnaissance flights and directed artillery fire against the invaders.

Major attention contered on activity across the Gulf of Finland, where the Russians were rushing ground preparations for further air onslaughts against the Finns from the new Soviet bases in Estonia.

New damage inflicted on the Red fleet was reported by Scandinavian correspondents who said the 23,606 ton Russian battleship Marat was damaged in a Finnish air raid Sunday on the naval base at Kronstadt, near Leningrad.

These dispatches said the 8,500-ton Soviet Cruiser Kiroff, presumably laid up in Kronstadt for repairs previously caused by Finnish shells, was struck again in the same raid.

Additional dispatches, from Lat-

Japs Protest British Action

Indignant over Seizure of 21 Germans from Japanese Liner

Tokyo, Jan. 24 (Wednesday) (AP)—Japanese indignation over a British cruiser's seizure of twenty-one Germans from a Japanese liner increased today and Domei, authoritative news agency, reported that ranking naval officials in Tokyo had discussed "measures designed to prevent a recurrence" of the incident.

Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita summoned British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie to an hour's conference yesterday during which, Domei said, Arita repeated his government's protest against the affair and also a request that Britain refrain from further halting of Japanese ships. At least three other Japanese ships now on the seas are known to be carrying Germans.

(In London a British spokesman said the Japanese protest did not challenge Britain's right to halt and search a Japanese ship but expressed concern over the status of the Germans).

The twenty-one seamen were taken off the Liner Asama Maru Saturday within thirty-five miles of Yokohama.

Navy Minister Admiral Zengo Yoshida met with admirals commanding the Japanese fleets and naval bases. A spokesman declined to discuss their decision other than to say "we are waiting for Britain's reply to the Japanese protest."

Canada Blocks Export Of Wheat to Russia

Ottawa, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Canadian government tonight forbade the export of wheat and other materials to countries adjacent to Germany except by license, thus blocking delivery of about 1,250,000 bushels bought by Soviet Russia.

The action was taken by order-in-council.

Private sources said the wheat recently purchased for Russian account would be denied a license for export loading.

Southern States Are Covered by Worst Snowstorm in a Generation

Atlanta's Nine and Half Inches Sets New Record for City

Atlanta, Jan. 23 (AP) — The land of cotton shouldered an unaccustomed blanket of snow tonight and found it a wearying load.

In many areas it was the worst stowstorm of a generation. Atlanto's nine and one-half inch fall set a new record for the city and ten inches was an all-time mark for Jackson, Miss.

Shivering southerners dug in for several days' siege as meteorologists forecast temperatures considerably lower than the twenty-five to thirty degrees that accompanied the snow.

From Southern Georgia west through mid-Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana to Texas snow piled up. In some places it measured an official foot.

Air- motor car and bus, train and water transportation was hampered.

The Dixie snow belt extended into the Carolinas and Virginia, spread over hilly Tennessee. Sub-freezing cold reached far south into the citrus belts of the Florida peninsula and Texas' Rio Grande valley, endangering several millions of dollars worth of fruit.

In the Gulf border regions there was no snow, but cold rain and wind conspired to discomfit warmth-acclimated residents.

Unfamiliar with icy-road driving, Dixie motorists had tough going. They skidded into drifts and stuck. Most had no tire chains. City streets and country highways were dotted with marooned cars.

A coal shortage threatened domestic users in Birmingham, Ala., in the heart of the Alabama coal mining and steel manufacturing area.

Snow and sleet caused maneuvers of 8,500 troops in the army's first division gathered at Fort Benning, Ga., to be held in abeyance. The men, housed in a tent city, huddled as best they could against the cold.

Snow-shrouded ice floes churned in the Mississippi river south of Greenville, Miss.

A Jellico, Tenn., delegation had to forego a projected trip to a conference on promoting tourist travel in Tennessee at Knoxville. The members were snowbound.

Lewis Flays McNutt as Presidential Candidate

By E. E. EASTERLY

Columbus, O., Jan. 23 (AP)—The United Mine Workers of America practically scratched Paul V. McNutt off its list as a presidential candidate today.

John L. Lewis, whose opinions are generally law to the 600,000 miners whom he heads, pictured the Democratic Federal Security Administrator as a "political adventurer" who hoped to buy the presidency of the United States.

Criticism also was directed toward Vice President John N. Garner, officers of the union asserting he is a leader in the movement for revision of the Wagner Labor Act and for enactment of legislation unfavorable toward labor.

At the Union's Jubilee convention opening Lewis compared McNutt to the ancient kings who, he said, sent out soldiers to protect strikebreakers.

As the audience of more than 5,000 delegates and spectators tittered, the president of the U.M.W. and Congress of Industrial Organizations explained:

"Just like in Indiana a few years back when the governor, whose name was McNutt, sent troops into the coal mine area to protect the strangers who were taking the jobs of mine workers whose children were hungry and whose wives were sick.

"A political adventurer whose name was McNutt, who liked to pretend he was a soldier, who was accompanied by a motley crew of

Oil Situation in Rumania Brings Warning from Allies

Protest any Attempt To Compel Companies To Furnish Oil to Germany

Bucharest, Jan. 23 (AP)—Rumania was warned by Great Britain and France today that "grave complications" might follow any attempt to compel British and French oil companies in Rumania to furnish oil for Germany.

Rumania recently created a National Petroleum Commission with sweeping powers over Rumanian oil production, and some foreign circles believed this was in response to German pressure to obtain all the oil possible from Rumania.

The new commission can control production, refining and export of all Rumanian oil "in conformity with the interests of the state," and has authority to take over companies not submitting to its orders.

The envoys of Britain and France were understood to have told the Rumanian government today that while their governments did not dispute Rumania's right to regulate the oil industry, they would not tolerate forced production by British and French owned companies for the benefit of Germany.

At the same time reliable sources reported that two passenger trains from Bucharest to Berlin via Russian Poland would begin service early next month. This resumption, the informants stated, was made possible by Soviet consent to German operations and policing of some 200 miles of rail line through annexed Russian territory.

Germany's main object in getting

"There were no unlawful seizures or interferences until we removed the embargo," Reynolds said. "We have gone further to aid Great Britain than at any time in history and she is taking advantage of our friendly attitude."

He suggested that the United States should "take retaliatory measures" but declined to say just what these should be.

Lundeen said this country should demand that Britain surrender Bermuda and other nearby British possessions "in payment of our war debts."

"Our officials continue to send scented notes and perfumed protests to England," the Minnesota Farmer-Laborite said. "What we need is a little of the old-fashioned, red-blooded diplomacy of the Andrew Jackson type.

"When the French failed to pay a debt, then Jackson threatened to seize their islands. We ought to try the same thing. There would

Admiralty Says Exmouth Sunk Either by Mine or Torpedo

London, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Admiralty announced tonight that the Destroyer Exmouth had been sunk by a mine or a torpedo with all hands lost.

"It is feared that there are no survivors," said the announcement. Her normal complement is 175 men.

The 1,475-ton Exmouth was the second British destroyer lost since Saturday, when the Grenville went down in the North sea wtih a loss of eighty-one men.

The Exmouth was a flotilla leader of the "Admiralty" type. She carried five 4.7-inch guns, seven smaller guns and eight twenty-one-inch torpedo tubes.

Since destroyers in wartime usually carry crews about ten percent greater than normal, it is possible that nearly 200 men lost their lives aboard the Exmouth. In the case of the Grenville, 118 men were saved.

Cost $1,650,000

The Admiralty communique said: "The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that H. M. Destroyer Exmouth, Captain R. S. Benson, has been sunk by either a mine or a torpedo and it is feared that there are no survivors. Next of kin have been informed."

The craft, capable of thirty-six knots, was built at a cost of about £330,000 (about $1,650,000 at the

Southern States Are Covered by Worst Snowstorm in a Generation

Atlanta's Nine and Half Inches Sets New Record for City

Atlanta, Jan. 23 (AP) — The land of cotton shouldered an unaccustomed blanket of snow tonight and found it a wearying load.

In many areas it was the worst stowstorm of a generation. Atlanto's nine and one-half inch fall set a new record for the city and ten inches was an all-time mark for Jackson, Miss.

Shivering southerners dug in for several days' siege as meteorologists forecast temperatures considerably lower than the twenty-five to thirty degrees that accompanied the snow.

From Southern Georgia west through mid-Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana to Texas snow piled up. In some places it measured an official foot.

Air- motor car and bus, train and water transportation was hampered.

The Dixie snow belt extended into the Carolinas and Virginia, spread over hilly Tennessee. Sub-freezing cold reached far south into the citrus belts of the Florida peninsula and Texas' Rio Grande valley, endangering several millions of dollars worth of fruit.

In the Gulf border regions there was no snow, but cold rain and wind conspired to discomfit warmth-acclimated residents.

Unfamiliar with icy-road driving, Dixie motorists had tough going. They skidded into drifts and stuck. Most had no tire chains. City streets and country highways were dotted with marooned cars.

A coal shortage threatened domestic users in Birmingham, Ala., in the heart of the Alabama coal mining and steel manufacturing area.

Snow and sleet caused maneuvers of 8,500 troops in the army's first division gathered at Fort Benning, Ga., to be held in abeyance. The men, housed in a tent city, huddled as best they could against the cold.

Snow-shrouded ice floes churned in the Mississippi river south of Greenville, Miss.

A Jellico, Tenn., delegation had to forego a projected trip to a conference on promoting tourist travel in Tennessee at Knoxville. The members were snowbound.

Japs Protest British Action

Indignant over Seizure of 21 Germans from Japanese Liner

Tokyo, Jan. 24 (Wednesday) (AP) —Japanese indignation over a British cruiser's seizure of twenty-one Germans from a Japanese liner increased today and Domei, authoritative news agency, reported that ranking naval officials in Tokyo had discussed "measures designed to prevent a recurrence" of the incident.

Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita summoned British Ambassador Sir Robert Craigie to an hour's conference yesterday during which, Domei said, Arita repeated his government's protest against the affair and also a request that Britain refrain from further halting of Japanese ships. At least three other Japanese ships now on the seas are known to be carrying Germans.

(In London a British spokesman said the Japanese protest did not challenge Britain's right to halt and search a Japanese ship but expressed concern over the status of the Germans).

The twenty-one seamen were taken off the Liner Asama Maru Saturday within thirty-five miles of Yokohama.

Navy Minister Admiral Zengo Yoshida met with admirals commanding the Japanese fleets and naval bases. A spokesman declined to discuss their decision other than to say "we are waiting for Britain's reply to the Japanese protest."

Paderewski Says Poland Will Rise From the Ruins

Accepts Election as President of the Polish Parliament-in-Exile

Paris, Jan. 23 (AP)—Weak with the weight of his seventy-nine years but undaunted in spirit, Ignace Jan Paderewski stirred the Polish Parliament-in-exile which elected him its president today to tears in pledging that body to raise Poland "from the ruins."

The slender pianist has not touched a keyboard since Germany invaded Poland.

"I do not know," the white haired musician said as tears streamed down the faces of the delegates in the grand ballroom of the Polish embassy, "if God will let me take part much longer in the work of the national council."

Although he had to be helped to his feet by a secretary, Paderewski's voice gained strength and rose almost to a shout as he cried:

"Poland is immortal. We will deliver her from captivity and will raise her from the ruins. We take this engagement before God!"

The one-time premier of Poland declared the creation of a powerful army was the government's first aim and appealed for unity in internal matters to concentrate on rebuilding Poland.

He gave special thanks to America's Poles "to whose generosity we owe a great part of our power to aid the Polish refugees and population in distress."

With a show of the old time political vigor with which he led Poland's fight for freedom during World war days, Paderewski said he was sure that Polish "governments in the last thirteen years were in a large part responsible for the fate which has stricken Poland."

Apparently the acceptance of the council presidency meant the end of the great pianist's musical career, which earned him millions and the adoration of music lovers all over the world.

Paderewski for the first time in two decades, left his piano at home in Switzerland when he came to Paris.

"I do not want it," he explained. "I have no need for it."

A large portion of the millions he earned—particularly in the United States—has been donated to Poland. He retired as Polish premier in 1919 to devote his remaining years to music.

Finns Claim Russian Army Loses 1,000 Men in Furious Battle Lasting Two Days

By WADE WERNER

Helsinki, Jan. 23 (AP)—Soviet warplanes swarmed over Central Finland anew today, killing nineteen persons and wounding many at the rail center of Nurmes with a single bomb, while the Red army was reported to have lost upwards of 1,000 men in a furious but futile land offensive against unyielding Finnish lines.

The casualties at Nurmes were caused when a Soviet air bomb scored a direct hit on a crowded air raid shelter. Other persons were wounded in subsequent machine-gunning of the population.

The raid on Nurmes, which is on the Northern shore of Lake Pielinen, apparently was aimed at the railroad which runs Northwestward across the country to the Swedish frontier.

In another raid on Hyrynsalmi, 100 miles north of Nurmes, a hospital was reported bombed but there was no immediate report of any casualties.

Many Sections Raided

Unofficial advices said that Hanko, Finland's "Gibraltar of the Baltic," and Tamisaari also were raided. Other Soviet raiders appeared over Helsinki and Rovaniemi, in the Northwest, but were driven off by anti-aircraft guns.

Coupled with official reports of futile Soviet land attacks in the Southeast were unofficial advices which told of additional blows to the Baltic Red fleet, described as a heavy loser in the first eight weeks of the war.

Snow and poor visibility dogged the new Soviet offensive Northeast of Lake Ladoga and on the Karelian Isthmus where the Finns again capitalized on their ability and experience in fighting under difficult winter conditions.

North of Lake Ladoga, the Finnish high command's night communique said the Russians left upyards of 1,000 dead after two days of unsuccessful mass assaults in the vicinity of Kollaanjoki.

One Russian tank was destroyed and two more were put out of commission on the Karelian Isthmus, the communique said, during a violent artillery duel which broke up Soviet reconnaissance patrols.

Six Planes Downed

Six, and possibly nine, Soviet warplanes were reported downed while Finnish aircraft carried out photographic and reconnaissance flights and directed artillery fire against the invaders.

Major attention contered on activity across the Gulf of Finland, where the Russians were rushing ground preparations for further air onslaughts against the Finns from the new Soviet bases in Estonia.

New damage inflicted on the Red fleet was reported by Scandinavian correspondents who said the 23,606 ton Russian battleship Marat was damaged in a Finnish air raid Sunday on the naval base at Kronstadt, near Leningrad.

These dispatches said the 8,500-ton Soviet Cruiser Kiroff, presumably laid up in Kronstadt for repairs previously caused by Finnish shells, was struck again in the same raid.

Additional dispatches, from Lat-

Canada Blocks Export Of Wheat to Russia

Ottawa, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Canadian government tonight forbade the export of wheat and other materials to countries adjacent to Germany except by license, thus blocking delivery of about 1,250,000 bushels bought by Soviet Russia.

The action was taken by order-in-council.

Private sources said the wheat recently purchased for Russian account would be denied a license for export loading.

ictures Federal Security Administrator as "Political Adventurer"

By E. E. EASTERLY

Columbus, O., Jan. 23 (AP)—The nited Mine Workers of America ractically scratched Paul V. Mcutt off its list as a presidential ndidate today.

John L. Lewis, whose opinions e generally law to the 600,000 iners whom he heads, pictured the emocratic Federal Security Adinistrator as a "political adventurer" who hoped to buy the presiency of the United States.

Criticism also was directed toard Vice President John N. Garer, officers of the union asserting e is a leader in the movement for revision of the Wagner Labor Act and for enactment of legislation unfavorable toward labor.

At the Union's Jubilee convention opening Lewis compared McNutt to the ancient kings who, he said, sent out soldiers to protect strikebreakers.

As the audience of more than 5,000 delegates and spectators tittered, the president of the U.M.W. and Congress of Industrial Organizations explained:

"Just like in Indiana a few years back when the governor, whose name was McNutt, sent troops into the coal mine area to protect the strangers who were taking the jobs of mine workers whose children were hungry and whose wives were sick.

"A political adventurer whose name was McNutt, who liked to pretend he was a soldier, who was accompanied by a motley crew of

Protest any Attempt To Compel Companies To Furnish Oil to Germany

Bucharest, Jan. 23 (AP)—Rumania was warned by Great Britain and France today that "grave complications" might follow any attempt to compel British and French oil companies in Rumania to furnish oil for Germany.

Rumania recently created a National Petroleum Commission with sweeping powers over Rumanian oil production, and some foreign circles believed this was in response to German pressure to obtain all the oil possible from Rumania.

The new commission can control production, refining and export of all Rumanian oil "in conformity with the interests of the state," and has authority to take over companies not submitting to its orders.

The envoys of Britain and France were understood to have told the Rumanian government today that while their governments did not dispute Rumania's right to regulate the oil industry, they would not tolerate forced production by British and French owned companies for the benefit of Germany.

At the same time reliable sources reported that two passenger trains from Bucharest to Berlin via Russian Poland would begin service early next month. This resumption, the informants stated, was made possible by Soviet consent to German operations and policing of some 200 miles of rail line through annexed Russian territory.

Adequate Hospital And Medical Care Urged by Pincoffs

Emergency Problem May Be Improved through Proper Cooperation

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP) — Providing adequate hospital and medical care in Maryland's counties is an "emergency problem" that may be improved through proper coordination of present facilities, Dr. Maurice C. Pincoffs, dean of the University of Maryland's Medical School, said today.

Dr. Pincoff's, addressing the State Planning Commission's Committee on medical care, said such coordination would extend benefits to many persons at no increased cost to state or private institutions. He was elected chairman of the thirty-three-member committee, succeeding Abel Wolman.

"Baltimore itself cannot be overly proud of its home care for the indigent, or rather the lack of home care," Dr. Pincoffs declared, "but the rural and semi-rural areas are far, far worse.

"Despite much-heralded advances in the fields of pneumonia, tuberculosis and syphilis, almost every county is startlingly deficient in everyday facilities for handling the great bulk of ailments."

Shortly after his election to the chairmanship of the committee which was appointed by Governor O'Conor at the suggestion of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, Dr. Pincoffs named an Executive committee composed of J. Douglas Colman, Dr. Victor F. Cullen, Dr. Allen W. Freeman, Harry Greenstein, Dr. Winford H. Smith and C. E. Wise, Jr.

Wolman, opening the group's first session, had named "five major deficiencies of medical care in the state:

Lack of facilities for hospital care of negro patients in the counties; lack of funds or organization for home medical care of the indigent; inadequate accomodations for the feeble-minded; inadequate buildings, equipment and budgets of some county hospitals; and lack of facilities for post - graduate education of practicing physicians.

100 Persons Missing From Burned Liner

Genoa, Jan. 23 (AP)—One hundred passengers and crewmen from the burned Italian Liner Orazio still were unreported tonight after two rescue ships disembarked some 500 injured, forlorn survivors of the Mediterranean tragedy.

Two-thirds of those missing were members of the crew, lost when the storm-tossed liner burned Sunday on her way to Barcelona and South America.

The Italian Liners Biancamano and Colombo brought in survivors who totalled 511 in a preliminary check, but officials said they feared a closer count might disclose fewer had been saved. Of the Orazio's 643 passengers and crew, twelve Germans were removed by a French patrol boat before the fire and forty-eight later were taken to Marseille by rescue ships.

Nearly half the survivors suffered from burns or other injuries and many were carried to hospitals.

warships or supply ships within the zone, if the Americas really want those waters respected. The French also demanded effective measures to keep German ships in American ports once they have taken refuge there, and complained of lack of control by the various American governments of "unneutral" activities by radio.

British Losses Increase

Along with formal and informal diplomatic activity, the list of British and neutral ship losses lengthened. The British 1,523-ton Baltangloa and the Norwegian 1,598-ton Pluto sank after striking mines off the English Northeast coast. The recent sinking of the 1,304-ton Swedish Steamer Fozen also was disclosed by British sources.

The Admiralty listed four British and eleven neutral ships as lost last week — a total of nearly 60,000 tons of shipping. It said three German ships were lost: one by scuttling, one by a mine and one by capture.

It was Britain's twenty - second naval loss and the sixth destroyer sunk since the war began.

The other destroyers lost, besides the Grenville, were the Blanche and the Gypsy, sunk by mines; the Jersey, damaged by a torpedo and the Duchess, lost in a collision. The Grenville, like the Exmouth, was said to have been sunk "by mine or torpedo."

Officials did not immediately say when or where the Exmouth was lost.

Norwegian Ship Sinks

London, Jan. 24 (Wednesday) (AP)—The Norwegian steamer Sydfold, 2,433 tons, has been sunk by a mine or torpedo off the Scottish coast, Reuters (British News Agency) said early today.

Five of the crew are missing, but nineteen were rescued by another Norwegian ship.

Charged with Violation of Federal Anti-Trust Laws

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—The International Longshoremen's Association, an AFL union, and Joseph P. Ryan, its president, were indicted today for violation of the Federal anti-trust laws, specifically accused of putting illegal pressure on lumber dealers to coerce their employes into ILA union membership.

The indictment, the broadest of its kind ever returned here against a labor organization, charged a conspiracy to impede interstate commerce. It was the third brought in a continuing investigation into racketeering in the building trades, earlier bills having named sand and gravel companies and maufacturers of lighting fixtures.

The accused conspirators, in addition to Ryan and the ILA itself, are Anthony John Camarda,, ILA vice president; nine officers of union locals and Local Union No. 282 of the Building Material Teamsters.

What the government claimed was this: That the defendants, seeking to coerce workers to leave a CIO local connected with the United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America, prevented lumber retailers from obtaining employes from taking the lumber at the docks; instituted boycotts and issued blacklists of retailers for the purpose of inducing dock employes and trucking companies to refuse to handle the retailer's lumber.

Maximum penalties upon conviction would be imprisonment for one year and a $5,000 fine, the fine alone applying to organizations.

Ryan, a president and bitter enemy of Harry Bridges, the West Coast CIO maritime leader, has been a frequent critic of the National Relations Board and once termed board member Edwin Smith and Secretary of Labor Perkins "the two worst enemies of our organization."

Ryan issued a statement saying "my associates and myself are absolutely innocent of this charge."

$50,000 Fire at Rising Sun

Rising Sun, Md., Jan. 23 (AP)—A $50,000 fire swept a garage in the center of Rising Sun today, endangered houses nearby, and resulted in loss of nearly a score of automobiles stored in the building.

Fire companies from nearby Oxford and Port Deposit aided Rising Sun firemen in confining the blaze to one building. Harry Dinsmore, one of the owners, was slightly burned and a fireman, George Logan, suffered a broken nose.

The fire started after an oil heater exploded in the garage basement.

Firemen and volunteers saved one new automobile by smashing a plate glass display window and carrying the machine out.

month that he would ask between $50,000 and $200,000 to be added to $125,000 already voted. Most of this has been spent.

Those who favored continuation contended that the committee had unearthed many subversive activities, thereby bulwarking national defense and fending off a dictatorship in this country.

Opponents said the committee had accused innocent persons unjustly of being Communists and had stirred fear among the rank and file of Americans.

NLRB Accused of Ignoring Decision Of Supreme Court

Board Official Says Order Did Not Apply To Certain Case

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—Counsel for the House committee investigating the National Labor Relations Board sought to show today that the board had disregarded a Supreme Court decision, but a board official immediately replied that the decision did not apply to the case in question.

The litigation under discussion involved the Mount Vernon, Ill., Car Manufacturing Company, accused by the CIO in May, 1937, of violating the Wagner Labor Relations Act. The Board's decision, termed a compromise, awarded $20,000 in back pay to a group of workers. The decision has been appealed to the courts.

Edmund M. Toland, counsel for the committee, introduced letters in which the CIO complained that the board had abandoned an original decision invalidating an American Federation of Labor contract with the Car Manufacturing Company.

Toland contended that the Supreme Court had ruled in effect, in a case against the Consolidated Edison Company, that the board had no power to invalidate a contract. Abraham Harris, a board supervisor, was called to the witness stand and testified that the Car Company and Consolidated cases were not comparable.

Harris contended that the high court had held that the contract in the Consolidated case was not the result of violation of the Wagner Act. In the Car Company case, he said, the board found that the contract had resulted from a violation.

Solomon Lippman, a board attorney and today's first witness, told Rep. Healey (D-Mass), a committee member, that he possibly had committed some indiscretion in presenting the board's case in litigation involving the Harnishchfeger Corporation at Milwaukee.

He acknowledged that after his superiors had criticized him for inexperience and his conduct of that case, he was transferred to Washington headquarters and given a raise in salary from $2,600 to $3,000.

Factory Employment In State Increases

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP)—Factory employment in Maryland last month was 15.3 per cent higher than December, 1938, and payrolls were up 25.1 per cent as compared with last year, the commissioner of labor and statistics reported today.

The averages of employment and payrolls for the entire year 1939 were well above those of 1938, and "every indication now is that these improved conditions will continue into 1940," the survey stated.

The report, made in cooperation with the U. S. Bureau of Labor statistics, was based on returns made by 628 manufacturing establishments which during last December employed 108,740 persons whose monthly earnings totaled $2,780,999.

Seventeen of the forty-three industries covered by the survey reported December increases in both employment and payrolls, as compared with November; fifteen reported losses in both divisions, six reported a gain in employment but a loss in payrolls.

The average weekly earnings in combined manufacturing industries last month was $25.57.

Compared with November, December employment increased 0.1 per cent and payrolls decreased 0.2 per cent.

Current Economy Drive in Congress Is Given Big Boost

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—A House committee gave the current economy drive a $13,314,300 boost today and brought to $128,143,300 the reductions from administration estimates in appropriations already in the congressional mill.

The Appropriations committee lopped $11,491,900 off the treasury-postoffice supply bill, recommending $1,032,154,612 to finance those two departments for the year starting July 1. At the same time, it slashed $1,822,400 from an urgent deficiency measure for naval armor and tax refunds, holding it to $58,502,600.

The House previously had cut $94,800,000 from an appropriation for the independent government agencies, although it was indicated that much of this money would be expended later. In addition, the combined efforts of the House and the Senate Appropriations committee whittled approximately $20,000,000 from the session's first deficiency bill carrying emergency funds for the army, navy, coast guard and Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The senate today considered this $251,822,588 measure but quit until Thursday in a parliamentary snarl. The chamber previously had upheld its appropriations committee in slicing $4,000,000 off totals the House had approved. It cut $3,000,000 from an army fund of $18,000,000 for field maneuvers and $1,000,000 from army transportation funds.

When the committee's amendment to cut out $200,000 to purchase land in Puerto Rico for an ammunition depot came up, however, Senators Thomas (D-Okla) and Truman (D-Mo) led a fight to restore the expenditure. Democratic Leader Barkley won a delay until Thursday in the decisive vote and said he expected the senate to complete action then.

The House began consideration of the treasury-postoffice measure late in the day but it was not scheduled for passage before Thursday.

Its total was $740,422,915 below the sum the two departments had sought. Rep. Ludlow (D-Ind), in charge of it on the floor, explained that much of the reduction was due to transfer of the social security old age reserve account, the public health service and the procurement division's public buildings branch under the administration's reorganization program.

Among the principal reductions were $3,594,720 slashed from the fund the coast guard requested for its neutrality patrol and $2,500,000 lopped from a $15,000,000 item for the purchase of strategic minerals.

Browder Files Notice of Appeal

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—Earl Browder, the Communist leader under four-year sentence for passport fraud, filed notice of appeal today while his comrades took up the cry that his conviction was brought about by the Roosevelt administration to silence a party that once had supported the New Deal.

The legal proceeding was substantially routine in nature; it contended merely that some of the testimony was inadmissible, that certain rulings from the bench and the court's charge were unfair and that Browder's rights as a citizen had been contravened.

Saturday Is Figured As a Whole Day

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—It's official—Saturday is a whole day in Maryland.

The Board of Public Works decreed today that Saturdays shall be figured as full days in computing vacations and sick leaves for state employes. No standard rule was previously in effect, and the half-day problem caused friction between departments.

Declares

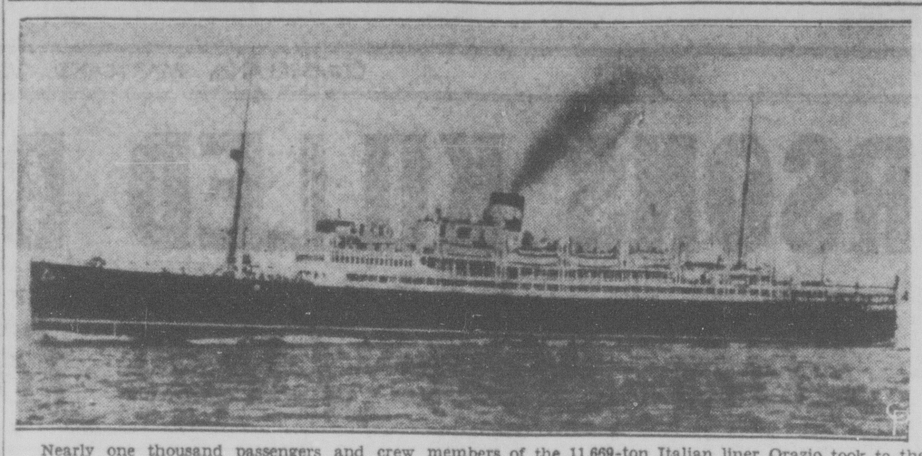
years have made it impossible for "any administration" to balance the budget "overnight," and added that "we are not going to economize at the expense of the unemployed or the aged."

"Just for a moment," Dewey said, "let us look at the New Deal alibi for its unbalanced budget. The alibi is that recovery and relief monies keep the budget unbalanced. But look at the last completed fiscal year. All the money spent on relief, plus the money dissipated in the spending program, together amount to $3,100,000,000. Taking that from the total expense of $9,300,000,000, you still have $6,200,000, left for other expenses of the government.

"Do the same thing to the first New Deal year which ended in 1934 and the other expenses were only $3,600,000,000. Wholly aside from relief and the spending program, that is a net increase of $2,600,000,000. There goes the alibi.

"We can and will again have a government which keeps the faith. We will keep faith with the needs of every man on relief. And in a larger sense, we will keep faith so that he may again recover his American birthright — an opportunity to earn his livelihood in a proper place among his fellow men."

Italian Liner Abandoned in Fire at Sea



Nearly one thousand passengers and crew members of the 11,669-ton Italian liner Orazio took to the lifeboats when flames swept the twelve-year-old ship (above), one day out of Genos, steaming through the Mediterranean toward South America. The victims included many women and children, a number of prominent diplomats and an Italian military mission. Stormy seas handicapped rescue ships picking up the lifeboats.

Future Business Relations between Japan and United States Discussed

Depends upon Japan's Attitude Toward American Rights in China

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP) — The United States sidestepped today a Japanese request for a temporary commercial arrangement and told Japan that future commercial relations would depend upon developments in the Far East.

With the Japanese-American commercial treaty expiring Friday, Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi was told by A. A. Berle, assistant secretary of state, in effect, that a new commercial treaty could be based only on a Japanese change of heart toward China and American rights there.

Berle also informed Horinouchi that after Friday, Japanese merchants doing business here would be regarded as temporary alien visitors subject to the immigration law of 1924. At present they have the status of "treaty merchants" with many rights and privileges.

The ambassador called at the State Department to present three formal questions. He had an appointment to see Secretary Hull, but Hull was at home suffering from a cold.

He asked first whether, after Friday, there would be any change in import duties and tonnage rates. He was told that the expiration of the treaty did not of itself bring about any changes but that the American government had repeatedly made clear that future commercial relations would depend upon developments.

The ambassador also inquired about the possibility of an exchange of notes between the two governments defining the status of their trade relations. He was told that this would have to be held open and presumably would form a part of the discussions which have been taking place in Tokyo between Ambassador Grew and the Japanese Foreign Office. President Roosevelt, asked at his press conference later about this point, replied tersely that he had nothing to say.

The ambassador also sought information as to the status of Japanese merchants in the United States.

He was told that aliens who cease to have the status of "treaty merchants" may qualify as visitors temporarily admitted for business or pleasure.

Horinouchi said that he hoped for a continuance of trade relations after Friday as they existed before then but dodged questions as to whether he had presented any specific project.

He denied recent rumors of a secret treaty between Japan and Great Britain.

SOS Call Says

later in a telephone conversation, Capt. Brown reiterated his story of the radio call for help and declared that he received the call "so clearly that it made me sick to my stomach."

Coast Guardsmen said they knew Capt. Brown, who was listed in the U. S. War Department's official army register as retired due to "disability from wounds received in action."

At the Coswata Coast Guard station of Nantucket, Captain Harold E. Kinnecom said the unidentified vessel might be the fishing schooner Anna C. Perry, which left the island today for Woods' Hole.

Kinnecom said the schooner, anchored off the island for the past two days because of ice in the harbor, departed for Woods' Hole after getting warning of an oncoming storm. She carried a crew of six and was skippered by Tobias Fleming. She had not reached Woods' Hole at the time the SOS call was received.

Other senators said there probably was little that this country could do but protest the British policies.

"I favor a vigorous protest," said Senator Lucas (D-Ill), "but after all what can we do? They are at war and we know what that means. The American public probably is not much aroused by censorship of mails or interference with ships."

Maryland's Credit Higher than U. S.

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—Maryland had a financial reason to throw out its chest today—its credit rated higher in the bond marts than the U. S. Government's.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor was curious after the state had sold $1,370,000 in bonds at a highly advantageous premium. He found federal bonds were selling to yield 1.75 per cent interest, while Maryland borrowed its money at 1.30 per cent.

Crucial Conference Opens in Tsingtao

Shanghai, Jan. 23 (AP)—As former Chinese Premier Wang Ching-Wei opened an oft-postponed crucial conference at Tsingtao today to promote establishment of a Japanese-approved new central government in China, his followers here disclosed that a "gentlemen's agreement" already has been signed for a peace with Japan.

This agreement, they said, was signed by Wang and "unofficial" representatives of the Japanese government with the approval of the Japanese army. It contains twelve points under which Wang, who broke with the Chiang Kai-Shek regime a year ago, would, in the name of China, make peace with Japan and grant her most of the objectives for which she invaded China.

It would give Japan economic dominance over China and sweeping military and political rights in several important special areas.

State Will Build Dormitory for Negro Girls

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—Transfer of $125,000 in state funds to construct a girls' dormitory at Morgan State College for negroes was approved today by the Board of Public Works.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor said an urgent need for the dormitory prompted the action.

The $125,000 was the balance remaining after the purchase of the college by the state. The legislature voted $350,000 to purchase the school to bring the state's higher educational system for negroes up to standard.

The board purchased the school for $225,000.

Albert I. Cassell, nationally known negro architect who has drawn the plans for $14,000,000 worth of federal buildings, as well as some outstanding private work on hospitals, was retained to prepare plans for the new dormitory.

Frozen Seafood To Be Put on Market

Crisfield, Md., Jan. 23 (AP)—Maryland's "seafood capital" soon may expand its industry into a new market field—frozen seafood.

Officials of the Eastern Shore Public Service, announcing plans to build a quick-freezing seafood plant adjacent to the ice and cold storage plant here, said it would open new markets for Crisfield's fish, oysters, crabs and other products.

They said they expected the plant to furnish increased employment here and to make possible wholesale or advance buying.

Suspended Sentence Given John Gone

Camden, N. J., 23. (AP)—A man brought into police court on intoxication charges was asked his name.

"I'm Gone," he said.

The Judge's eyesbrows raised, but the man, rolling up a sleeve, displayed the initials J. G.—which he said stood for John Gone.

He was gone in a few minutes—on a suspended sentence.

Morgenthau Is Coordinator of New Purchases

European War - Orders Must Not Disrupt Defense System

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—A new move to prevent huge European war orders from disturbing the American economic system or the national defense program was disclosed today when the White House announced that Secretary Morgenthau had been named coordinator of all such purchases.

President Roosevelt named Morgenthau chairman of a group to deal with financial and other problems arising from orders which some officials predict will total $1,000,000,000 within a few months for war planes, engines and expansion of aircraft factories alone.

Stephen T. Early, a presidential secretary, said in a statement that aircraft represented only about thirty percent of the purchases. Announcing that the coordinating committee had been at work since December 6, he stressed it was concerned with munitions and supplies of all kinds.

Specially, Early said the committee would look into such questions as whether purchases by Great Britain and France were running up aircraft prices, and the possibility of expanding plants.

Of immediate concern, authoritative sources reported, is the financing problem arising from prospective British and French orders for upwards of 8,000 planes, along with an even larger number of engines.

To fill the orders, engine plants must expand at a cost estimated as high as $250,000,000 and this entails numerous difficulties of exchange rates, sale of foreign-owned securities and taxation.

Secretary Morgenthau will serve as liaison between the committee and the president. Other members are Captain Harry E. Collins, director of the treasury's procurement division, Colonel Edmund B. Gregory, acting quartermaster general of the army, and Rear Admiral Ray Spear, Navy paymaster general.

Morgenthau and General George H. Brett, assistant chief of the air corps, plan to start tomorrow an inspection of industrial plants.

Early said one of the principal objectives of the committee would be to prevent any conflict between foreign orders and orders placed by this government.

with the emergency door, and only two of us were able to get out. The ship was spinning, and there was nothing we could do to stop it.

"I landed in Piegon Pass, near the wreckage. Purvis came down on Blue mountain, some distance away."

Stephenson said the plane nosed into the earth but did not burn.

"A doctor came along and pronounced the four men dead," Stephenson related. "That wasn't necessary though — they were all badly smashed."

March Field authorities said the huge metal ship was returning from war game maneuvers at Monterey, via Sacramento. It was not part of a mass flight of thirty-eight Army bombers from Hamilton Field, near San Francisco, which set out early today for March Field.

Of that group, only one reached March Field. The others flew into a furious snowstorm north of Bakersfield and landed at that city. They were under orders to remain there overnight and return to Hamilton Field tomorrow if weather permitted.

Two other airplane deaths in California also occurred today. The bodies of Paul L. McMullen, fifty-five, and P. Delaware Smith, forty-six, Oakland building management executives, were found near Livermore in Northern California in the wreckage of their private monoplane. They apparently were killed Sunday.

Adequate Hospital And Medical Care Urged by Pincoffs

Emergency Problem May Be Improved through Proper Cooperation

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP) — Providing adequate hospital and medical care in Maryland's counties is an "emergency problem" that may be improved through proper coordination of present facilities, Dr. Maurice C. Pincoffs, dean of the University of Maryland's Medical School, said today.

Dr. Pincoff's, addressing the State Planning Commission's Committee on medical care, said such coordination would extend benefits to many persons at no increased cost to state or private institutions. He was elected chairman of the thirty-three-member committee, succeeding Abel Wolman.

"Baltimore itself cannot be overly proud of its home care for the indigent, or rather the lack of home care," Dr. Pincoffs declared, "but the rural and semi-rural areas are far, far worse.

"Despite much-heralded advances in the fields of pneumonia, tuberculosis and syphilis, almost every county is startlingly deficient in everyday facilities for handling the great bulk of ailments."

Shortly after his election to the chairmanship of the committee which was appointed by Governor O'Conor at the suggestion of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland, Dr. Pincoffs named an Executive committee composed of J. Douglas Colman, Dr. Victor F. Cullen, Dr. Allen W. Freeman, Harry Greenstein, Dr. Winford H. Smith and C. E. Wise, Jr.

Wolman, opening the group's first session, had named "five major deficiencies of medical care in the state:

Lack of facilities for hospital care of negro patients in the counties; lack of funds or organization for home medical care of the indigent; inadequate accomodations for the feeble-minded; inadequate buildings, equipment and budgets of some county hospitals; and lack of facilities for post - graduate education of practicing physicians.

100 Persons Missing From Burned Liner

Genoa, Jan. 23 (AP)—One hundred passengers and crewmen from the burned Italian Liner Orazio still were unreported tonight after two rescue ships disembarked some 500 injured, forlorn survivors of the Mediterranean tragedy.

Two-thirds of those missing were members of the crew, lost when the storm-tossed liner burned Sunday on her way to Barcelona and South America.

The Italian Liners Biancamano and Colombo brought in survivors who totalled 511 in a preliminary check, but officials said they feared a closer count might disclose fewer had been saved. Of the Orazio's 643 passengers and crew, twelve Germans were removed by a French patrol boat before the fire and forty-eight later were taken to Marseille by rescue ships.

Nearly half the survivors suffered from burns or other injuries and many were carried to hospitals.

The French also demanded effective measures to keep German ships in American ports once they have taken refuge there, and complained of lack of control by the various American governments of "unneutral" activities by radio.

British Losses Increase

Along with formal and informal diplomatic activity, the list of British and neutral ship losses lengthened. The British 1,523-ton Baltangloa and the Norwegian 1,598-ton Pluto sank after striking mines off the English Northeast coast. The recent sinking of the 1,304-ton Swedish Steamer Fozen also was disclosed by British sources.

The Admiralty listed four British and eleven neutral ships as lost last week — a total of nearly 60,000 tons of shipping. It said three German ships were lost: one by scuttling, one by a mine and one by capture.

Officials did not immediately say when or where the Exmouth was lost.

Charged with Violation of Federal Anti-Trust Laws

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—The International Longshoremen's Association, an AFL union, and Joseph P. Ryan, its president, were indicted today for violation of the Federal anti-trust laws, specifically accused of putting illegal pressure on lumber dealers to coerce their employes into ILA union membership.

The indictment, the broadest of its kind ever returned here against a labor organization, charged a conspiracy to impede interstate commerce. It was the third brought in a continuing investigation into racketeering in the building trades, earlier bills having named sand and gravel companies and maufacturers of lighting fixtures.

The accused conspirators, in addition to Ryan and the ILA itself, are Anthony John Camarda,, ILA vice president; nine officers of union locals and Local Union No. 282 of the Building Material Teamsters.

What the government claimed was this: That the defendants, seeking to coerce workers to leave a CIO local connected with the United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America, prevented lumber retailers from obtaining employes from taking the lumber at the docks; instituted boycotts and issued blacklists of retailers for the purpose of inducing dock employes and trucking companies to refuse to handle the retailer's lumber.

Maximum penalties upon conviction would be imprisonment for one year and a $5,000 fine, the fine alone applying to organizations.

Ryan, a president and bitter enemy of Harry Bridges, the West Coast CIO maritime leader, has been a frequent critic of the National Relations Board and once termed board member Edwin Smith and Secretary of Labor Perkins "the two worst enemies of our organization."

Ryan issued a statement saying "my associates and myself are absolutely innocent of this charge."

$50,000 Fire at Rising Sun

Rising Sun, Md., Jan. 23 (AP)—A $50,000 fire swept a garage in the center of Rising Sun today, endangered houses nearby, and resulted in loss of nearly a score of automobiles stored in the building.

Fire companies from nearby Oxford and Port Deposit aided Rising Sun firemen in confining the blaze to one building. Harry Dinsmore, one of the owners, was slightly burned and a fireman, George Logan, suffered a broken nose.

The fire started after an oil heater exploded in the garage basement.

Firemen and volunteers saved one new automobile by smashing a plate glass display window and carrying the machine out.

Opponents said the committee had accused innocent persons unjustly of being Communists and had stirred fear among the rank and file of Americans.

NLRB Accused of Ignoring Decision Of Supreme Court

Board Official Says Order Did Not Apply To Certain Case

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—Counsel for the House committee investigating the National Labor Relations Board sought to show today that the board had disregarded a Supreme Court decision, but a board official immediately replied that the decision did not apply to the case in question.

The litigation under discussion involved the Mount Vernon, Ill., Car Manufacturing Company, accused by the CIO in May, 1937, of violating the Wagner Labor Relations Act. The Board's decision, termed a compromise, awarded $20,000 in back pay to a group of workers. The decision has been appealed to the courts.

Edmund M. Toland, counsel for the committee, introduced letters in which the CIO complained that the board had abandoned an original decision invalidating an American Federation of Labor contract with the Car Manufacturing Company.

Toland contended that the Supreme Court had ruled in effect, in a case against the Consolidated Edison Company, that the board had no power to invalidate a contract. Abraham Harris, a board supervisor, was called to the witness stand and testified that the Car Company and Consolidated cases were not comparable.

Harris contended that the high court had held that the contract in the Consolidated case was not the result of violation of the Wagner Act. In the Car Company case, he said, the board found that the contract had resulted from a violation.

Solomon Lippman, a board attorney and today's first witness, told Rep. Healey (D-Mass), a committee member, that he possibly had committed some indiscretion in presenting the board's case in litigation involving the Harnishchfeger Corporation at Milwaukee.

He acknowledged that after his superiors had criticized him for inexperience and his conduct of that case, he was transferred to Washington headquarters and given a raise in salary from $2,600 to $3,000.

Factory Employment In State Increases

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP)—Factory employment in Maryland last month was 15.3 per cent higher than December, 1938, and payrolls were up 25.1 per cent as compared with last year, the commissioner of labor and statistics reported today.

The averages of employment and payrolls for the entire year 1939 were well above those of 1938, and "every indication now is that these improved conditions will continue into 1940," the survey stated.

The report, made in cooperation with the U. S. Bureau of Labor statistics, was based on returns made by 628 manufacturing establishments which during last December employed 108,740 persons whose monthly earnings totaled $2,780,999.

Seventeen of the forty-three industries covered by the survey reported December increases in both employment and payrolls, as compared with November; fifteen reported losses in both divisions, six reported a gain in employment but a loss in payrolls.

The average weekly earnings in combined manufacturing industries last month was $25.57.

Compared with November, December employment increased 0.1 per cent and payrolls decreased 0.2 per cent.

Current Economy Drive in Congress Is Given Big Boost

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—A House committee gave the current economy drive a $13,314,300 boost today and brought to $128,143,300 the reductions from administration estimates in appropriations already in the congressional mill.

The Appropriations committee lopped $11,491,900 off the treasury-postoffice supply bill, recommending $1,032,154,612 to finance those two departments for the year starting July 1. At the same time, it slashed $1,822,400 from an urgent deficiency measure for naval armor and tax refunds, holding it to $58,502,600.

The House previously had cut $94,800,000 from an appropriation for the independent government agencies, although it was indicated that much of this money would be expended later. In addition, the combined efforts of the House and the Senate Appropriations committee whittled approximately $20,000,000 from the session's first deficiency bill carrying emergency funds for the army, navy, coast guard and Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The senate today considered this $251,822,588 measure but quit until Thursday in a parliamentary snarl. The chamber previously had upheld its appropriations committee in slicing $4,000,000 off totals the House had approved. It cut $3,000,000 from an army fund of $18,000,000 for field maneuvers and $1,000,000 from army transportation funds.

When the committee's amendment to cut out $200,000 to purchase land in Puerto Rico for an ammunition depot came up, however, Senators Thomas (D-Okla) and Truman (D-Mo) led a fight to restore the expenditure. Democratic Leader Barkley won a delay until Thursday in the decisive vote and said he expected the senate to complete action then.

The House began consideration of the treasury-postoffice measure late in the day but it was not scheduled for passage before Thursday.

Its total was $740,422,915 below the sum the two departments had sought. Rep. Ludlow (D-Ind), in charge of it on the floor, explained that much of the reduction was due to transfer of the social security old age reserve account, the public health service and the procurement division's public buildings branch under the administration's reorganization program.

Among the principal reductions were $3,594,720 slashed from the fund the coast guard requested for its neutrality patrol and $2,500,000 lopped from a $15,000,000 item for the purchase of strategic minerals.

Browder Files Notice of Appeal

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—Earl Browder, the Communist leader under four-year sentence for passport fraud, filed notice of appeal today while his comrades took up the cry that his conviction was brought about by the Roosevelt administration to silence a party that once had supported the New Deal.

The legal proceeding was substantially routine in nature; it contended merely that some of the testimony was inadmissible, that certain rulings from the bench and the court's charge were unfair and that Browder's rights as a citizen had been contravened.

Saturday Is Figured As a Whole Day

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—It's official—Saturday is a whole day in Maryland.

The Board of Public Works decreed today that Saturdays shall be figured as full days in computing vacations and sick leaves for state employes. No standard rule was previously in effect, and the half-day problem caused friction between departments.

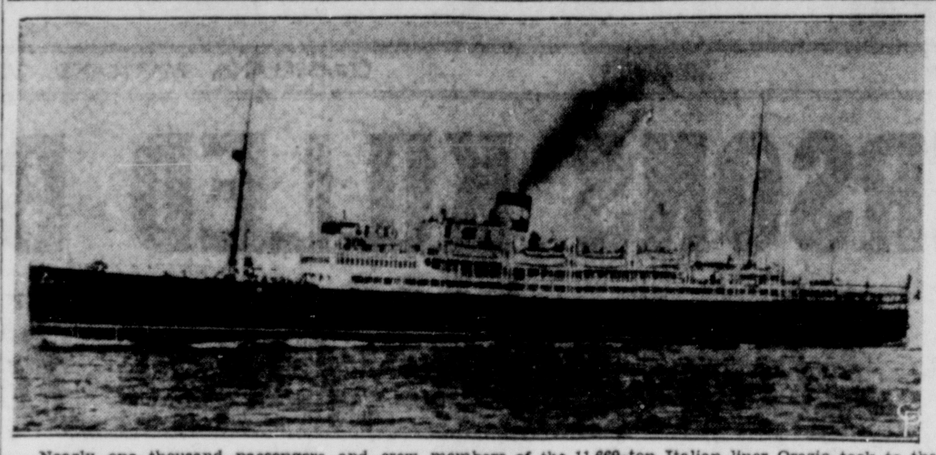
years have made it impossible for "any administration" to balance the budget "overnight," and added that "we are not going to economize at the expense of the unemployed or the aged."

"Just for a moment," Dewey said, "let us look at the New Deal alibi for its unbalanced budget. The alibi is that recovery and relief monies keep the budget unbalanced. But look at the last completed fiscal year. All the money spent on relief, plus the money dissipated in the spending program, together amount to $3,100,000,000. Taking that from the total expense of $9,300,000,000, you still have $6,200,000, left for other expenses of the government.

"Do the same thing to the first New Deal year which ended in 1934 and the other expenses were only $3,600,000,000. Wholly aside from relief and the spending program, that is a net increase of $2,600,000,000. There goes the alibi.

"We can and will again have a government which keeps the faith. We will keep faith with the needs of every man on relief. And in a larger sense, we will keep faith so that he may again recover his American birthright — an opportunity to earn his livelihood in a proper place among his fellow men."

Italian Liner Abandoned in Fire at Sea



Nearly one thousand passengers and crew members of the 11,669-ton Italian liner Orazio took to the lifeboats when flames swept the twelve-year-old ship (above), one day out of Genoa, steaming through the Mediterranean toward South America. The victims included many women and children, a number of prominent diplomats and an Italian military mission. Stormy seas handicapped rescue ships picking up the lifeboats.

Future Business Relations between Japan and United States Discussed

Depends upon Japan's Attitude Toward American Rights in China

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP) — The United States sidestepped today a Japanese request for a temporary commercial arrangement and told Japan that future commercial relations would depend upon developments in the Far East.

With the Japanese-American commercial treaty expiring Friday, Ambassador Kensuke Horinouchi was told by A. A. Berle, assistant secretary of state, in effect, that a new commercial treaty could be based only on a Japanese change of heart toward China and American rights there.

Berle also informed Horinouchi that after Friday, Japanese merchants doing business here would be regarded as temporary alien visitors subject to the immigration law of 1924. At present they have the status of "treaty merchants" with many rights and privileges.

The ambassador called at the State Department to present three formal questions. He had an appointment to see Secretary Hull, but Hull was at home suffering from a cold.

He asked first whether, after Friday, there would be any change in import duties and tonnage rates. He was told that the expiration of the treaty did not of itself bring about any changes but that the American government had repeatedly made clear that future commercial relations would depend upon developments.

The ambassador also inquired about the possibility of an exchange of notes between the two governments defining the status of their trade relations. He was told that this would have to be held open and presumably would form a part of the discussions which have been taking place in Tokyo between Ambassador Grew and the Japanese Foreign Office. President Roosevelt, asked at his press conference later about this point, replied tersely that he had nothing to say.

The ambassador also sought information as to the status of Japanese merchants in the United States.

He was told that aliens who cease to have the status of "treaty merchants" may qualify as visitors temporarily admitted for business or pleasure.

Horinouchi said that he hoped for a continuance of trade relations after Friday as they existed before then but dodged questions as to whether he had presented any specific project.

He denied recent rumors of a secret treaty between Japan and Great Britain.

SOS Call Says

later in a telephone conversation, Capt. Brown reiterated his story of the radio call for help and declared that he received the call "so clearly that it made me sick to my stomach."

Coast Guardsmen said they knew Capt. Brown, who was listed in the U. S. War Department's official army register as retired due to "disability from wounds received in action."

At the Coswata Coast Guard station of Nantucket, Captain Harold E. Kinnecom said the unidentified vessel might be the fishing schooner Anna C. Perry, which left the island today for Woods' Hole.

Kinnecom said the schooner, anchored off the island for the past two days because of ice in the harbor, departed for Woods' Hole after getting warning of an oncoming storm. She carried a crew of six and was skippered by Tobias Fleming. She had not reached Woods' Hole at the time the SOS call was received.

Other senators said there probably was little that this country could do but protest the British policies.

Maryland's Credit Higher than U. S.

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—Maryland had a financial reason to throw out its chest today—its credit rated higher in the bond marts than the U. S. Government's.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor was curious after the state had sold $1,370,000 in bonds at a highly advantageous premium. He found federal bonds were selling to yield 1.75 per cent interest, while Maryland borrowed its money at 1.30 per cent.

Crucial Conference Opens in Tsingtao

Shanghai, Jan. 23 (AP)—As former Chinese Premier Wang Ching-Wei opened an oft-postponed crucial conference at Tsingtao today to promote establishment of a Japanese-approved new central government in China, his followers here disclosed that a "gentlemen's agreement" already has been signed for a peace with Japan.

This agreement, they said, was signed by Wang and "unofficial" representatives of the Japanese government with the approval of the Japanese army. It contains twelve points under which Wang, who broke with the Chiang Kai-Shek regime a year ago, would, in the name of China, make peace with Japan and grant her most of the objectives for which she invaded China.

It would give Japan economic dominance over China and sweeping military and political rights in several important special areas.

State Will Build Dormitory for Negro Girls

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—Transfer of $125,000 in state funds to construct a girls' dormitory at Morgan State College for negroes was approved today by the Board of Public Works.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor said an urgent need for the dormitory prompted the action.

The $125,000 was the balance remaining after the purchase of the college by the state. The legislature voted $350,000 to purchase the school to bring the state's higher educational system for negroes up to standard.

The board purchased the school for $225,000.

Albert I. Cassell, nationally known negro architect who has drawn the plans for $14,000,000 worth of federal buildings, as well as some outstanding private work on hospitals, was retained to prepare plans for the new dormitory.

Frozen Seafood To Be Put on Market

Crisfield, Md., Jan. 23 (AP)—Maryland's "seafood capital" soon may expand its industry into a new market field—frozen seafood.

Officials of the Eastern Shore Public Service, announcing plans to build a quick-freezing seafood plant adjacent to the ice and cold storage plant here, said it would open new markets for Crisfield's fish, oysters, crabs and other products.

They said they expected the plant to furnish increased employment here and to make possible wholesale or advance buying.

European War-Orders Must Not Disrupt Defense System

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP)—A new move to prevent huge European war orders from disturbing the American economic system or the national defense program was disclosed today when the White House announced that Secretary Morgenthau had been named coordinator of all such purchases.

President Roosevelt named Morgenthau chairman of a group to deal with financial and other problems arising from orders which some officials predict will total $1,000,000,000 within a few months for war planes, engines and expansion of aircraft factories alone.

Stephen T. Early, a presidential secretary, said in a statement that aircraft represented only about thirty percent of the purchases. Announcing that the coordinating committee had been at work since December 6, he stressed it was concerned with munitions and supplies of all kinds.

Specially, Early said the committee would look into such questions as whether purchases by Great Britain and France were running up aircraft prices, and the possibility of expanding plants.

Of immediate concern, authoritative sources reported, is the financing problem arising from prospective British and French orders for upwards of 8,000 planes, along with an even larger number of engines.

To fill the orders, engine plants must expand at a cost estimated as high as $250,000,000 and this entails numerous difficulties of exchange rates, sale of foreign-owned securities and taxation.

Secretary Morgenthau will serve as liaison between the committee and the president. Other members are Captain Harry E. Collins, director of the treasury's procurement division, Colonel Edmund B. Gregory, acting quartermaster general of the army, and Rear Admiral Ray Spear, Navy paymaster general.

Morgenthau and General George H. Brett, assistant chief of the air corps, plan to start tomorrow an inspection of industrial plants.

Early said one of the principal objectives of the committee would be to prevent any conflict between foreign orders and orders placed by this government.

Emphasizing that there immediate danger, U. S Engineers nevertheless descri formations as the most seriou the winter of 1917-18 when dreds of river craft were and sunk.

An island of ice extended miles from above the Ga dam to Long Bottom, O., a other, three to four feet abo water level, was piled thirty miles from Utica to Vevay, was here, engineers said, th patrols found evidence tha stream was digging new pa ways.

Tributaries Are Frozen

As an all-day snow swept th the central valley, the rive one-half to two-thirds full from Catlettsburg, Ky., to mouth, O., and three-quarte from there to Dam 32, near burg, Ky.

All tributaries were fro their mouths except the Ke which enters the Ohio at Carr Ky., fifty-five miles west o cinnati.

The Ohio was below pool along virtually its entire 9 length.

At Beckley, W. Va., re faced what Mayor A. K. described as the "worst water age in thirty-five years" be of general drought and weather that reduced normal plies to thirty-five per cent.

The combination of free-flo gorge-ice caused the river cede above Cincinnati and perceptibly behind the lower barriers. The upper stream averaged one and five-tenths in twenty-four hours ending today, while engineers repor rise of two and five-tenths near Vevay.

Contrast Is Shown

The whole picture was in contrast to that of three yea when, on the eve of "Black Su —the city's most serious ene with flood and fire—the river ped seventy-two feet.

The historic gorge of 1917-18 ice thirty to sixty feet high th this stretch of river. It held more than a month until 10 a. m. on Jan. 30, a light like crack flashed across-stre the accompaniment of a roar for miles.

The packet City of Lou largest on the Ohio, was cr like an egg-shell at her w her sistership, the City of C nati, sank with a hole stove i hull and smaller craft went by the dozen.

Majesty of the Law Can't Stand Dirt

Denver, (AP) — Denver's police court, housed in a dingy room at police headquarters, soon will move to a new building.

"It's hard to impress people with the majesty of the law when a court is housed in a building as dirty as this one," said Police Judge Philip Gilliam. "It is difficult for people to respect the law when there are crowds of them talking, milling around and shoving. It gives them an idea justice is meted out like a canceling-machine- cancels stamps."

It's an Ill Wind

Big Moments in Little Lives

SHOWS OFF

When Gertrude Frederica Epstein was born, her mother was fatally ill of infantile paralysis. Nevertheless, Gertrude has thrived, at three months weighs 10½ pounds. Here she smiles at the world from a Chicago day nursery.

STAYS IN U. S.

Holding that deportation to Poland would be inhuman, a U. S. court in Chicago allowed the Boraca family, accused of entering illegally, to stay in the U. S. Tickled, son Arthur, 8, is shown with his mother after the decision.

SEES MAYOR

Agnes Connolly, 6, spent a week practising this curtsy; then performed it before Mayor LaGuardia in New York's city hall. Agnes gave Hizzoner tickets to a benefit opera performance.

May Get Around to It Any Day Now

Helena, Mont. (AP) — It may be that sometime the state board of examiners will take action on a petition requesting the appointment of a chaperon to assure "wholesome environment" at the state-house because of the young people employed there.

"We feel such an appointment. . . will give the state recognition in supplying a wholesome environment wherever young women are employed in its service," said the petition.

A clerk found the petition in old records recently. There was no evidence any action ever had been taken concerning it. The document was presented by a club for women in 1914.

Death Toll Rising

Sacramento, Calif. (AP)—California received the unwelcome news from its motor vehicle statistical bureau that the state leads all others in deaths from auomobile accidents, and that based on records of the first ten months of 1939 the accident toll is growing.

The Ghost's Revenge-- Or the Cops' Dilemma

Hopkinsville, Ky., (AP)—Hopkinsville police believe their patrol car is marked.

Four times in three years and twice since August, a driverless automobile has slid down the Main street hill and whammed into the patrol. The police car, in each case, was parked in front of headquarters.

Although, at each time, other automobiles were parked nearby, the patrol car was the only one hit by the driverless car.

Gas Gets the Air

Sacramento, Calif. (AP) — Enough natural gas is being wasted in the western Montebello field to supply two-thirds of the residents of Los Angeles, the Division of Oil and Gas has reported to Richard Sasche, Director of Natural Resources. The state has a suit pending designed to curtail the alleged waste.

Even the Postman Encounters Danger

Somerset, Ky., (AP) — Postman Claude Dye frequently has had differences with vicious dogs, but he met a new problem when a pet game rooster, feathers bristled for action, greeted him on the steps of a Somerset home.

The postman succeeded in placing the mail in the box at the home — after suffering two spur wounds on his right leg.

Closing a Letter

If you want to close a friendly letter and do not know how to do it, say, "Now I must close as many duties call," and end, "Yours sincerely."

Typing Is Better

It always is better to type a business letter, if possible, than to write it in long hand, even when you are writing it at home.

Elementary Justice

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE of the United States Senate is once more considering the Logan bill, which would give a right of appeal to the courts from all the multiplied administrative agencies which now harrass the citizen at every turn.

The courts, for example, have no right to go behind the returns on a statement of facts as drawn up by the National Labor Relations Board, if those facts, to quote the Wagner Act literally, are supported by "evidence."

This was an outrageous restriction from every point of view. The courts themselves interpreted the statute to mean that "evidence" meant "substantial evidence," which is a help, of course.

It remains that when a circuit court of appeals gets one of these "cease and desist" orders from the board for review the employer is practically at the mercy of a lot of trial examiners and partisan agents of every kind, who have been utterly indifferent to the facts.

The National Labor Relations Board is but one of fifty-two administrative agencies whose "rules and regulations" are the law, so far as the poor devil caught in their legalistic toils is concerned.

The American Bar Association has made an extensive study of these agencies and has recommended a larger measure of court review. It was the president of this association who said that as matters stand today no lawyer could ever advise his client as to what is the law. It changes from day to day; it is more uncertain than the measure equity, which was varied with the size of the chancellor's foot.

The Logan bill passed the Senate at the last session, but it goes without saying that the New Deal conspirators who are trying to drive the country into state socialism do not like it. They want the arbitrary rule of administrative agencies, packed and controlled by the administration.

Under this pressure the bill was reconsidered after it passed the Senate last year and the New Deal is fighting it as strongly as ever.

But those who support it and those who hope for some kind of elementary justice are still hopeful that it will pass both branches of Congress and become the law.

Borah Career Lesson

FURTHER TRIBUTES to Senator Borah are given in the Sullivan and Johnson letters elsewhere on this page today. They are well deserved.

There is in addition a lesson for everybody, more particularly the politicians, in all that has been said and is being said about the career and the personality of the late senator. When he lay stricken and after he had passed away, the news dispatches recorded that among the many who manifested solicitude over his condition and who expressed sorrow over his passing were included his political opponents as well as his friends and supporters. That was because Borah was held in universal esteem.

And why was that? It was partly because of his great personality and his able mentality, but chiefly it was because of his rugged intellectual honesty. In many ways Borah was an uncertain quantity politically. Sometimes he was on one side of the fence and sometimes on the other side. But everybody knew and appreciated the fact that he placed himself there by reason of his earnest convictions, his independence of thought, his unswerving regard for the general welfare, which he kept above all considerations of party pelf and self consideration. There were times when friends believed he was on the wrong track, but they nevertheless respected his purpose because they knew the man was conscientious.

There are, as one of the columnists says, too few men of this type in the country today and the country needs a good quota of the type. How a man who yields to paltry vote considerations and to pressure groups can believe that conserves his political future when it has so often been demonstrated that support is won and strongly held by representatives of the people who vote and act for what they regard as right and in disregard of personal considerations, is one of the most puzzling mysteries of the day. But herein is detected the difference between a mere politician and a statesman.

Ringing the Bell

THOMAS E. DEWEY, presidential aspirant, again rings the bell in his speech at a mass meeting of three state-wide Republican clubs of Massachusetts at Boston. He stresses the bald fact that the federal budget can—and must—be balanced to check a bureaucracy run wild, and points unerringly to the first duty of the national administration that will succeed the New Deal next January.

The keynote of budget balancing is given in the declaration that it "can be brought down to a reasonable figure." That is the stark naked truth.

The principal way in which it can be done has long been obvious, but Dewey emphasizes the cardinal requirement that in this industrial society of ours, jobs are made by providing plant and equipment with which men can make goods; that this is an economic essential and that neither budget balancing nor reasonable prosperity can be achieved until that is brought about.

The pudding proof is supplied. "Contrast the situation today with the decade of the 1920's," Dewey cites. "From 1920 to 1929 the federal debt was cut eight billion dollars while thirty-seven billion dollars of private capital was raised and invested. In the 1930's government debt went up twenty-four billion dollars and less than eleven billion dollars of private capital was raised.

"In the 1920's four and a half dollars of private capital was put to work for each dollar of reduction in the national debt. In the 1930's only forty-five cents of private capital was invested for every dollar of increase in the national debt. The flow of private capital has been choked while government has been spending huge sums of money. Thus in its first responsibility to the men and women seeking a livelihood, the New Deal has utterly and completely collapsed."

There, indeed, is the need of this nation today. It must, as Dewey says, "again release the energy of private enterprise to transform unemployment into employment, relief into jobs," and it is in that manner that the government can balance its budget.

Its Own Laws

WHEN the baseball world became "wise" to the benefits of publicity and of keymen well and favorably known to the public, it hired a judge named Kenesaw Mountain Landis to be the dictator of the business. It may have been in the minds of some of the baseball magnates that Landis would be a mere figurehead, one who might add face to the industry. But Landis has fooled them. He insists on taking seriously the bossing job for which he was hired.

His name has figured prominently in the news for several years, especially when he rapped the knuckles of certain baseball heroes when they were bad boys. Now he makes the headlines again as he tosses what one sports writer calls a $500,000 penalty bombshell into the camps of the organized sport.

"Notice is hereby given all clubs, club officials and employes," says Landis, "that the evils of common control of player dealings of two clubs in the same league, and perversion of working agreements for the wholesale covering up of players, must cease; and, that all club officials and employes found to be involved in any such misconduct after this date will be placed on the ineligible list, maximum fines will be imposed on each club concerned and all players mishandled therein will be declared free agents."

This ruling has been declared to be the severest in the history of Landis. Here he again opposes the covering-up system in major-minor league deals. But all he asks here is that baseball shall live up to its own laws. So simple it is for a man to be a czar.

Handspring Artist

ROBERT H. JACKSON, attorney general-designate—who thumped the tub so vigarously for a third term for the president the other evening—certainly is a handspring artist in his reasoning.

Jackson spent considerable time that evening proving—to himself at least—that the Republicans wanted to hold their nominating convention after the Democrats had held theirs because they were "afraid" to nominate a candidate and write a platform before they knew what their opponents were going to do. In fact, Jackson gave heavy implication that he thought it mean and unsportsmanlike of the Republicans to act that way.

A few minutes later in the same speech, however, Jackson changed his tune. He spent much time proving just the opposite where his boss, the president was involved. (You must not forget that if the president could be re-elected, Jackson is another of those who would keep his job—and might disappear from sight if Mr. Roosevelt stepped down.)

He shouted to the rafters that anyone who criticized the president for not making his third term plans known as a fool. Why, said he, should the president show his hand to all his enemies?

You know, we're beginning to think that the best way to figure out these New Dealers is to take anything they say, turn it completely around, and thus anticipate what they'll be saying next week.

In Jackson's case the reversal took less than five minutes.

If a United States of Europe ever comes into being, will the citizens refer to it affectionately as "Uncle Mars"?

Ever Hear of Mr. Coppersmith

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Here are three paragraphs that were printed in a newspaper three-quarters of a century ago.

I think I'll cut them out of the paper and carry them as a charm against narrow-mindedness. . . . They might save me, some day, from a great embarrassment. . . . Please read:

Marshall Maslin

"A man about 46 years of age, giving the name of Joshua Coppersmith, has been arrested in New York for attempting to extort funds from ignorant and superstitious people by exhibiting a device which he says will convey the human voice any distance over metallic wires so that it will be heard by the listener at the other end.

"He calls the instrument a 'telephone,' which is obviously intended to imitate the word 'telegraph,' and win the confidence of those who know of the success of the latter instrument without understanding the principles on which it is based. Well-informed people know that it is impossible to transmit the human voice over wires as may be done with dots and dashes and signals of the Morse code, and that, were it possible to do so, the thing would be of no practical value.

"The authorities who apprehended this criminal are to be congratulated, and it is to be hoped that his punishment will be prompt and fitting, that it may serve as an example to other conscienceless schemers not to enrich themselves at the expense of their fellow creatures."

If I carry that quotation around with me and read it occasionally, it may have two effects—one good and one bad. If I confuse myself with Joshua Coppersmith, who had a sound idea ahead of time, I'll be thinking that all my ideas are as good as his and that I'm being very badly treated. . . . If I put myself in the place of the man who wrote those scoffing paragraphs, I may lean over backwards and believe a lot of things that aren't so. But my conscience will be clear and I'll be carrying a rabbit's foot against a kind of intolerance that has been a brake on human progress

The Elephant As A Glamour Girl

By EDWIN C. HILL

Edwin C. Hill

The Republican Club of the Fifteenth Assembly district in this city of New York will give a ball at the Waldorf - Astoria in New York on the fifth of February, and the most imposing guest will be an elephant named Minnie. The ladies of this Silk Stocking district have selected Minnie as the glamour girl of 1940, and why not? Elephants are fascinating playmates.

I once knew a lady elephant of excellent disposition and, so far as I know, impeccable morals. Her name was Alice and she worked in the Hippodrome for her board and keep along with a clown named Marceline, and a dark-eyed soprano named Rose La Harte. The main job of the press agent of the big showhouse was to get the dary-eyed lady into the newspapers. So he telephoned me down at my newspaper one winter's day much like this:

"Sir," said he, "if you will trouble to gaze from a window of your family newspaper and printing house you will observe that Nature, always wonderful, has just laid down a nice soft carpet of six inches of snow. I have arranged for you to go sleigh riding with Miss La Harte in a sleigh drawn by our celebrated lady elephant, Alice. Hasten before the snow melts. My lord, the carriage waits."

They Were There

And so it did, for a fact. There at the Hippodrome was the lady and the sleigh and two-ton Alice, ten feet tall, harnessed to the sleigh. And away we went, bells jingling.

"Where," I asked, "shall we drive?"

"To Tiffany's," said the dark-eyed lady. "I must leave a bracelet."

So to Tiffany's it was. The next hour was certainly one of the liveliest of a career which could scarcely be described as dull. As our snow-chariot, tranquilly drawn by the huge beast, turned from Sixth into Fifth avenue, horses reached for the sky with their forelegs. Traffic went into inextricable tangles. Red-faced policemen shrilled their whistles and phoned for the reserves. Mr. Tiffany's clerks, gazing pop-eyed through the plate-glass windows upon a spectacle for which a lifetime of toil and probity had insufficiently prepared them, turned quite pale. Mr. Tiffany himself emerged from his private sanctum, carrying as I recall, a diamond tiara in one hand and a six-shooter in the other.

So we continued onward to Thirty-fourth Street and westward to Broadway and Macy's. And there we pulled up in front of the entrance while the brigadier generals and [illegible] marshals who guarded the doors bleated like sheep and ran to an fro. But this time the police department had massed its might against us. The peace of the town was being shattered by our innocent excursion with Rose the soprano and Alice the elephant. But, as I say, elephants are fascinating playmates if you have a place to keep them.

Roman Glamour Girl

Speaking of glamour girls, as they call them nowadays, archaeologists in the Eternal City have uncovered the Roman home of one of the great glamour girls of all times. Workmen grading the banks of the Tiber river uncovered elaborate frescoes and mosaics, marble fragments and whole rooms which must have been most magnificent. The frescoes revealed that the palace of Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, was situated in the garden of Caius Julius Ceasar, about a mile outside the walls of ancient Rome.

Continually this red-haired, blue-eyed, milk-skinned siren appears and reappears in the news of the day more than ten thousand years after she quit the world. Not very long ago the historian Carcopino asserted that Ceasar never was bewitched by the Lady of the Nile and that their association was actually platonic and political. The discovery of her Roman palace in the gardens of Ceasar's country-place would hardly support Signor Carcopino's contention, one would think.

Takes More Authority

At all events, it will take more authority than can be brought to bear by an elderly historian scribbling in an untidy study to strip the glamour from the Lady of the Nile, or destroy the picture of the sixteen-year-old girl-queen perched in a niche of the Sphinx awaiting in the perfect moonlight of an Egyptian night for the coming of the Roman conqueror, or appearing from a roll of priceless rugs to kneel at Ceasar's feet and complete the subjugation of the master of the world. — Cpyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BORAH SUCCESSOR!

John Thomas

Uncle Sam As A Landlord

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Some days ago, in commenting on the proposed extension of the scope of the Federal Home Loan Bank act, this newspaper expressed the opinion that if the American people realized how much private property the government has taken over, and how many millions of public dollars were endangered in questionable loans, there would be a nation-wide demand for a change of policy.

The matter of federal land holdings now is beginning to bother Congress. Some months ago, the question of how much property the government holds, and under what conditions, was raised. Nobody had the slightest idea. So the president created a real estate board to find out. This board has made no report, and Senator O'Mahoney is pressing for an immediate action in order that Congress may act at this session. That the report will be made is extremely unlikely. The board hasn't met for three months, and evidently has no more than scratched the surface of its assignment.

That the federal holdings are vast and expanding rapidly, is well known. Aside from the land and buildings actually employed in the public service, there is such property as involved in the TVA and other enterprises; the sub-marginal lands acquired by the Farm Security Administration; land bought up for game preserves and reforestation; the thousands of farms and homes taken over by the government on foreclosure.

These holdings constitute not only a tax problem for the various states involved, but the much more serious problem of widespread public ownership. It is to be hoped members of Congress keep pressing for action by the real estate board. When the facts are assembled they will be so shocking we predict, as to startle the nation.

On the Record

By United States Senator William H. King, Democrat, of Utah

The loans which we are making under what I regret to term the improvident policies of the Department of Agriculture will aggregate hundreds of millions of dollars, which will add to the debts of the United States and increase the burden of taxation upon the American people.

THE SPECIAL OCCASION HAIR SHIRT

Borah Grounded on the Constitution By Experience in Western Transition

BY MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Jan. 23.—Senator Borah is on his way back to Idaho.

Mark Sullivan

Of the scores of stories he told me, one time or another, the most vivid was his account of his first journey over the same path, thirty years ago. It was charming when Borah told it; today it takes on poignance. Between that lone anabasis of an aspiring youth, and the present journey in ceremonial state, lies just half a century of Borah's life and America's history. But the distance in time fails to measure the contrast between the America of an older day and the America of 1940.

Young Borah had got his education, and a law diploma, in Illinois and Kansas. Looking about for opportunity, he turned to what was, in that day, a main highway for ambition, expressed in the phrase then universally familiar, "Go West" That phrase, in its early implication of enterprise and high adventure, has long passed for the American tongue. The most recent general use of the words had a somber cannotation—during the Great War, "Go West" was a euphemism for death in battle.

A Friendly Salesman

Young Borah, on his westward quest, took a Union Pacific train at Omaha. The first night out, his seat-mate was a salesman for a farm implement firm. Between naps on the old-time reclining chairs, the older man learned the youth's as yet undetermined goal—a good place to practice law and grow up with the country. The salesman, familiar with the West, was interested and friendly. He produced a map which the two pored over with groping fingers. The salesman was strong for either Seattle or Tacoma. Those two towns, then in the early boom stage, and of roughly equal size, were eager contenders for what was confidently expected to be, and proudly predicted by rival newspapers as "Queen City of the Pacific Coast."

The second night out, Borah's seat-mate was a man from a little town called Nampa, in what was then the territory of Idaho. He advised Borah, before going on to the coast, to drop off and take a look at Boise. Idaho, the adviser thought, would soon be made a state, and Boise would probably be its capital. It might be a good place for a young man to rise in law and politics. If Borah decided to settle there, he should drop a postal card to the Nampa man and let him know; the Nampa might be able to send him some business.

Hopeless Quest

Borah, stopping off at Boise, knocked at the door of every law office in the town, asking for a job. He found no job. But in the amiable way of a small new community, he could have desk-room free in any office he chose. By that time, Borah's money was not enough to carry him on to the Coast.

Presently he got his first case—it was sent him by his Nampa friend. As I recall Borah's story, a Chinaman had been murdered; and in the ensuing legal processes a novel and technical jam had arisen, too complex for the frontier justice of the peace to solve. The statute of the United States, which decreed that a Chinaman could not be a citizen, was then relatively new, its implications not yet worked out in legal precedents. Nampa sophists of the law set up a plea that since a Chinaman could not be a citizen, therefore he could not be a corporeal entity, within the meaning of the common law. Consequently the dead body of a Chinaman could not be a "corpus delicti". Ergo, since there was no "missing body," within the meaning of the Latin legalism, there could not have been a murder. The killing of the Chinaman, if any crime at all, must be something short of that which calls for hanging of the aggressor. The theory offended frontier commonsense. Borah was called on to explain a juster and more practicable application of ancient laws to new conditions.

Symbolic of Career

Borah told the story with humor. But in the faint way it was symbolic of his career, and his public service.

The late Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, declared to me once that the three best constitutional lawyers in the United States were Senator Borah, Justice Sutherland of the supreme court, and—Walsh added with a smile—himself. He gave the reason. All three had began their practice of law in small frontier communities, still territories, not yet organized as states—in the period when those communities were in the transition stage between informal law by vigilance committees, and formal law by judges, courts, and legislatures. The people, while unfamiliar with law and lawyers, indeed a little suspicious of them, were rich in common sense, strong in individual judgment, had a well-defined standard of right and wrong.

Maxim Not Enough

To such a community, it was not enough for a lawyer to emit a Latin legal maxim and expect to be respected; nor belch the word "Constitution" and expect the people to genuflect. The lawyer must explain just why the law was what it is; must show it conformed to the common sense of the community. To do that, the lawyer had not merely to know the law and the constitution, but understand it, know the why of it. Had to understand the evolution of law and government, from its beginnings in the ancient folk-ways of the people. He had to know that law and the constitution, and government, is the written and codified expression of the instinctive point-of-view of average men, tested and sustained over centuries.

Borah, Sutherland and Walsh accompanied their communities, piloted their communities, from the stage of informal posse to formal courts. Into one lifetime they and the communities they guided compressed the long experience of English-speaking peoples from Magna Charta to the present day. That gave Borah his special understanding of the constitution, his regard for it, his apprehension of careless change of it by persons who only knew it as something printed in a book.

Country Needs Men Like Borah

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

Washington, D. C.—This country as never before, needs men like Senator Borah. You can count his like on the fingers of one hand.

He and I have had disagreements. He was a great disagreer. You couldn't have a whole Senate of Borahs and still have either party organization or much cohesion in the Senate itself. Out motoring, Calvin Coolidge once saw the senator riding in Rock Creek Park. "He must be very happy," Cal remarked after a few minutes rumination, "he and his horse are going in the same direction."

Quota Is Needed

But we need a quota of such men. It is the antidote for personal power. Like Thomas Jefferson, he had sworn eternal hostility to any form of domination over the mind of man. He voted and spoke as he thought and believed. And he always thought and believed sincerely. With this controlling principle guiding him, he paid little attention to party policy, Presidential prestige or popular reaction, if any of these influences interfered with what he thought was right.

Alone with such a few veterans as Carter Glass, he simply disdained play in the pork-barrel game of political patronage. He was so strongly entrenched in the confidence will and confidence of the people of his state that there was no necessity to do that. Even if there had been any necessity, he would not have done it.

Friend and Model

My disagreements with him were official but they never made any difference in our personal relations which were always kindly. I always looked up to him as a model when I was very young and, in later years, regarded him so deeply as a friend that his going wrenches me personally as severely as though he were an elder member of my own family.

As a citizen, quite apart from this poignant personal grief I lament the passage of a public figure among "some we loved, the loveliest and best from his vintage, which time hath pressed."

Gentle but Alert

In private life he was as gentle as a woman. In debate he could, and sometimes did wield either a rapier or a cudgel. The galleries loved it when he spoke on any subject. But he was alert to the last.

In testifying on the Neutrality act before the Senate Foreign Relations committee, of which I was one, he and Senator Hiram Johnson were members, I recalled to Senator Borah how both he and Hiram had gone to the country in the League of Nations issue and defeated it. Both their own speeches almost always deplored the fact that they were not crusading any more and softly suggested advancing age as a reason.

"Yes," said Mr. Borah, with a touch of twinkle, "Senator Johnson will show his years but I go on forever."

A Great Sorrow

I think a great sorrow, in his life was his disappointment over the Smoot-Hawley tariff. He was for the farmer and not very strong for Mr. Hoover. He wanted to protect by tariffs every American market which our agriculture could supply—either directly or by a substitute. He understood that Mr. Hoover agreed.

Al Smith went west and played to the farmer's demand for such action as Mr. Roosevelt has taken. It swept the prairies. Senator Borah swept them back. He practically swung the farm vote in the election by a single speech ridiculing Al and selling Hoover. His reward was the Smoot-Hawley tariff which gave the farmer one thing in his own field but crucified him on a cross of increased industrial rates.

Not Embittered

But Senator Borah was by this time a veteran and now, "the dear wound in his gallant breast the badge of many scars." It neither embittered nor embroiled him. He had served his country with ability, faith and courage through crisis after crisis.

Elementary Justice

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE of the United States Senate is once more considering the Logan bill, which would give a right of appeal to the courts from all the multiplied administrative agencies which now harrass the citizen at every turn.

The courts, for example, have no right to go behind the returns on a statement of facts as drawn up by the National Labor Relations Board, if those facts, to quote the Wagner Act literally, are supported by "evidence."

This was an outrageous restriction from every point of view. The courts themselves interpreted the statute to mean that "evidence" meant "substantial evidence," which is a help, of course.

It remains that when a circuit court of appeals gets one of these "cease and desist" orders from the board for review the employer is practically at the mercy of a lot of trial examiners and partisan agents of every kind, who have been utterly indifferent to the facts.

The National Labor Relations Board is but one of fifty-two administrative agencies whose "rules and regulations" are the law, so far as the poor devil caught in their legalistic toils is concerned.

The American Bar Association has made an extensive study of these agencies and has recommended a larger measure of court review. It was the president of this association who said that as matters stand today no lawyer could ever advise his client as to what is the law. It changes from day to day; it is more uncertain than the measure equity, which was varied with the size of the chancellor's foot.

The Logan bill passed the Senate at the last session, but it goes without saying that the New Deal conspirators who are trying to drive the country into state socialism do not like it. They want the arbitrary rule of administrative agencies, packed and controlled by the administration.

Under this pressure the bill was reconsidered after it passed the Senate last year and the New Deal is fighting it as strongly as ever.

But those who support it and those who hope for some kind of elementary justice are still hopeful that it will pass both branches of Congress and become the law.

Borah Career Lesson

FURTHER TRIBUTES to Senator Borah are given in the Sullivan and Johnson letters elsewhere on this page today. They are well deserved.

There is in addition a lesson for everybody, more particularly the politicians, in all that has been said and is being said about the career and the personality of the late senator. When he lay stricken and after he had passed away, the news dispatches recorded that among the many who manifested solicitude over his condition and who expressed sorrow over his passing were included his political opponents as well as his friends and supporters. That was because Borah was held in universal esteem.

And why was that? It was partly because of his great personality and his able mentality, but chiefly it was because of his rugged intellectual honesty. In many ways Borah was an uncertain quantity politically. Sometimes he was on one side of the fence and sometimes on the other side. But everybody knew and appreciated the fact that he placed himself there by reason of his earnest convictions, his independence of thought, his unswerving regard for the general welfare, which he kept above all considerations of party pelf and self consideration. There were times when friends believed he was on the wrong track, but they nevertheless respected his purpose because they knew the man was conscientious.

There are, as one of the columnists says, too few men of this type in the country today and the country needs a good quota of the type. How a man who yields to paltry vote considerations and to pressure groups can believe that conserves his political future when it has so often been demonstrated that support is won and strongly held by representatives of the people who vote and act for what they regard as right and in disregard of personal considerations, is one of the most puzzling mysteries of the day. But herein is detected the difference between a mere politician and a statesman.

Ringing the Bell

THOMAS E. DEWEY, presidential aspirant, again rings the bell in his speech at a mass meeting of three state-wide Republican clubs of Massachusetts at Boston. He stresses the bald fact that the federal budget can—and must—be balanced to check a bureaucracy run wild, and points unerringly to the first duty of the national administration that will succeed the New Deal next January.

The keynote of budget balancing is given in the declaration that it "can be brought down to a reasonable figure." That is the stark naked truth.

The principal way in which it can be done has long been obvious, but Dewey emphasizes the cardinal requirement that in this industrial society of ours, jobs are made by providing plant and equipment with which men can make goods; that this is an economic essential and that neither budget balancing nor reasonable prosperity can be achieved until that is brought about.

The pudding proof is supplied. "Contrast the situation today with the decade of the 1920's," Dewey cites. "From 1920 to 1929 the federal debt was cut eight billion dollars while thirty-seven billion dollars of private capital was raised and invested. In the 1930's government debt went up twenty-four billion dollars and less than eleven billion dollars of private capital was raised.

"In the 1920's four and a half dollars of private capital was put to work for each dollar of reduction in the national debt. In the 1930's only forty-five cents of private capital was invested for every dollar of increase in the national debt. The flow of private capital has been choked while government has been spending huge sums of money. Thus in its first responsibility to the men and women seeking a livelihood, the New Deal has utterly and completely collapsed."

There, indeed, is the need of this nation today. It must, as Dewey says, "again release the energy of private enterprise to transform unemployment into employment, relief into jobs," and it is in that manner that the government can balance its budget.

Its Own Laws

WHEN the baseball world became "wise" to the benefits of publicity and of keymen well and favorably known to the public, it hired a judge named Kenesaw Mountain Landis to be the dictator of the business. It may have been in the minds of some of the baseball magnates that Landis would be a mere figurehead, one who might add face to the industry. But Landis has fooled them. He insists on taking seriously the bossing job for which he was hired.

His name has figured prominently in the news for several years, especially when he rapped the knuckles of certain baseball heroes when they were bad boys. Now he makes the headlines again as he tosses what one sports writer calls a $500,000 penalty bombshell into the camps of the organized sport.

"Notice is hereby given all clubs, club officials and employes," says Landis, "that the evils of common control of player dealings of two clubs in the same league, and perversion of working agreements for the wholesale covering up of players, must cease; and, that all club officials and employes found to be involved in any such misconduct after this date will be placed on the ineligible list, maximum fines will be imposed on each club concerned and all players mishandled therein will be declared free agents."

This ruling has been declared to be the severest in the history of Landis. Here he again opposes the covering-up system in major-minor league deals. But all he asks here is that baseball shall live up to its own laws. So simple it is for a man to be a czar.

Handspring Artist

ROBERT H. JACKSON, attorney general-designate—who thumped the tub so vigarously for a third term for the president the other evening—certainly is a handspring artist in his reasoning.

Jackson spent considerable time that evening proving—to himself at least—that the Republicans wanted to hold their nominating convention after the Democrats had held theirs because they were "afraid" to nominate a candidate and write a platform before they knew what their opponents were going to do. In fact, Jackson gave heavy implication that he thought it mean and unsportsmanlike of the Republicans to act that way.

A few minutes later in the same speech, however, Jackson changed his tune. He spent much time proving just the opposite where his boss, the president was involved. (You must not forget that if the president could be re-elected, Jackson is another of those who would keep his job—and might disappear from sight if Mr. Roosevelt stepped down.)

He shouted to the rafters that anyone who criticized the president for not making his third term plans known as a fool. Why, said he, should the president show his hand to all his enemies?

You know, we're beginning to think that the best way to figure out these New Dealers is to take anything they say, turn it completely around, and thus anticipate what they'll be saying next week.

In Jackson's case the reversal took less than five minutes.

If a United States of Europe ever comes into being, will the citizens refer to it affectionately as "Uncle Mars"?

So we continued onward to Thirty-fourth Street and westward to Broadway and Macy's. And there we pulled up in front of the entrance while the brigadier generals and [illegible] marshals who guarded the door bleated like sheep and ran to an fro. But this time the police department had massed its might against us. The peace of the town was being shattered by our innocent excursion with Rose the soprano and Alice the elephant. But, as I say, elephants are fascinating playmates if you have a place to keep them.

Roman Glamour Girl

Speaking of glamour girls, as they call them nowadays, archaeologists in the Eternal City have uncovered the Roman home of one of the great glamour girls of all times. Workmen grading the banks of the Tiber river uncovered elaborate frescoes and mosaics, marble fragments and whole rooms which must have been most magnificent. The frescoes revealed that the palace of Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, was situated in the garden of Caius Julius Ceasar, about a mile outside the walls of ancient Rome.

Continually this red-haired, blue-eyed, milk-skinned siren appears and reappears in the news of the day more than ten thousand years after she quit the world. Not very long ago the historian Carcopino asserted that Ceasar never was bewitched by the Lady of the Nile and that their association was actually platonic and political. The discovery of her Roman palace in the gardens of Ceasar's country-place would hardly support Signor Carcopino's contention, one would think.

Takes More Authority

At all events, it will take more authority than can be brought to bear by an elderly historian scribbling in an untidy study to strip the glamour from the Lady of the Nile, or destroy the picture of the sixteen-year-old girl-queen perched in a niche of the Sphinx awaiting in the perfect moonlight of an Egyptian night for the coming of the Roman conqueror, or appearing from a roll of priceless rugs to kneel at Ceasar's feet and complete the subjugation of the master of the world. — Cpyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

BORAH SUCCESSOR?

John Thomas

THE SPECIAL OCCASION HAIR SHIRT

BY MARK SULLIVAN

Washington, Jan. 23.—Senator Borah is on his way back to Idaho.

Mark Sullivan

Of the scores of stories he told me, one time or another, the most vivid was his account of his first journey over the same path, thirty years ago. It was charming when Borah told it; today it takes on poignance. Between that lone anabasis of an aspiring youth, and the present journey in ceremonial state, lies just half a century of Borah's life and America's history. But the distance in time fails to measure the contrast between the America of an older day and the America of 1940.

Young Borah had got his education, and a law diploma, in Illinois and Kansas. Looking about for opportunity, he turned to what was, in that day, a main highway for ambition, expressed in the phrase then universally familiar, "Go West" That phrase, in its early implication of enterprise and high adventure, has long passed for the American tongue. The most recent general use of the words had a somber cannotation—during the Great War, "Go West" was a euphemism for death in battle.

A Friendly Salesman

Young Borah, on his westward quest, took a Union Pacific train at Omaha. The first night out, his seat-mate was a salesman for a farm implement firm. Between naps on the old-time reclining chairs, the older man learned the youth's as yet undetermined goal—a good place to practice law and grow up with the country. The salesman, familiar with the West, was interested and friendly. He produced a map which the two pored over with groping fingers. The salesman was strong for either Seattle or Tacoma. Those two towns, then in the early boom stage, and of roughly equal size, were eager contenders for what was confidently expected to be, and proudly predicted by rival newspapers as "Queen City of the Pacific Coast."

The second night out, Borah's seat-mate was a man from a little town called Nampa, in what was then the territory of Idaho. He advised Borah, before going on to the coast, to drop off and take a look at Boise. Idaho, the adviser thought, would soon be made a state, and Boise would probably be its capital. It might be a good place for a young man to rise in law and politics. If Borah decided to settle there, he should drop a postal card to the Nampa man and let him know; the Nampa might be able to send him some business.

Hopeless Quest

Borah, stopping off at Boise, knocked at the door of every law office in the town, asking for a job. He found no job. But in the amiable way of a small new community, he could have desk-room free in any office he chose. By that time, Borah's money was not enough to carry him on to the Coast.

Presently he got his first case—it was sent him by his Nampa friend. As I recall Borah's story, a Chinaman had been murdered; and in the ensuing legal processes a hovel and technical jam had arisen, too complex for the frontier justice of the peace to solve. The statute of the United States, which decreed that a Chinaman could not be a citizen, was then relatively new, its implications not yet worked out in legal precedents. Nampa sophists of the law set up a plea that since a Chinaman could not be a citizen, therefore he could not be a corporeal entity, within the meaning of the common law. Consequently the dead body of a Chinaman could not be a "corpus delicti". Ergo, since there was no "missing body," within the meaning of the Latin legalism, there could not have been a murder. The killing of the Chinaman, if any crime at all, must be something short of that which calls for hanging of the aggressor. The theory offended frontier commonsense. Borah was called on to explain a juster and more practicable application of ancient laws to new conditions.

Symbolic of Career

Borah told the story with humor. But in the faint way it was symbolic of his career, and his public service.

The late Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, declared to me once that the three best constitutional lawyers in the United States were Senator Borah, Justice Sutherland of the supreme court, and—Walsh added with a smile—himself. He gave the reason. All three had began their practice of law in small frontier communities, still territories, not yet organized as states—in the period when those communities were in the transition stage between informal law by vigilance committees, and formal law by judges, courts, and legislatures. The people, while unfamiliar with law and lawyers, indeed a little suspicious of them, were rich in common sense, strong in individual judgment, had a well-defined standard of right and wrong.

Maxim Not Enough

To such a community, it was not enough for a lawyer to emit a Latin legal maxim and expect to be respected; nor belch the word "Constitution" and expect the people to genuflect. The lawyer must explain just why the law was what it is; must show it conformed to the common sense of the community. To do that, the lawyer had not merely to know the law and the constitution, but understand it, know the why of it. Had to understand the evolution of law and government, from its beginnings in the ancient folk-ways of the people. He had to know that law and the constitution, and government, is the written and codified expression of the instinctive point-of-view of average men, tested and sustained over centuries.

Borah, Sutherland and Walsh accompanied their communities, piloted their communities, from the stage of informal posse to formal courts. Into one lifetime they and the commuities they guided compressed the long experience of English-speaking peoples from Magna Charta to the present day. That gave Borah his special understanding of the constitution, his regard for it, his apprehension of careless change of it by persons who only knew it as something printed in a book.

Uncle Sam As A Landlord

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Some days ago, in commenting on the proposed extension of the scope of the Federal Home Loan Bank act, this newspaper expressed the opinion that if the American people realized how much private property the government has taken over, and how many millions of public dollars were endangered in questionable loans, there would be a nation-wide demand for a change of policy.

The matter of federal land holdings now is beginning to bother Congress. Some months ago, the question of how much property the government holds, and under what conditions, was raised. Nobody had the slightest idea. So the president created a real estate board to find out. This board has made no report, and Senator O'Mahoney is pressing for an immediate action in order that Congress may act at this session. That the report will be made is extremely unlikely. The board hasn't met for three months, and evidently has no more than scratched the surface of its assignment.

That the federal holdings are vast and expanding rapidly, is well known. Aside from the land and buildings actually employed in the public service, there is such property as involved in the TVA and other enterprises; the sub-marginal lands acquired by the Farm Security Administration; land bought up for game preserves and reforestation; the thousands of farms and homes taken over by the government on foreclosure.

These holdings constitute not only a tax problem for the various states involved, but the much more serious problem of widespread public ownership. It is to be hoped members of Congress keep pressing for action by the real estate board. When the facts are assembled they will be so shocking we predict, as to startle the nation.

On the Record

By United States Senator William H. King, Democrat, of Utah

The loans which we are making under what I regret to term the improvident policies of the Department of Agriculture will aggregate hundreds of millions of dollars, which will add to the debts of the United States and increase the burden of taxation upon the American people.

Country Needs Men Like Borah

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

Hugh Johnson

Washington, D. C.—This country as never before, needs men like Senator Borah. You can count his like on the fingers of one hand.

He and I have had disagreements. He was a great disagreer. You couldn't have a whole Senate of Borahs and still have either party organization or much cohesion in the Senate itself. Out motoring, Calvin Coolidge once saw the senator riding in Rock Creek Park. "He must be very happy," Cal remarked after a few minutes rumination, "he and his horse are going in the same direction."

Quota Is Needed

But we need a quota of such men. It is the antidote for personal power. Like Thomas Jefferson, he had sworn eternal hostility to any form of domination over the mind of man. He voted and spoke as he thought and believed. And he always thought and believed sincerely. With this controlling principle guiding him, he paid little attention to party policy, Presidential prestige or popular reaction if any of these influences interfered with what he thought was right.

Alone with such a few veterans as Carter Glass, he simply did not play in the pork-barrel game of political patronage. He was so strongly entrenched in the affection will and confidence of the people of his state that there was no necessity to do that. Even if there had been any necessity, he would not have done it.

Friend and Model

My disagreements with him were official but they never made any difference in our personal relations which were always kindly. I always looked up to him as a model when I was very young and, in later years, regarded him so deeply as a friend that his going wrenches me personally as severely as though he were an elder member of my own family.

As a citizen, quite apart from this poignant personal grief, I lament the passage of a public figure among "some we loved, the lovely and best from his vintage, which time hath pressed."

Gentle but Alert

In private life he was as gentle as a woman. In debate he could, and sometimes did wield either a rapier or a cudgel. The galleries loved it when he spoke on any subject, for he was alert to the last.

In testifying on the Neutrality act before the Senate Foreign Relations committee, of which he and Senator Hiram Johnson were members, I recalled to Senator Borah how both he and Hiram had gone to the country in the League of Nations issue and defeated it. In their own speeches almost alone they deplored the fact that they were not crusading any more and softly suggested advancing age as a reason.

"Yes," said Mr. Borah, with a touch of twinkle, "Senator Johnson may show his years but I go on forever."

A Great Sorrow

I think a great sorrow, in his last days, was his disappointment over the Smoot-Hawley tariff. He was for the farmer and not very strong for Mr. Hoover. He wanted to protect by tariffs every American market which our agriculture could supply—either directly or by a substitute. He understood that Mr. Hull agreed.

Al Smith went west and played to the farmer's demand for relief by such action as Mr. Roosevelt has taken. It swept the prairies. Senator Borah swept them back. He practically swung the farm states in the election by a single speech ridiculing Al and selling Hoover. His reward was the Smoot-Hawley tariff which gave the farmer one thing in his own field but crucified him on a cross of increased industrial rates.

Not Embittered

But Senator Borah was by no time a veteran and now, "the old wound in his gallant breast the scar of many scars." It neither embittered nor embroiled him. He served his country with ability, faith and courage through crisis after crisis.

This wasn't really true, urse, but stalwart breadwin- of 41 or so, all over the coun- egan right away to lose their e and their appetites and to hat it was all over.

little later, somebody discov- that there were savage tribes older people were killed off mere matter of routine. And information wasn't any too rtwarming.

Then sons and daughters began efully to throw off the shack- of parental authority and took matters into their own nds. So that before long, nobody 25 seemed to have much spirit more.

Has Relented

I now have to announce that has considerably relented. been discovered that parents people, after all—aunts and un- likewise—and a sweet, homey, fashioned family feeling is be- ing to show itself again. I'm ing that in consequence the troubled look will disappear many elderly faces .

Although kindness seems to be guiding so many youthful hearts at this moment, two young women in particular have felt so strongly an affection and responsibility toward their elders in general, that they have organized their expression of these feelings.

These two Vassar graduates who live in New York, Miss Large and Miss Stabler, aren't going to let any widowed mothers or solitary aunts who may be bravely living on their own in the city spend a forlorn winter if they can help it.

And how can they help it?

Well, there are lots of ways in which pleasure can be given to elderly women.

First, by making sure that news comes frequently enough from beloved absent sons and daughters, nieces and nephews. This requires machinery, but it can be done.

Then, by bringing congenial women together, perhaps the best of all services. Or by organizing bridge clubs for groups of four or more women. Or book-clubs, if they hate cards.

Tea Parties Good

Or, by getting up a few little informal tea-parties, where the fragrance of the tea and the shine of the fire-light and a few notes played on the piano, can do so much to take away the sting of loneliness—perhaps even start the remaking of a life or two.

This Service to Seniors, as it is called, doesn't overlook more practical things. The Vassar girls see that their elderly friends' shopping gets done, and done sympathetically—not coldly, as a mere chore. This shopping has heart in it.

Most of all, perhaps, these daughter-substitutes know that they can help by a mere human coming together of the older woman and the younger one, an intimately real contact. They believe it's worth while if they can replace, it for a moment only, a treasured lost relationship . . . Of course, such a moment of love and sympathy counts for far more with a hungry heart than a hundred mere distractions.

She is Quick-Tempered

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My girl friend is rather quick-tempered and consequently, now and then, says things that she really doesn't mean, and for which she is sorry afterwards. Do you think I show a weak character and no backbone by not getting sore and staying away for a few days? I try to tell her in a nice way to have better control of herself and am patient with her. She's a very intelligent girl in all respects but for this temper. Do you suppose this will make her gradually drift away from me, and be the cause of our breaking up? DAVE.

It seems to me that it would take quite a bit of courage and plenty of backbone to be able to quietly stand your ground and tell a girl who is indulging in a fit of temper to try and have better control of herself. No weakness in character could be attributed to you, so far as I can see. In fact, I believe it would do her good if you stay away from her for a week or so, and let her see the harm she is doing both of you.

Great Talker in Company

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm married to a man who must find me very dull. He never discusses any subject with me; hardly ever talks at home. He never tells me a thing he has done all day in business. If he happens to see anyone we know he never mentions it. He seems to have an idea he cannot take me into his confidence, and I can't understand that. I'm not a great talker myself, and never discuss private affairs with outsiders. He's a great talker in company.

I'm considered an intelligent person; have had a couple of years at college, and am a fair conversationalist. Can you figure out my problem? G.

Perhaps your husband is worried about business or isn't feeling well, and wants to be quiet when he comes home from the office. He may confide in you later. In the meantime, try not to worry about it. Don't ask any questions, but show your devotion by having everything fresh and attractive at home, and by giving him well-balanced but economical meals. There are many little ways to flatter a man, and it is surprising how quickly they respond to this treatment.

Talk Behind Her Back

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm working in a small restaurant where the other girls are very jolly, and always have an answer ready for anything that is said. I'm rather quiet, but they're all noisy. I think I'm self-conscious, but I'm honest, fair and neat, while the other girls are rather messy in appearance, but they're good talkers, which seems to get them places. They talk behind my back, which makes me so mad sometimes I could just scream.

Around my own kind of people, I feel more like myself, and am jolly, but at my work I seem to be lifeless. Tell me how I could get along better. I wouldn't have time to go to school, and if I read, I couldn't even understand what I'm reading. MARCA.

The loud-talking girls, who are inclined to be messy probably resent your good breeding, and they may think you're a trifle high-hat. Don't let their treatment of you get you down. If you force yourself to be pleasant to them, they'll probably come 'round and see how silly is their one-sided warfare.

Here's a true story about your type of girl. The situation was identical with yours. Among the young men, who used to go to a certain restaurant when the great Northwest was opening up many years ago, was one who became famous as a railroad king, and made millions. The loud-talking girls chattered, joked and were quite lively with him. But he married the quiet girl. And in the words of the old fairy story, "they lived happily ever after." Any old railroad man will give you the name of this railroad king, who died only a few years ago.

I'm married to a man who must find me very dull. He never discusses any subject with me; hardly ever talks at home. He never tells me a thing he has done all day in business. If he happens to see anyone we know he never mentions it. He seems to have an idea he cannot take me into his confidence, and I can't understand that. I'm not a great talker myself, and never discuss private affairs with outsiders. He's a great talker in company.

I'm considered an intelligent person; have had a couple of years at college, and am a fair conversationalist. Can you figure out my problem? G.

Perhaps your husband is worried about business or isn't feeling well, and wants to be quiet when he comes home from the office. He may confide in you later. In the meantime, try not to worry about it. Don't ask any questions, but show your devotion by having everything fresh and attractive at home, and by giving him well-balanced but economical meals. There are many little ways to flatter a man, and it is surprising how quickly they respond to this treatment.

Talk Behind Her Back

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm working in a small restaurant where the other girls are very jolly, and always have an answer ready for anything that is said. I'm rather quiet, but they're all noisy. I think I'm self-conscious, but I'm honest, fair and neat, while the other girls are rather messy in appearance, but they're good talkers, which seems to get them places. They talk behind my back, which makes me so mad sometimes I could just scream.

Around my own kind of people, I feel more like myself, and am jolly, but at my work I seem to be lifeless. Tell me how I could get along better. I wouldn't have time to go to school, and if I read, I couldn't even understand what I'm reading. MARCA.

The loud-talking girls, who are inclined to be messy probably resent your good breeding, and they may think you're a trifle high-hat. Don't let their treatment of you get you down. If you force yourself to be pleasant to them, they'll probably come 'round and see how silly is their one-sided warfare.

Here's a true story about your type of girl. The situation was identical with yours. Among the young men, who used to go to a certain restaurant when the great Northwest was opening up many years ago, was one who became famous as a railroad king, and made millions. The loud-talking girls chattered, joked and were quite lively with him. But he married the quiet girl. And in the words of the old fairy story, "they lived happily ever after." Any old railroad man will give you the name of this railroad king, who died only a few years ago.

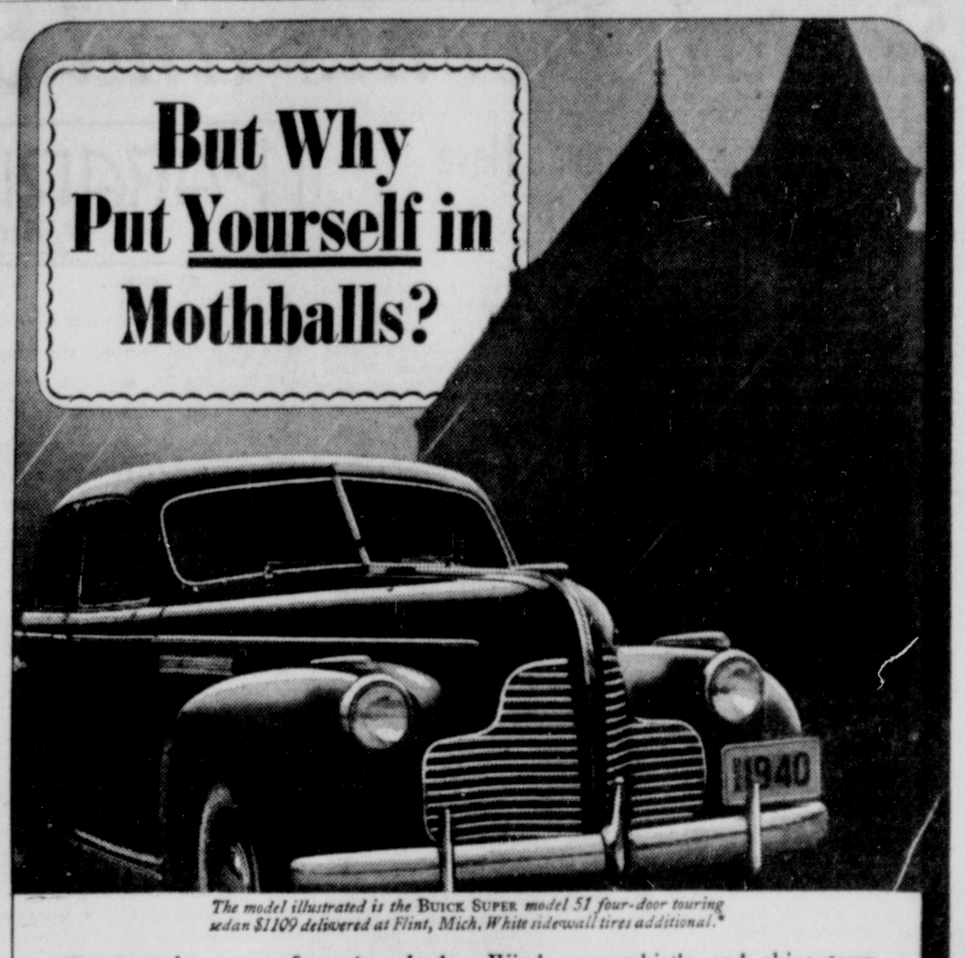
But Why Put Yourself in Mothballs?



The model illustrated is the BUICK SUPER *model 51 four-door touring sedan $1109 delivered at Flint, Mich. White sidewall tires additional.

SUPPOSE the summer finery is packed away where the moths won't get at it—is that any reason why you should hibernate too—and miss out on a lot of grand and glorious fun?

For as you can see for yourself, the pleasure this Buick brings you isn't subject in any way to the weatherman's whims.

The elements can fairly howl—and they won't for an instant daunt the spirit of this Dynaflash straight-eight power plant, or ruffle the velvet quality of its better-than-a-wrist-watch smoothness.

Winter can do its worst to the roads—and you'll yet take them for boulevards; BuiCoil Springing not only cushions all the rough spots but lays a restraining hand on skids as well.

Not a six but an EIGHT for $895 and up delivered at Flint, Mich.*

* Transportation based on rail rates, state and local taxes (if any), optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices subject to change without notice.

Winds may whistle and skies grow gray—but here you're snug and secure in stout, weather-tight Unisteel Bodies by Fisher. And you're cradled in seats with fireside-chair comfort, secure in the knowledge of tires that bite and brakes that grip.

Meantime—look at the jump you're getting on the tradition-bound wait-till-spring buyers. Weeks will pass before they put their orders in—weeks in which you'll be enjoying all of Buick's six-dozen-plus new features, reveling in this Buick's spirit-lifting style and beauty.

So step out of the mothballs and step into your Buick dealer's. The prices he's quoting, delivered at your door, are actually less than you're asked for some sixes.

"Best buy's Buick!"

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

ROMANY HAILE, who wants to be a radio star.

CHOLLY O'NEIL, her pal, who plays in a music store.

BRENT NELSON, successful young announcer.

MYRA NOYES, famous radio star, engaged to Brent.

TERRY O'ROURKE, who has a weakness for Cholly and for liquor.

BAXTER TREE, a continuity writer without a job.

YESTERDAY: Brent introduces Cholly and Romany to Dover Hayworth, blueblooded son of a wealthy manufacturer, and all four go for a cruise on the Hayworth yacht.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

ROMANY HAD enjoyed a few holidays with Aunt Cissie, so that she was not entirely unprepared for the luxury on the Hayworth yacht. But to Cholly it was fairyland.

Dinner, served on a table for four on deck, was a rite. Dover was a perfect host, and Brent was in his gayest mood. After Cholly's first self-consciousness wore off, she ate with relish, enjoying herself immensely.

Romany she envied, sitting opposite her, looking like a princess who had stepped out of her castle for a little sail on Lake Michigan. No one would ever have suspected that she had grown up without a thin dime, and was even then garbed in hand-me-downs from a rich relative.

Nice things always happened to Romany, Cholly thought, but entirely without envy. She was so generous in wanting to share everything with her less fortunate friends. Cholly firmly believed Romany had launched on an entirely new life that was to bring her success and fortune. Nothing could stop Romey, with her great talent and beauty. Terry, Cholly pushed firmly in the back of her mind, determined to take a vacation from her worries at least for one evening.

By the time they had finished dinner, it had grown chilly on deck and Dover suggested they go into the lounge. It was the opportunity Brent had been hoping for. He wanted to hear Cholly play.

"How about a little music?" he said inside. "I always feel like singing when I get on the water."

"Heaven forbid!" Dover grinned. "He sings like a trumpheting elephant, My sense of harmony, now, that's what you ought to get a load of."

"If you air that bar room tenor," Nelson predicted darkly, "the girls will both jump overboard. And I'll probably join them."

"Play, Cholly." Romany threw herself gracefully into a chair by the piano. "I haven't heard you since we were in school."

Cholly sat down without hesitation, running her little hands over the keyboard, getting the tone of the instrument. It was perfect. She sighed happily, breaking into a medley of old songs, "Sweet and Low," "Sailing, Sailing, Over the Bounding Main," "By the Sea," and ending up with "Barnacle Bill the Sailor."

The lovely tones filled the lounge and the bright moonlight night. Cholly, improvising happily because it was seldom she got her hands on a really good piano, played on for several minutes without stopping.

Brent, catching Romany's eye, nodded. She was a fine pianist, no doubt of it. In a little while, Dover moved to the piano bench beside Cholly, watching her, fascinated. He loved music, and it was amazing that two such small white hands could bring so much beauty from a piano. They looked so fragile, yet were strong and sure on the keyboard.

"Marvelous!" Dover looked at the pretty red-head with a new interest when she stopped playing. "Do you do concert work?"

"Mercy, no!" Cholly shook her curly head swiftly, laughing. I play the piano part time in Leo-Dane's music store.

Romany was a little sorry she had said it. But if Dover's illusions were shattered, he gave no sign.

"Well, blow me down!" he said wonderingly. "You certainly pound out a powerful lot of melody with those little pinkies. You've got a great future ahead of you, Cholly."

Cholly sighed:

"Oh, no. Nothing like that. Piano players are a nickel a carload, aren't they, Brent?"

Brent pursed his lips.

"Well, I would have said so when you sat down to the piano, Cholly, but I'm not so sure now. You've one thing in your favor, especially in radio. There isn't a pianist at Interstate who would add anything to a television broadcast. You'd certainly meet all requirements on that score."

"No doubt about that," Dover agreed with him. "Television is going to mean quite a shakeup in Chicago radio circles. Don't you think so, Brent?"

"I'm afraid so," Brent sighed. "The big wave is about to sweep over us. The World's Fair broadcasts have clinched that."

"That'll be tough for you," Dover grinned.

"Yes, I'll probably be out peddling sody pop in a few weeks." Brent smiled. He was the handsomest announcer in the Middle West.

"Do you sing?" Dover turned to Romany then.

"Like a frog," Romany nodded.

"You can't expect a great tragedienne to be a concert singer, too," Nelson chided. "But she might give us a couple of scenes from Shakespeare."

"It's against the rules of my contract." Romany did a perfect imitation of Myra Noyes and her grandest manner."

When she realized what she had done, she flushed, and Brent and Dover laughed with relish.

A little later the foursome just naturally drifted into a singing fest, although Dover's tenor, Brent's baritone and Romany's contralto would have drawn the gong in an amateur broadcast. Cholly's soprano was at least on key, and her playing was a great help.

"This," Dover decided as they walked along the dock at twelve o'clock, "gets my vote as the swellest evening we've ever had on the old tub, Brent. What do you say?"

"Indeed yes," the announcer said heartily. "I can have a large evening just sitting looking at this green-eyed damsel." He referred, of course, to Romany.

"You'll come often, won't you?" Dover urged. "We'll ditch the gang and have another foursome very soon."

"Of course," Romany assured him. "Won't we, Cholly?"

"I've had a grand time," Cholly evaded.

"I'm taking Cholly in my car," Dover said when they were on the street.

"That isn't necessary," Cholly began, but Romany gave her a swift poke in the ribs, silencing her.

Romany knew Dover had been much taken with Cholly, and she meant to do everything possible to flare the spark into a flame. Dover was driving his car also, and the two couples parted at the pier.

There was no trouble with Brent and his love making on the way home, which was a relief to Romany. He was tenderly solicitous and amazingly silent. They rode along in the moonlight swiftly, meeting Dover and Cholly a half hour later in front of the apartment, where they said goodnight with promises to go yachting again soon.

Upstairs, Cholly sat down in the living room thoughtfully.

"I'm afraid—" She looked up and smiled suddenly "I had a good time. Funny, isn't it?"

"Why funny?" Romany asked.

"Oh," Cholly shrugged, "I just thought I couldn't have a good time out with anyone but Terry."

Romany sniffed.

"You've never given yourself a chance to find out."

"Well," Cholly sighed again, "it was fun while it lasted."

"Meaning what?"

"That I'm not going to make a habit of it, of course."

"Will you please draw a diagram. Maybe I'm dense?"

"Oh!" Cholly turned impatiently in her chair. "What's the use of going out and enjoying all that luxury and stuff and getting used to it. It would just spoil you for all the things you can't have."

"And what," Romany said impatiently, "makes you think you can't have them? You could marry Dover Hayworth as easily as falling off a log if you made up your mind. In two weeks he'd be mad about you, if you handled him right."

"Romey!" Cholly exploded. "You're crazy! What would a millionaire blue blood see in a nobody like me? You know perfectly well what happens when people marry so far out of their class."

Romany said with fire:

"Do you mean to sit there and tell me you have an inferiority complex? That you think you're not as good as Dover Hayworth? Why, twenty years ago his father was raising corn out in the corn belt. He just had sense enough to make it into syrup and get rich."

Cholly got up.

"I still say," she had the last word, "you're crazy. Dove will marry a debutante. That's what his father and mother would want him to do. To him I'd never be anything but a girl who could amuse him playing the piano.

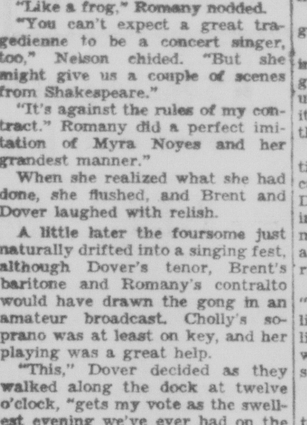
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

GET IN THE FIRST LICK

WHEN YOU have two suits worth showing, it generally will pay you to call one of them at your earliest opportunity, so that your next bid will enable your partner to know about both of them. That is especially important in third hand position, after your partner has passed and you know therefore that the side possesses little of value except distribution. By following that policy, you will get into many a profitable contract and also will put your side in position to make a valuable sacrifice bid if your partner fits one of the suits with length in an otherwise worthless hand.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

This deal proved important in a team-of-four match. At one table the first three players passed, West opening with 2-No Trumps. After East overcalled with 3-Clubs, South did not dare come in with one of his suits; so passed. West then bid 3-Spades, East 4-Hearts, West 4-No Trumps (Blackwood), East, of course, 5-Clubs, showing no aces; West 5-No Trumps (Blackwood), East 6-Spades, showing three kings, then West 7-Clubs. It was made easily, the West hand being set up by ruffing two diamonds and a spade.

South opened at the other table with 1-Heart because of his two suits in about an average hand. West doubled, East bid 2-Clubs, South 2-Diamonds, and then followed about the same bidding as at the other table, until East and West reached 7-Clubs. At that stage North opened his mouth for the first time, bidding 7-Diamonds as a sacrifice, since he knew about his partner's two suits. West doubled, and it was set six tricks, giving East and West 1,100 points. This was great, though, for North-South, as the grand slam made by their team mates at the other table produced a 1,500 bonus, 500 for game and 140 for tricks—total, 2,140 points. Thus the opening bid by South proved to be worth a net of 1,040 points to the side.

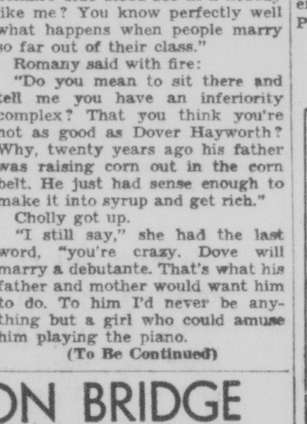
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

What principle of successful bidding enables South to get into 3-No Trumps on this deal, with both sides calling soundly?

SYNOPSIS

THE CHARACTERS:

ROMANY HAILE, who wants to be a radio star.

CHOLLY O'NEIL, her pal, who plays in a music store.

BRENT NELSON, successful young announcer.

MYRA NOYES, famous radio star, engaged to Brent.

TERRY O'ROURKE, who has a weakness for Cholly and for liquor.

BAXTER TREE, a continuity writer without a job.

YESTERDAY: Brent introduces Cholly and Romany to Dover Hayworth, blueblooded son of a wealthy manufacturer, and all four go for a cruise on the Hayworth yacht.

Cholly's soprano was at least on key and her playing helped.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

ROMANY HAD enjoyed a few holidays with Aunt Cissie, so that she was not entirely unprepared for the luxury on the Hayworth yacht. But to Cholly it was fairyland.

Dinner, served on a table for four on deck, was a rite. Dover was a perfect host, and Brent was in his gayest mood. After Cholly's first self-consciousness wore off, she ate with relish, enjoying herself immensely.

Romany she envied, sitting opposite her, looking like a princess who had stepped out of her castle for a little sail on Lake Michigan. No one would ever have suspected that she had grown up without a thin dime, and was even then garbed in hand-me-downs from a rich relative.

Nice things always happened to Romany, Cholly thought, but entirely without envy. She was so generous in wanting to share everything with her less fortunate friends. Cholly firmly believed Romany had launched on an entimely new life that was to bring her success and fortune. Nothing could stop Romey, with her great talent and beauty. Terry, Cholly pushed firmly in the back of her mind, determined to take a vacation from her worries at least for one evening.

By the time they had finished dinner, it had grown chilly on deck and Dover suggested they go into the lounge. It was the opportunity Brent had been hoping for. He wanted to hear Cholly play.

"How about a little music?" he said inside. "I always feel like singing when I get on the water."

"Heaven forbid!" Dover grinned. "He sings like a trumpheting elephant, My sense of harmony, now, that's what you ought to get a load of."

"If you air that bar room tenor," Nelson predicted darkly, "the girls will both jump overboard. And I'll probably join them."

"Play, Cholly." Romany threw herself gracefully into a chair by the piano. "I haven't heard you since we were in school."

Cholly sat down without hesitation, running her little hands over the keyboard, getting the tone of the instrument. It was perfect. She sighed happily, breaking into a medley of old songs, "Sweet and Low," "Sailing, Sailing, Over the Bounding Main," "By the Sea," and ending up with "Barnacle Bill the Sailor."

The lovely tones filled the lounge and the bright moonlight night. Cholly, improvising happily because it was seldom she got her hands on a really good piano, played on for several minutes without stopping.

Brent, catching Romany's eye, nodded. She was a fine pianist, no doubt of it. In a little while, Dover moved to the piano bench beside Cholly, watching her, fascinated. He loved music, and it was amazing that two such small white hands could bring so much beauty from a piano. They looked so fragile, yet were strong and sure on the keyboard.

"Marvelous!" Dover looked at the pretty red-head with a new interest when she stopped playing. "Do you do concert work?"

"Mercy, no!" Cholly shook her curly head swiftly, laughing. I play the piano part time in Leo-Dane's music store.

Romany was a little sorry she had said it. But if Dover's illusions were shattered, he gave no sign.

"Well, blow me down!" he said wonderingly. "You certainly pound out a powerful lot of melody with those little pinkies. You've got a great future ahead of you, Cholly."

Cholly sighed:

"Oh, no. Nothing like that. Piano players are a nickel a carload, aren't they, Brent?"

Brent pursed his lips.

"Well, I would have said so when you sat down to the piano, Cholly, but I'm not so sure now. You've one thing in your favor, especially in radio. There isn't a pianist at Interstate who would add anything to a television broadcast. You'd certainly meet all requirements on that score."

"No doubt about that," Dover agreed with him. "Television is going to mean quite a shakeup in Chicago radio circles. Don't you think so, Brent?"

"I'm afraid so," Brent sighed. "The big wave is about to sweep over us. The World's Fair broadcasts have clinched that."

"That'll be tough for you," Dover grinned.

"Yes, I'll probably be out peddling sody pop in a few weeks," Brent smiled. He was the handsomest announcer in the Middle West.

"Do you sing?" Dover turned to Romany then.

"Like a frog," Romany nodded.

"You can't expect a great tragedienne to be a concert singer, too," Nelson chided. "But she might give us a couple of scenes from Shakespeare."

"It's against the rules of my contract." Romany did a perfect imitation of Myra Noyes and her grandest manner."

When she realized what she had done, she flushed, and Brent and Dover laughed with relish.

A little later the foursome just naturally drifted into a singing fest, although Dover's tenor, Brent's baritone and Romany's contralto would have drawn the gong in an amateur broadcast. Cholly's soprano was at least on key, and her playing was a great help.

"This," Dover decided as they walked along the dock at twelve o'clock, "gets my vote as the swellest evening we've ever had on the old tub, Brent. What do you say?"

"Indeed yes," the announcer said heartily. "I can have a large evening just sitting looking at this green-eyed damsel." He referred, of course, to Romany.

"You'll come often, won't you?" Dover urged. "We'll ditch the gang and have another foursome very soon."

"Of course," Romany assured him. "Won't we, Cholly?"

"I've had a grand time," Cholly evaded.

"I'm taking Cholly in my car," Dover said when they were on the street.

"That isn't necessary," Cholly began, but Romany gave her a swift poke in the ribs, silencing her.

Romany knew Dover had been much taken with Cholly, and she meant to do everything possible to flare the spark into a flame. Dover was driving his car also, and the two couples parted at the pier.

There was no trouble with Brent and his love making on the way home, which was a relief to Romany. He was tenderly solicitous and amazingly silent. They rode along in the moonlight swiftly, meeting Dover and Cholly a half hour later in front of the apartment, where they said goodnight with promises to go yachting again soon.

Upstairs, Cholly sat down in the living room thoughtfully.

"I'm afraid—" She looked up and smiled suddenly "I had a good time. Funny, isn't it?"

"Why funny?" Romany asked.

"Oh," Cholly shrugged, "I just thought I couldn't have a good time out with anyone but Terry."

Romany sniffed.

"You've never given yourself a chance to find out."

"Well," Cholly sighed again, "it was fun while it lasted."

"Meaning what?"

"That I'm not going to make a habit of it, of course."

"Will you please draw a diagram. Maybe I'm dense?"

"Oh!" Cholly turned impatiently in her chair. "What's the use of going out and enjoying all that luxury and stuff and getting used to it. It would just spoil you for all the things you can't have."

"And what," Romany said impatiently, "makes you think you can't have them? You could marry Dover Hayworth as easily as falling off a log if you made up your mind. In two weeks he'd be mad about you, if you handled him right."

"Romey!" Cholly exploded. "You're crazy! What would a millionaire blue blood see in a nobody like me? You know perfectly well what happens when people marry so far out of their class."

Romany said with fire:

"Do you mean to sit there and tell me you have an inferiority complex? That you think you're not as good as Dover Hayworth? Why, twenty years ago his father was raising corn out in the corn belt. He just had sense enough to make it into syrup and get rich."

Cholly got up.

"I still say," she had the last word, "you're crazy. Dove will marry a debutante. That's what his father and mother would want him to do. To him I'd never be anything but a girl who could amuse him playing the piano.

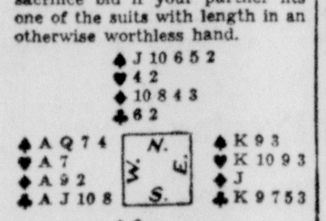
"The Authority on Authorities"

GET IN THE FIRST LICK

WHEN YOU have two suits worth showing, it generally will pay you to call one of them at your earliest opportunity, so that your next bid will enable your partner to know about both of them. That is especially important in third hand position, after your partner has passed and you know therefore that the side possesses little of value except distribution. By following that policy, you will get into many a profitable contract and also will put your side in position to make a valuable sacrifice bid if your partner fits one of the suits with length in an otherwise worthless hand.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

This deal proved important in a team-of-four match. At one table the first three players passed, West opening with 2-No Trumps. After East overcalled with 3-Clubs, South did not dare come in with one of his suits, so passed. West then bid 3-Spades, East 4-Hearts, West 4-No Trumps (Blackwood), East, of course, 5-Clubs, showing no aces; West 5-No Trumps (Blackwood), East 6-Spades, showing three kings, then West 7-Clubs. It was made easily, the West hand being set up by ruffing two diamonds and a spade.

South opened at the other table with 1-Heart because of his two suits in about an average hand. West doubled, East bid 2-Clubs, South 2-Diamonds, and then followed about the same bidding as at the other table, until East and West reached 7-Clubs. At that stage North opened his mouth for the first time, bidding 7-Diamonds as a sacrifice, since he knew about his partner's two suits. West doubled, and it was set six tricks, giving East and West 1,100 points. This was great, though, for North-South, as the grand slam made by their team mates at the other table produced a 1,500 bonus, 500 for game and 140 for tricks——total, 2,140 points. Thus the opening bid by South proved to be worth a net of 1,040 points to the side.

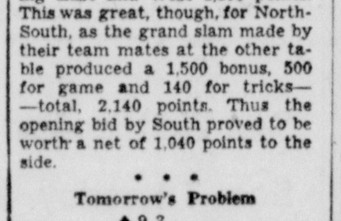
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

What principle of successful bidding enables South to get into 3-No Trumps on this deal, with both sides calling soundly?

Misdeeds of Child Should Be Forgotten

Wrongdoing Should Be Dead Issue after It Is Dealt With

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Some time ago in this column I wrote an article pleading with my readers parents, after they have dealt with any specific wrong-doing of the child as they saw fit, to close the issue forever, never bringing it to the child's attention again.

I reminded my readers that parents are inclined, at such times, to dwell endlessly on some past wrong-doing in the child, and are especially likely to do so when we are displeased with him about some other matter. How disastrous this practice proves to be to a child is illustrated in the following letter:

"Dear Dr. Myers—I am writing this letter to you because I have to tell my troubles to somebody. One day about two years ago, when I was 12 years old, another boy and myself made the mistake of stealing something and were caught. He was the one really to blame, for he influenced me to do that.

Reminded Of It

"I am now 14 years old and during all the time since that event I have been trying to forget. But I am afraid I never will. For, you see, my mother keeps remembering that mistake, and every time I get into a fight with one of my brothers she always reminds me of it.

"My dad died when I was not quite two years old. My mother married again about five years ago and my step-dad does not take any interest in me or my brothers. I have two brothers. The oldest hates me because of that trouble. He claims I have ruined his name, so we do not speak to each other. But any chance he gets to tell me of the trouble he does, especially when we have a fight. He is 17 years old.

"My other brother is always quiet, but it is he that I fight with mostly. It is in most of these fights that my mother reminds me of that trouble.

"I have often had the urge to run away. Two times I had it so bad I almost did, but I did not have any money and did not know where to go. I write songs and expect some day to do that for a living. . . . As soon as I sell a song I am going to move on my own. I want to know if I will be doing right."

How I answered him:

Make Most Of Home

"While your life at home may be almost unbearable at times, I am sure you will gain most in character and personality if you can make the most of it while keeping inside of you your self-respect.

"Do go on and write music. If you don't find a publisher right away, or even after several years, keep at it anyway. You are young and may have a glowing creative future. Sometime you may be able to prove to your parents and brothers that you have creative ability, at which time they will treat you differently.

"Be assured that your letter will make me try harder to get other parents—and I wish I could change yours—to avoid treating any child or step-child as you have been treated."

Spit-Curl Inherited, Hair Expert Says

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP)—"Self-bobbing" hair is reported here. But it needn't worry barbers.

The trait is peculiar only to a short forelock—often called a spit-curl—which grows only five or six inches long. It is inherited.

A hair reaching that length falls out, and a new one grows. It, too, falls out at the length "in a continuous process resulting in natural 'bangs'," S. Edmund Stoddard said in the Journal of Heredity.

Men have have it, but it is harder to detect because their hair is cut so short.

Working at the University of Southern California, Stoddard studied five generations of "natural bangs" and reported the trait is apparently inherited as an incomplete autosomal dominant—that it doesn't always show up in each generation, and may be passed on by a parent who does not have the lock.

Etiquette is now a compulsory course in all Turkish schools.

Maryland Financial Rating Is Again AAA

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 23 (AP)—Maryland has an "AAA" financial rating again.

Its rating by Moody's Investors Service moved down during Governor Nice's administration when the state was borrownig funds for current expenses, and diverting gasoline taxes.

But it was restored, State Treasurer Hooper S. Miles, Jr., said, because Maryland now has "a soundly balanced budget" and has abandoned both the former practices.

Principal cotton producing states, in order of their output, are Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama.

ngdoing Should Be Dead Issue after It Is Dealt With

ne time ago in this column te an article pleading with my parents, after they have with any specific wrong-doing child as they saw fit, to close ssue forever, never bringing it child's attention again.

eminded my readers that parare inclined, at such times, to endlessly on some past wrong-doing in the child, and are especially likely to do so when we are displeased with him about some other matter. How disastrous this practice proves to be to a child is illustrated in the following letter:

"Dear Dr. Myers—I am writing this letter to you because I have to tell my troubles to somebody. One day about two years ago, when I was 12 years old, another boy and myself made the mistake of stealing something and were caught. He was the one really to blame, for he influenced me to do that.

Reminded Of It

"I am now 14 years old and during all the time since that event I have been trying to forget. But I am afraid I never will. For, you see, my mother keeps remembering that mistake, and every time I get into a fight with one of my brothers she always reminds me of it.

"My dad died when I was not quite two years old. My mother married again about five years ago and my step-dad does not take any interest in me or my brothers. I have two brothers. The oldest hates me because of that trouble. He claims I have ruined his name, so we do not speak to each other. But any chance he gets to tell me of the trouble he does, especially when we have a fight. He is 17 years old.

"My other brother is always quiet, but it is he that I fight with mostly. It is in most of these fights that my mother reminds me of that trouble.

"I have often had the urge to run away. Two times I had it so bad I almost did, but I did not have any money and did not know where to go. I write songs and expect some day to do that for a living. . . . As soon as I sell a song I am going to move on my own. I want to know if I will be doing right."

How I answered him:

Make Most Of Home

"While your life at home may be almost unbearable at times, I am sure you will gain most in character and personality if you can make the most of it while keeping inside of you your self-respect.

"Do go on and write music. If you don't find a publisher right away, or even after several years, keep at it anyway. You are young and may have a glowing creative future. Sometime you may be able to prove to your parents and brothers that you have creative ability, at which time they will treat you differently.

"Be assured that your letter will make me try harder to get other parents—and I wish I could change yours—to avoid treating any child or step-child as you have been treated."

CUPID AT WORK

Robert Stack, voted the outstanding male movie find of 1939, meets lovely Cobina Wright, Jr., society songstress, backstage in a New York theater. Stack flew from the West Coast to join her.

July 4 was the date of death for three American presidents—John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and James Monroe.

Spit-Curl Inherited, Hair Expert Says

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP)—"Self-bobbing" hair is reported here. But it needn't worry barbers.

The trait is peculiar only to a short forelock—often called a spit-curl—which grows only five or six inches long. It is inherited.

A hair reaching that length falls out, and a new one grows. It, too, falls out at the length "in a continuous process resulting in natural 'bangs'," S. Edmund Stoddard said in the Journal of Heredity.

Men have have it, but it is harder to detect because their hair is cut so short.

Working at the University of Southern California, Stoddard studied five generations of "natural bangs" and reported the trait is apparently inherited as an incomplete autosomal dominant—that it doesn't always show up in each generation, and may be passed on by a parent who does not have the lock.

Etiquette is now a compulsory course in all Turkish schools.

Maryland Financial Rating Is Again AAA

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 23 (AP)—Maryland has an "AAA" financial rating again.

Its rating by Moody's Investors Service moved down during Governor Nice's administration when the state was borrownig funds for current expenses, and diverting gasoline taxes.

But it was restored, State Treasurer Hooper S. Miles, Jr., said, because Maryland now has "a soundly balanced budget" and has abandoned both the former practices.

Principal cotton producing states, in order of their output, are Texas, Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama.

West Sees New High in Highgrading —Mine Owners Rally To Lay It Low

By ROBERT GEIGER
AP Feature Service Writer

Denver—Highgraders—mine workers who sneak a chunk or two of high grade ore into their jeans—are meeting some high pressure opposition out west.

Several Colorado mines have hired private detectives; miners' associations have intensified their watch and the United States secret service is on the alert.

A move has been started to have Congress appropriate funds to enable the secret service to expand its anti-highgrading activity.

$100 A Whack

Highgraders usually go for gold ore, gold concentrate or precipitates in mines or mills where they are employed.

This gold, at the present price of $35 an ounce, may be worth from 50 cents to $100 or more a pound. A chunk small enough to slip into a coat pocket may be far more valuable than a day's wages. A mill worker can get enough concentrate after it comes through preliminary milling processes to stow $100 worth in a tobacco tin.

Once in the Denver mint a peg-legged gold worker carried out enough gold bars in his hollowed wooden leg and in a hidden pouch to make a $75,000 pile.

Over a period of several months he slipped small bars of gold into the leg, took them home and buried them in his orchard. The largest bar was 14¾ inches long and was 3½ wide and contained about $1,200 worth of gold.

From Way Back

"Highgrading has been going on ever since gold was discovered," says Rowland K. Goddard, secret service agent at Denver, who, a few years ago, helped break up one of the largest highgrading rings ever to operate in the west.

"You can't vaccinate men against the lure of gold," Goddard says. "As long as men dig it from the earth there is going to be highgrading."

"The mine owners expect some highgrading," says Sheriff Guy Warrick of Colorado's San Miguel county, who recently cleaned up a major highgrading case. "It is only when the boys get too hoggish that we have to step in."

The boys got that way recently in Colorado and other mining states. Several were sent to prison for highgrading the fabulously rich flow of yellow metal from the Homestake, the nation's largest gold mine, in South Dakota.

You Can Almost Tell

Three times it has happened in Colorado recently. Goddard has just completed another case in Arizona that involved smuggled gold.

The $35 price for gold has stimulated mining. Thousands of men are digging the metal.

It is impossible to estimate how much is highgraded annually, but Charls O. Parker, Denver assayer, says the business has grown since the price of gold was hiked in 1932.

Furtive, denim-clad, hard-rock men come to Parker, blink nervously and cautionsly inquire: "How about buying a little highgrade?"

"The fellow may have acquired the stuff legitimately," says Parker. "But you can almost tell by looking at many of them that they've been cheating on the boss."

Mining detectives say highgraders apparently are selling most of their stuff to middlemen at about half of its price. The middleman may be a crooked assayer, a gold buyer or anyone who has mastered the technique of refining gold.

It is the big-time middlemen that the mine owners hope to reach and, by wiping them out, caulk the highgrade leaks until they are down to "a reasonable basis" once more.

Assayer Charles O. Parker looks over some chunks of high-grade in his own collection. You can see how easy it would be to slip one in your pocket.

Two Men Killed In Truck Collision

Beltsville, Md., Jan. 23 (AP) — A heavy load of steel, shifted in a collision, rammed through the back of a truck cab today, crushing two men to death.

The victims were identified as Willard C. Williams of Laurel, Del., the driver, and Caesar Esposito of the Bronx, N. Y., his helper.

It took police and rescue units more than an hour to extricate the men's bodies from the wreckage.

Williams' truck rammed the rear of another truck that had stopped for a traffic light on the Washington boulevard. The impact loosened the load of steel rods and beams, which ripped through the cab, piercing the bodies of the occupants.

Californians Develop Buried Treasure Fever

Santa Barbara (AP)—There is a mild treasure-hunting epidemic in this area, following the wide publicity given an unsuccessful attempt to find a cache of gold believed buried in the Hollywood bowl.

Legends of a hoard left by Joaquin Murrieta, famed early-day bandit, have been revived as well as several other treasure stories descending from gold rush days.

One group of men is digging in the Santa Ynez Mountains for a Wells-Fargo Express box, and another is seeking a pirate chest reputed to lie in Veronica Canyon. Another hunt is inspired by the story that Chino Vasquez, who died in prison 50 years ago, hid his loot in Santa Barbara county.

Several Causes For Bad Breath Are Discussed

Decaying Food Particles, Bad Teeth and Diseased Tonsils Blamed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What are the causes of bad breath?

(1) Decaying food particles in the mouth cavity (2) Disease within the mouth cavity, i.e., decaying tooth, tonsil or pyorrhea. (3) Volatile substances which are absorbed from the stomach (garlic, onions) get into the blood stream and which are excreted through the lungs; they may simply seep up from the stomach. (4) Nasal disease, ozena.

A method has been described by research workers by which it is possible to determine both the intensity of odors and their source, as to whether they come from the lungs, the nose or the mouth. Certain investigators believe that food particles play a relatively insignificant part. It is true however, that onion and garlic chewed but not swallowed, may be detected by chemical means from sixty to seventy-two hours after mastication. When garlic or onion is swallowed in capsule form (so that they leave no trace in the mouth), it can be detected for a considerably longer period.

Early morning, i.e., waking—bad breath is probably due to nothing more than the stagnation of mouth fluids and desquamated epithelium in the mouth.

Virtues of Poultice

Is a mustard poultice of any real virtue or is it simply superstition?

Two Japanese investigators, Hiro and Yamanda, impressed with the fact that mustard packs and mustard poultices had considerable therapeutis value, tried to find out whether this was due simply to the sense of heat and blood congestion that occurred. They took rabbits and shaved patches of hair so as to expose the skin and applied concentrated mustard packs for five minutes' duration. They found that the white blood cells were increased by this procedure.

It is known that the white blood cells have a favorable effect in combatting infection. In short, the mustard poultice of our grandmothers is an effective agent for combatting infection, not only because it creates comfort but because it also stimulates the forces of immunity.

Questions and Answers

H. J. L.: "I found this statement in an article in a current magazine. 'Hot pipe stems may bring on cancer of the lips and mineral oil used in textile trades will cause cotton spinner's cancer.' The article made us wonder if there is any evidence to show that the use of mineral oil as a laxative over a long period of time will cause cancer."

Answer Statements such as the one quoted make me particularly impatient. I do not think they have any place in a discussion of cancer for the general public. The duty of the health propagandist for the layman is certainly to avoid controversial subjects, especially those that arouse fear. "I do not want to scare you to death; I want to scare you to life" is a good slogan for cancer advice recently proposed. I do not recall by whom. In other words, the people should have enough information to make them realize that cancer is a local disease, and that when certain signs appear, if taken in time, cancer can be completely removed. The question of the relation of cancer to irritation and chemical irritants is highly controversial. For every person who has a cancer of the lip and who has been using a hot pipe stem, there are thousands who have never had a pipe in their mouths. There is no evidence whatever that mineral oil as a laxative has ever caused cancer, or, indeed, ever does any serious harm of any kind.

LOVED THEIR WORK

Reel romance became real romance as Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan played opposite each other in a Hollywood production, and here they are as they appeared at the county marriage license bureau in Los Angeles and filed notice of intention to wed.

British meteorological office figures show that in spite of London's reputation for November fogs, the average number of foggy days in that month is five.

Develops Corn That Really Pops--Up

Bison, Okla., (AP)—Father H. B. Mandelartz, priest-scientist who last year produced a new type of seed corn that matures in 60 days has been given a new assignment which will permit him more opportunity for experiment in botany and agriculture.

He has been assigned to Maryknoll Apostolic College at Clark's Summit, Pa., affiliated with the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America.

Father Mandelartz experimented with corn and other plants while stationed here as parish priest. His purpose was to produce a variety of corn that would mature before the drought that sometimes comes in southern climate long before the ordinary varieties of corn are ready for harvest.

Surplus Aids Children

Ramona, Calif. (AP) — This quickly took up an offer by Dixon of the State Relief Administration to make surplus commodities available for school lunches. Adequate diet for undernourished children was the idea behind the offer, Dixon said.

West Sees New High in Highgrading —Mine Owners Rally To Lay It Low

By ROBERT GEIGER
AP Feature Service Writer

Denver—Highgraders—mine workers who sneak a chunk or two of high grade ore into their jeans—are meeting some high pressure opposition out west.

Several Colorado mines have hired private detectives; miners' associations have intensified their watch and the United States secret service is on the alert.

A move has been started to have Congress appropriate funds to enable the secret service to expand its anti-highgrading activity.

$100 A Whack

Highgraders usually go for gold ore, gold concentrate or precipitates in mines or mills where they are employed.

This gold, at the present price of $35 an ounce, may be worth from 50 cents to $100 or more a pound. A chunk small enough to slip into a coat pocket may be far more valuable than a day's wages. A mill worker can get enough concentrate after it comes through preliminary milling processes to stow $100 worth in a tobacco tin.

Once in the Denver mint a peg-legged gold worker carried out enough gold bars in his hollowed wooden leg and in a hidden pouch to make a $75,000 pile.

Over a period of several months he slipped small bars of gold into the leg, took them home and buried them in his orchard. The largest bar was 14¾ inches long and was 3½ wide and contained about $1,200 worth of gold.

From Way Back

"Highgrading has been going on ever since gold was discovered," says Rowland K. Goddard, secret service agent at Denver, who, a few years ago, helped break up one of the largest highgrading rings ever to operate in the west.

"You can't vaccinate men against the lure of gold," Goddard says. "As long as men dig it from the earth there is going to be highgrading."

"The mine owners expect some highgrading," says Sheriff Guy Warrick of Colorado's San Miguel county, who recently cleaned up a major highgrading case. "It is only when the boys get too hoggish that we have to step in."

The boys got that way recently in Colorado and other mining states. Several were sent to prison for highgrading the fabulously rich flow of yellow metal from the Homestake, the nation's largest gold mine, in South Dakota.

You Can Almost Tell

Three times it has happened in Colorado recently. Goddard has just completed another case in Arizona that involved smuggled gold.

The $35 price for gold has stimulated mining. Thousands of men are digging the metal.

It is impossible to estimate how much is highgraded annually, but Charls O. Parker, Denver assayer, says the business has grown since the price of gold was hiked in 1932.

Furtive, denim-clad, hard-rock men come to Parker, blink nervously and cautiously inquire: "How about buying a little highgrade?"

"The fellow may have acquired the stuff legitimately," says Parker. "But you can almost tell by looking at many of them that they've been cheating on the boss."

Mining detectives say highgraders apparently are selling most of their stuff to middlemen at about half of its price. The middleman may be a crooked assayer, a gold buyer or anyone who has mastered the technique of refining gold.

It is the big-time middlemen that the mine owners hope to reach and, by wiping them out, caulk the highgrade leaks until they are down to "a reasonable basis" once more.

Assayer Charles O. Parker looks over some chunks of high-grade in his own collection. You can see how easy it would be to slip one in your pocket.

Two Men Killed In Truck Collision

Beltsville, Md., Jan. 23 (AP) — A heavy load of steel, shifted in a collision, rammed through the back of a truck cab today, crushing two men to death.

The victims were identified as Willard C. Williams of Laurel, Del., the driver, and Caesar Esposito of the Bronx, N. Y., his helper.

It took police and rescue units more than an hour to extricate the men's bodies from the wreckage.

Williams' truck rammed the rear of another truck that had stopped for a traffic light on the Washington boulevard. The impact loosened the load of steel rods and beams, which ripped through the cab, piercing the bodies of the occupants.

Californians Develop Buried Treasure Fever

Santa Barbara (AP)—There is a mild treasure-hunting epidemic in this area, following the wide publicity given an unsuccessful attempt to find a cache of gold believed buried in the Hollywood bowl.

Legends of a hoard left by Joaquin Murrieta, famed early-day bandit, have been revived as well as several other treasure stories descending from gold rush days.

One group of men is digging in the Santa Ynez Mountains for a Wells-Fargo Express box, and another is seeking a pirate chest reputed to lie in Veronica Canyon. Another hunt is inspired by the story that Chino Vasquez, who died in prison 50 years ago, hid his loot in Santa Barbara county.

Several Causes For Bad Breath Are Discussed

Decaying Food Particles, Bad Teeth and Diseased Tonsils Blamed

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What are the causes of bad breath?

(1) Decaying food particles in the mouth cavity (2) Disease within the mouth cavity, i.e., decaying tooth, tonsil or pyorrhea. (3) Volatile substances which are absorbed from the stomach (garlic, onions) get into the blood stream and which are excreted through the lungs; they may simply seep up from the stomach. (4) Nasal disease, ozena.

A method has been described by research workers by which it is possible to determine both the intensity of odors and their source, as to whether they come from the lungs, the nose or the mouth. Certain investigators believe that food particles play a relatively insignificant part. It is true however, that onion and garlic chewed but not swallowed, may be detected by chemical means from sixty to seventy-two hours after mastication. When garlic or onion is swallowed in capsule form (so that they leave no trace in the mouth), it can be detected for a considerably longer period.

Early morning, i.e., waking—bad breath is probably due to nothing more than the stagnation of mouth fluids and desquamated epithelium in the mouth.

Virtues of Poultice

Is a mustard poultice of any real virtue or is it simply superstition?

Two Japanese investigators, Hiro and Yamanda, impressed with the fact that mustard packs and mustard poultices had considerable therapeutis value, tried to find out whether this was due simply to the sense of heat and blood congestion that occurred. They took rabbits and shaved patches of hair so as to expose the skin and applied concentrated mustard packs for five minutes' duration. They found that the white blood cells were increased by this procedure.

It is known that the white blood cells have a favorable effect in combatting infection. In short, the mustard poultice of our grandmothers is an effective agent for combatting infection, not only because it creates comfort but because it also stimulates the forces of immunity.

Questions and Answers

H. J. L.: "I found this statement in an article in a current magazine. 'Hot pipe stems may bring on cancer of the lips and mineral oil used in textile trades will cause cotton spinner's cancer.' The article made us wonder if there is any evidence to show that the use of mineral oil as a laxative over a long period of time will cause cancer."

Answer Statements such as the one quoted make me particularly impatient. I do not think they have any place in a discussion of cancer for the general public. The duty of the health propagandist for the layman is certainly to avoid controversial subjects, especially those that arouse fear. "I do not want to scare you to death; I want to scare you to life" is a good slogan for cancer advice recently proposed. I do not recall by whom. In other words, the people should have enough information to make them realize that cancer is a local disease, and that when certain signs appear, if taken in time, cancer can be completely removed. The question of the relation of cancer to irritation and chemical irritants is highly controversial. For every person who has a cancer of the lip and who has been using a hot pipe stem, there are thousands who have never had a pipe in their mouths. There is no evidence whatever that mineral oil as a laxative has ever caused cancer, or, indeed, ever does any serious harm of any kind.

LOVED THEIR WORK

Reel romance became real romance as Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan played opposite each other in a Hollywood production, and here they are as they appeared at the county marriage license bureau in Los Angeles and filed notice of intention to wed.

British meteorological office figures show that in spite of London's reputation for November fogs, the average number of foggy days in that month is five.

Develops Corn That Really Pops--Up

Bison, Okla., (AP)—Father H. B. Mandelartz, priest-scientist who last year produced a new type of seed corn that matures in 60 days has been given a new assignment which will permit him more opportunity for experiment in botany and agriculture.

He has been assigned to Maryknoll Apostolic College at Clark's Summit, Pa., affiliated with the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America.

Father Mandelartz experimented with corn and other plants while stationed here as parish priest. His purpose was to produce a variety of corn that would mature before the drought that sometimes comes in southern climate long before the ordinary varieties of corn are ready for harvest.

Surplus Aids Children

Ramona, Calif. (AP) — This quickly took up an offer by Dixon of the State Relief Administration to make surplus commodities available for school lunches. Adequate diet for undernourished children was the idea behind the offer, Dixon said.

State Sells Bonds At Fine Figure

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP) —Maryland state credit rated tops in the financial marts again today when the state was able to sell a $1,370,000 bond issue at a premium of $101,748 for each $100 bond.

A syndicate headed by the Bankers' Trust Company of New York purchased the issue. The premium will reduce the interest the state must pay to 1.30 per cent annually, one of the lowest rates ever obtained in floating a Maryland bond issue.

Last August a similar issue was floated for 1.24 per cent a year, but state officials expected today's issue would require higher interest, due to the war-disorganized financial market.

Gov. O'Conor attributed the state's improved credit rating to the balanced budget, the refusal to borrow for current expenses and the policy of refusing to divert gasoline taxes from road uses.

Proceeds of the bond sale will go to various state institutions for permanent construction or repair work.

two per cent bag men which he hoped would be able to buy enough votes to make him president of the United States so that he would have more soldiers to play with so he could protect more strangers who displaced miners whose children were hungry and whose wives were sick."

Two "two per cent bagmen" apparently referred to political campaign assessments made in Indiana when McNutt was governor.

Lewis urged the miners to protect their union from "industrial spies, the corporations and the scheming politicians."

The shaggy-browed labor leader, who has headed the mine workers for twenty-two years, received an eight-minute, tumultous ovation as John Owens, president of the Ohio CIO, introduced him as "the greatest labor leader in the world today."

The convention, getting down to formal business, received a report of its international officers recommending liberalized pensions and other changes in the social security program to help the working man.

Recommendations Made

The recommendations included:

Payment of at least $15 a week in unemployment insurance to all jobless persons until they find suitable employment (payments are now confined to a limited number of weeks);

Extension of unemployment insurance to agricultural labor, domestic services and casual labor;

Creation of a national system of unemployment insurance, replacing the state setups, to insure uniform benefits;

Abolishing pay roll taxes, as a means to financing social security, and substituting revenues from higher income, inheritance and gift taxes, and

Increasing old age pensions from $40 a month to $60 and reducing the age requirement from 65 to 60.

The officers also urged that criminal penalties be imposed upon employers violating the National Labor Relations Act, and that such violators be denied government contracts.

No Apology To Offer

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP) — Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, declared tonight he had "no apology to offer" for his labor record as governor of Indiana after John L. Lewis had assailed him as a "political adventurer."

Lewis, addressing the Golden Jubilee convention of the United Mine Workers Union in Columbus, O., referred to McNutt's use of state troops during a labor dispute at Terre Haute, Ind., in 1935.

The mine workers chief, who also heads the CIO, described McNutt as a "political adventurer" and said he was accompanied by "a motley crew of two percent bagmen which he hoped would be able to buy enough votes to make him president of the United States x x x."

McNutt said in a statement that his use of troops in "the tragedy of the Terre Haute strike" was "what I believe any chief executive, sworn to uphold law and order, could not escape doing."

McNutt added:

"I am willing to submit my labor record to the judgment of informed and unprejudiced persons everywhere, and particularly to the leaders of organized labor in Indiana who are familiar with my administration.

"Every union man, every working man in Indiana knows — and John L. Lewis knows it too — that my administration gave the working man in Indiana, and the union movement in that state, its bill of rights."

Action Is Deferred

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—Absence of Budget Director Walter N. Kirkman caused the Board of Public Works to defer action today on discussing emergency funds for the parole and probation division.

Consideration of the budget amendment to aid the department, saddled with a thirty to fifty per cent increase in its work by the 1939 legislature, was on the board's agenda for today.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor previously indicated he was studying plans to relieve the division, but said Kirkman's advice was necessary before the board could act.

Deaths

eral of his father, Clarence Orestes Wotring, who was 62.

The late Mr. Wotring's father, Benjamin E. Wotring, was a member of McNeill's Rangers and one of the company that captured General Crook and Kelly here on Feb. 21, 1865, during the Civil War.

Surviving are another son, Benjamin Wotring, of Detroit; a brother, John C. Wotring, of Barberton, Ohio; three sisters, Mrs. Stella Blamble, of Aurora, W. Va.; Mrs. Eunice Miller, of Woodstock, Va., and Mrs. Ruth Benford, of Barboursville, W. Va.; and four grandchildren.

Claude W. Orndorff

Claude Wellington Orndorff died early yesterday morning at his home, 28 Humbird street. He was 63.

Mr. Orndorff was born at Springfield, W. Va. He was a son of the late Henry H. and Harriet Orndorff. He was employed by the B&O as a machinist helper.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Donaldson Orndorff; five children, William, Walter, and Claude Orndorff, and Mrs. Woodrow Malone, all of Cumberland, and Mrs. Claude V. Chapman, of Harrisonburg, Va.; and three sisters, Mrs. J. L. Siebert, of North Branch; Mrs. Arthur B. French, of Baltimore and Mrs. William A. Siebert, of Cumberland.

William H. Coleman

William H. Coleman, well-known local vocalist, died yesterday morning at his home, 221 Fayette street. He was 70.

Mr. Coleman was a son of the late Henry A. and Sarah Busey Coleman. He had been an office employe of the Kenneweg Company for nearly 20 years.

He was a great music lover and seldom missed a concert.

Surviving are a brother, George Coleman, of Cumberland; and four sisters, Mrs. E. E. Griffey, of Ellerslie; and Misses Lou, Daisy, and Sarah E. Coleman, at home.

Mr. Coleman was a member of the Centre Street Methodist church.

Hallis W. Clark

Hallis W. Clark, formerly of Cumberland, died yesterday at Burlington, Vt., where he had a studio as an artistic photographer. He was 78.

Mr. Clark engaged in photography in Cumberland at 131 Baltimore street, but moved to Vermont eighteen years ago.

He was active in the local Elks lodge while residing here at 32 Pennsylvania avenue.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Genevieve Clark; a daughter, Gladys Clark, and a brother.

Husband and Wife Are Believed To Be Brother and Sister

Indianapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—A hand-holding couple—LeRoy Williamson, twenty, and his eighteen-year old bride Virginia, an expectant mother—learned in court today that their marriage probably cannot be recognized because of evidence they are brother and sister.

Juvenile Judge Wilfred Bradshaw left the way open for further evidence, however, announcing he would not rule finally until Thursday.

"All records available at the present time," he said, "point unerringly to the fact that this boy and girl are at least half-brother and half-sister and thus the law cannot recognize their marriage."

Virginia sobbed frequently during the hearing. Leroy, a slender, neatly-dressed youth, sought to comfort her. Both are wards of the Juvenile court. The girl was reared in a foster home while the boy lived with his mother until her death.

After the hearing Williamson told Judge Bradshaw he finally was convinced that he and Virginia were blood relatives. He went to Urbania, Ill., tonight with an aunt, Mrs. Crystal Harker, to remain until Thursday's hearing.

Bombers Are Grounded

March Field, Calif., Jan. 23 (AP)—Nineteen army bombers taking part in a mass movement of ground troops arrived today after nineteen others were grounded by a heavy rainstorm.

The planes left Hamilton field in Northern California in two groups.

The second group, forced down at the Kern county airport near Bakersfield, left thirty minutes after the first flight.

Initial reports said all of the Douglas bombers had been grounded.

Each ship carried nine men and an officer in addition to normal crews.

Mine Legislation Sent to Committee

Washington, Jan 23 (AP) — The future of legislation to provide federal inspection of all coal mines was placed in the hands of the House Mines and Mining Committee today.

Committee members said a meeting probably would be held within a few days to decide whether hearing should be held on the measure pased last week by the senate.

Coal operators have opposed the measure as unnecessary duplication of inspections by State Mining Departments.

The United Mine Workers, on the other hand, have declared the bill (S2420) by Senator Neely (D-WVa) would aid in reducing the number of deaths and accidents in the mines.

Among the heavy tax payers in the United States are 44,548,914 savings bank depositors and roughly 14,000,000 Americans in homes they own, according to Commerce department records.

Researchers Postpone Parley at City Hall

The discussion scheduled for today between the mayor and city council and the executive committee of the Allegany County Taxpayers Research Association has been postponed until tomorrow, H. W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said.

The meeting was postponed due to the fact that Frank Smith, chairman of the committee, was called out of town on business. The discussion will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the office of Mayor Harry Irvine.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to "cure" it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Appreciation Essential

You cannot offend people by your appreciation of their efforts to entertain you or to make you happy. The rudest person is he or she who receives favors of this kind and never so much as expresses a word of appreciation by word of mouth or a pleasant note.

le Sells Bonds Fine Figure

napolis, Jan. 23 (AP) —Maryland credit rated tops in the finan- marts again today when the was able to sell a $1,370,000 issue at a premium of $101,748 ach $100 bond.

syndicate headed by the Bank- Trust Company of New York hased the issue. The premium reduce the interest the state pay to 1.30 per cent annually, of the lowest rates ever ob- d in floating a Maryland bond st August a similar issue was ed for 1.24 per cent a year, but officials expected today's is- would require higher interest, to the war-disorganized finan- market.

ov. O'Conor attributed the state's roved credit rating to the nced budget, the refusal to bor- for current expenses and the y of refusing to divert gaso- taxes from road uses.

oceeds of the bond sale will go various state institutions for nanent construction or repair

two per cent bag men which he hoped would be able to buy enough votes to make him president of the United States so that he would have more soldiers to play with so he could protect more strangers who displaced miners whose children were hungry and whose wives were sick."

Two "two per cent bagmen" apparently referred to political campaign assessments made in Indiana when McNutt was governor.

Lewis urged the miners to protect their union from "industrial spies, the corporations and the scheming politicians."

The shaggy-browed labor leader, who has headed the mine workers for twenty-two years, received an eight-minute, tumultous ovation as John Owens, president of the Ohio CIO, introduced him as "the greatest labor leader in the world today."

The convention, getting down to formal business, received a report of its international officers recommending liberalized pensions and other changes in the social security program to help the working man.

Recommendations Made

The recommendations included:

Payment of at least $15 a week in unemployment insurance to all jobless persons until they find suitable employment (payments are now confined to a limited number of weeks);

Extension of unemployment insurance to agricultural labor, domestic services and casual labor;

Creation of a national system of unemployment insurance, replacing the state setups, to insure uniform benefits;

Abolishing pay roll taxes, as a means to financing social security, and substituting revenues from higher income, inheritance and gift taxes, and

Increasing old age pensions from $40 a month to $60 and reducing the age requirement from 65 to 60.

The officers also urged that criminal penalties be imposed upon employers violating the National Labor Relations Act, and that such violators be denied government contracts.

No Apology To Offer

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP) — Paul V. McNutt, federal security administrator, declared tonight he had "no apology to offer" for his labor record as governor of Indiana after John L. Lewis had assailed him as a "political adventurer."

Lewis, addressing the Golden Jubilee convention of the United Mine Workers Union in Columbus, O., referred to McNutt's use of state troops during a labor dispute at Terre Haute, Ind., in 1935.

The mine workers chief, who also heads the CIO, described McNutt as a "political adventurer" and said he was accompanied by "a motley crew of two percent bagmen which he hoped would be able to buy enough votes to make him president of the United States x x x."

McNutt said in a statement that his use of troops in "the tragedy of the Terre Haute strike" was "what I believe any chief executive, sworn to uphold law and order, could not escape doing."

McNutt added:

"I am willing to submit my labor record to the judgment of informed and unprejudiced persons everywhere, and particularly to the leaders of organized labor in Indiana who are familiar with my administration.

"Every union man, every working man in Indiana knows — and John L. Lewis knows it too — that my administration gave the working man in Indiana, and the union movement in that state, its bill of rights."

Action Is Deferred

Annapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—Absence of Budget Director Walter N. Kirkman caused the Board of Public Works to defer action today on discussing emergency funds for the parole and probation division.

Consideration of the budget amendment to aid the department, saddled with a thirty to fifty per cent increase in its work by the 1939 legislature, was on the board's agenda for today.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor previously indicated he was studying plans to relieve the division, but said Kirkman's advice was necessary before the board could act.

Deaths

eral of his father, Clarence Orestes Wotring, who was 62.

The late Mr. Wotring's father, Benjamin E. Wotring, was a member of McNeill's Rangers and one of the company that captured General Crook and Kelly here on Feb. 21, 1865, during the Civil War.

Surviving are another son, Benjamin Wotring, of Detroit; a brother, John C. Wotring, of Barberton, Ohio; three sisters, Mrs. Stella Blamble, of Aurora, W. Va.; Mrs. Eunice Miller, of Woodstock, Va., and Mrs. Ruth Benford, of Barboursville, W. Va.; and four grandchildren.

Claude W. Orndorff

Claude Wellington Orndorff died early yesterday morning at his home, 28 Humbird street. He was 63.

Mr. Orndorff was born at Springfield, W. Va. He was a son of the late Henry H. and Harriet Orndorff. He was employed by the B&O as a machinist helper.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Donaldson Orndorff; five children, William, Walter, and Claude Orndorff, and Mrs. Woodrow Malone, all of Cumberland, and Mrs. Claude V. Chapman, of Harrisonburg, Va.; and three sisters, Mrs. J. L. Siebert, of North Branch; Mrs. Arthur B. French, of Baltimore and Mrs. William A. Siebert, of Cumberland.

William H. Coleman

William H. Coleman, well-known local vocalist, died yesterday morning at his home, 221 Fayette street. He was 70.

Mr. Coleman was a son of the late Henry A. and Sarah Busey Coleman. He had been an office employe of the Kenneweg Company for nearly 20 years.

He was a great music lover and seldom missed a concert.

Surviving are a brother, George Coleman, of Cumberland; and four sisters, Mrs. E. E. Griffey, of Ellerslie; and Misses Lou, Daisy, and Sarah E. Coleman, at home.

Mr. Coleman was a member of the Centre Street Methodist church.

Hallis W. Clark

Hallis W. Clark, formerly of Cumberland, died yesterday at Burlington, Vt., where he had a studio as an artistic photographer. He was 78.

Mr. Clark engaged in photography in Cumberland at 131 Baltimore street, but moved to Vermont eighteen years ago.

He was active in the local Elks lodge while residing here at 32 Pennsylvania avenue.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Genevieve Clark; a daughter, Gladys Clark, and a brother.

Husband and Wife Are Believed To Be Brother and Sister

Indianapolis, Jan. 23 (AP)—A hand-holding couple—LeRoy Williamson, twenty, and his eighteen-year old bride Virginia, an expectant mother—learned in court today that their marriage probably cannot be recognized because of evidence they are brother and sister.

Juvenile Judge Wilfred Bradshaw left the way open for further evidence, however, announcing he would not rule finally until Thursday.

"All records available at the present time," he said, "point unerringly to the fact that this boy and girl are at least half-brother and half-sister and thus the law cannot recognize their marriage."

Virginia sobbed frequently during the hearing. Leroy, a slender, neatly-dressed youth, sought to comfort her. Both are wards of the Juvenile court. The girl was reared in a foster home while the boy lived with his mother until her death.

After the hearing Williamson told Judge Bradshaw he finally was convinced that he and Virginia were blood relatives. He went to Urbania, Ill., tonight with an aunt, Mrs. Crystal Harker, to remain until Thursday's hearing.

Bombers Are Grounded

March Field, Calif., Jan. 23 (AP)—Nineteen army bombers taking part in a mass movement of ground troops arrived today after nineteen others were grounded by a heavy rainstorm.

The planes left Hamilton field in Northern California in two groups.

The second group, forced down at the Kern county airport near Bakersfield, left thirty minutes after the first flight.

Initial reports said all of the Douglas bombers had been grounded.

Each ship carried nine men and an officer in addition to normal crews.

Mine Legislation Sent to Committee

Washington, Jan 23 (AP) — The future of legislation to provide federal inspection of all coal mines was placed in the hands of the House Mines and Mining Committee today.

Committee members said a meeting probably would be held within a few days to decide whether hearing should be held on the measure pased last week by the senate.

Coal operators have opposed the measure as unnecessary duplication of inspections by State Mining Departments.

The United Mine Workers, on the other hand, have declared the bill (S2420) by Senator Neely (D-WVa) would aid in reducing the number of deaths and accidents in the mines.

Among the heavy tax payers in the United States are 44,548,914 savings bank depositors and roughly 14,000,000 Americans in homes they own, according to Commerce department records.

Researchers Postpone Parley at City Hall

The discussion scheduled for today between the mayor and city council and the executive committee of the Allegany County Taxpayers Research Association has been postponed until tomorrow, H. W. Smith, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said.

The meeting was postponed due to the fact that Frank Smith, chairman of the committee, was called out of town on business. The discussion will be held tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the office of Mayor Harry Irvine.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with constipation is get at its cause. That way you don't have to endure it first and try to "cure" it afterward—you can avoid having it.

Chances are you won't have to look far for the cause if you eat the super-refined foods most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk"! And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this is what you lack, try crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains just the "bulk" you need.

Eat All-Bran often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Appreciation Essential

You cannot offend people by your appreciation of their efforts to entertain you or to make you happy. The rudest person is he or she who receives favors of this kind and never so much as expresses a word of appreciation by word of mouth or a pleasant note.

Gains of Fractions Made by Some Stocks in Dull Trading

Market Swings between Minor Recoveries and Small Declines

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Jan. 23 (AP) — Stocks swung between minor recoveries and declines in today's market.

While gains of fractions to more than a point were fairly well distributed at the close, losers of small amounts were plentiful.

Dealings were slow throughout, although a bit better than yesterday. Transfers totalled 513,340 shares. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 49.6.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem tripped up at one time but revived at the finish for net gains of major fractions.

Heavy oversubscription of the new 225,000-share offering of Lockheed helped the aircrafts generally, although the listed issue of this company slipped to 28 3-4.

On the losing end were U. S. Rubber, American Telephone, Santa Fe, American Can, Union Carbide, J. I. Case, Kennecott and Texas Corp.

Losses running to more than a point were posted in the Curb or Humble Oil, American Gas & Electric, American Cyanamid "B" and Lake Shore. S. Blumenthal gained two points and fractions were added to International Petroleum and Sunray Oil. Turnover was 115,000 shares.

Theaters Today

Frankie Masters and Orchestra on Maryland Stage Today Only

"The best laid plans of mice and men often go astray" is a quotation from a famous literary figure which has often been used and as often proved to be very true as most of us go through our span of years.

It proved itself in no uncertain manner in the case of young Frankie Masters, the genial orchestra leader who brings his famous aggregation of musicians and entertainers to the Maryland theater today only at 1:50, 4, 7 and 9 p. m. through arrangements with the Music Corporation of America.

For the distinguished baton waver, upon enrolling at Indiana University had no intention of ever devoting his life to dispensing dance rhythms. Instead, he majored in economics and banking, and hoped some day to establish himself in the brokerage field.

As a matter of fact, he did attempt to align himself with the banks in his native town of Robinson, Illinois, following his graduation, but they would have none of him and Frankie true to the above adage, found all of his plans going astray. A chance invitation to accompany a group of musicians on a trip around the world met with a hasty acceptance and Masters inadvertently threw away all further plans for becoming a banker.

The screen attraction with Frankie Masters and his orchestra will be Tony Martin and Rita Hayworth in "Music In My Heart", with Edith Fellows, Alan Mowbray and Eric Blore in the supporting roles.

Rise of Chicago And Merchant Prince Film's Dual Theme

The inspiring growth of Chicago, following its destruction by the great holocaust in 1871, and the rise of a merchant prince who staked his fate and fortune on the future of the inland metropolis, forms the dual theme of "Three Sons," now showing at the Liberty.

Said to be based on the composite careers of several tycoons whose success grew from the ashes of the Chicago fire, the gripping story presents Edward Ellis as a shrewd merchant who settles in the Illinois city and establishes a bargain store in a livery stable. Confident of the city's future, he is determined to build up a dynasty for his children.

His business steadily grows into a huge enterprise along with the development of the new Chicago, and in the meantime three sons and a daughter are born and attain maturity. But the father's dreams that his sons will become his business partners are dissipated when too much money and luxury spoil them and lead them into scandalous entanglements.

O'BRIEN'S SCREEN FIGHT

A fight scene, filmed during the making of "The Marshal of Mesa City," now showing at the Liberty, George O'Brien's new outdoor drama, between O'Brien and Harry Cording, will be remembered on the RKO Radio lot for many days to come.

Both men have years of experience in screen battles, but each say the fight in "The Marshal of Mesa City" was one of the toughest they've ever done. Lasting for ten minutes it looked as though it would be anyone's fight but when O'Brien landed a terrific right to Cording's jaw, which sent him flying through a closed door, the battle was over.

Fortunately, knowing how to fight for the screen, neither of the men were hurt beyond a few minor bruises, but while it lasted the battle was terrific and one which will be remembered a long time by those who saw it filmed.

David Howard directed "The Marshal of Mesa City", for RKO Radio. Members of the strong supporting cast include Virginia Vale, Leon Ames, Harry Brandon, Lloyd Ingraham, Mary Gordon, Slim Whitaker and Joe McGuinn.

'These Glamour Girls' And 'The Law Commands'

Ever since he wrote "The Masquerade" for his schoolmates of Washburn High School in Minneapolis, Richard Carlson had saved a bow for Broadway, although he didn't think he would soon be appearing on the screen. But, not many years after, Hollywood claimed him and he now appears in "These Glamour Girls" playing at the Embassy theater. Born in Albert Lea, Minnesota, April 29, Carlson moved to Minneapolis when six years old and there received his education, graduating from the University of Minnesota. He started as an English instructor at the university, captured a $2500 prize for writing, and started his own repertory company. After producing three plays, he found that $2500 didn't go far. So he left for New York and appeared in a number of Broadway hits before coming to Hollywood where he made his motion picture debut in "The Young in Heart." He married Mona Mayfield two days before starting his role in "These Glamour Girls."

The second feature being Tom Keene in the action drama "The Law Commands."

Giant's Voice Studio's Worst Sound Problem

Add to the headaches suffered by producers translating literary fantasies to the screen through the medium of the animated cartoon: Max Fleischer's efforts to strike a balance between the voice of the giant-size "Gulliver" and the voices of the peanut-sized "Lilliputians" in his Technicolor film version of "Gulliver's Travels!"

"Gulliver" stands over six feet and the "Lilliputians" only stand about six inches. Consequently, there had to be a variation in depth and power of the voice to give the illusion of a giant talking when compared to the diminutive people.

The experimentation required several days. At first Dave Fleischer, director of the picture, attempted to capture the illusion by stationing persons voicing the roles of the "Lilliputians" farther from the microphone than Sam Parker, who voiced the role of "Gulliver." The sensitiveness of the microphones, however, precluded solving the problem in this manner.

Finally, Parker was stationed behind the microphone and close to it while the others were stationed in front and about five feet away. By amplifying the power when Parker was talking, the microphone picked up just the proper amount of distortion and volume to give a pleasant, deep voice to Gulliver. Diminishing the power for the Lilliputians provided the proper contrast.

"Gulliver's Travels," the Technicolor cartoon feature playing at the Strand today and tomorrow, brings to life Jonathan Swift's immortal fantasy of the English seaman who was shipwrecked in "Lilliput," a land where everything—people, buildings, scenery—were all in miniature size.

UNEXPECTED CHORE

FIRST LOVE

Deanna Durbin, as she appears in her initial romantic drama, Universal's "First Love." Opening tomorrow at the Maryland Theater for a four day showing.

MELODY-MAN

'D. A.' MacMurray, 'Thief' Stanwyck in Comedy Hit

A saucy story of a district attorney who falls in love with a girl he's trying to send to prison, directed with the Mitchell Leisen magic from an original story by Preston Sturges, is presented in "Remember the Night," Paramount's latest contribution to gaiety opening Friday at the Strand Theatre.

The role of district attorney is played by Fred MacMurray, recently in the comedy success "Honey-moon in Bali," while the lovely felon portraying the girl who steals his heart is Barbara Stanwyck, whose most recent screen success is "Golden Boy." Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson and Sterling Holloway round out the big supporting cast.

One of the features of "Remember the Night" is a swing rendition of the perennially popular "Back Home in Indiana," rendered by Martha Mears of radio fame and The King's Men. The music is used to set the mood of the picture, most of the action of which is centered on an Indiana farm. "Fuzzy" Knight also appears as the leader of a farm-boy orchestra, which, among other things, supplies a real old-fashioned "heel and toe" polka.

"Remember the Night" is described as a light comedy romance of the type made famous by Leisen, who is best known for his "Swing High, Swing Low," "Artists and Models Abroad," and the Claudette Colbert hit, "Midnight." The author, Preston Sturges, is best remembered for his "Strictly Dishonorable", "One Rainy Afternoon" and "Easy Living."

Garfield and Lane Team Starred In Garden Drama

"Dust Be My Destiny," the new film opening today at the Garden, has John Garfield and Priscilla Lane in the starring role, and although this is the third picture in which they have been teamed, it is the first one in which they achieve what promises to be lasting marital happiness.

For all its happy ending, however, the new picture carries the young couple over a hard and rocky road before they reach the end of the rainbow. Throughout most of the film's poignant and often melodramatically exciting course, the two youngsters flee like a couple of hunted animals from officers who believe the boy has murdered his girl-wife's stepfather.

Yes, they're married very early in the proceedings, but it is a long time before they are able to lead a normal, happy married life. And, in the end, it is only the noble courage of the young wife which brings about this happy consummation.

"Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence," the 20th Century-Fox film which opens today at the Garden Theatre, is a picture that fills an important void in the screen's treatment of modern youth and its problems. An excellent, entertaining production, this film is a story of a hitch-hike girl and a boy on the road. All of us have heard of youngsters like these; here is the opportunity to roam with them and discover just what they are like. Jean Rogers, Raymond Walburn, Marjorie Rambeau, Glenn Ford and Nicholas Conte are featured in the cast. Ricardo Cortez directed, with Sol M. Wurtzel executive producer.

Proper Handshaking

Four persons, meeting, should not shake hands all at once—in wheel fashion. When two women and two men meet, it is best if the men shake hands and the women greet each other verbally with nod and smile.

A rain crow is not a crow nor is a water thrush a thrush, a nighthawk a hawk nor a water-turkey a turkey.

By FREDERICK GARDNER

New York, Jan. 23 (AP) — Stocks swung between minor recoveries and declines in today's market.

While gains of fractions to more than a point were fairly well distributed at the close, losers of small amounts were plentiful.

Dealings were slow throughout, although a bit better than yesterday. Transfers totalled 513,340 shares. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 49.6.

U. S. Steel and Bethlehem tripped up at one time but revived at the finish for net gains of major fractions.

Heavy oversubscription of the new 225,000-share offering of Lockheed helped the aircrafts generally, although the listed issue of this company slipped to 28 3-4.

On the losing end were U. S. Rubber, American Telephone, Santa Fe, American Can, Union Carbide, J. I. Case, Kennecott and Texas Corp.

Losses running to more than a point were posted in the Curb or Humble Oil, American Gas & Electric, American Cyanamid "B" and Lake Shore. S. Blumenthal gained two points and fractions were added to International Petroleum and Sunray Oil. Turnover was 115,000 shares.

Chicago Grain Prices

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP)—The wheat market weakened today after a steady to easier start and prices at times lost 1⅛ cents a bushel. Closing values were near the day's lows.

Wheat closed 1-1¾ down, May 99⅝-½, July 96⅞-¾; corn 1-1¼ down, May and July 57¼; oats ⅛-¼ down; soy beans 2¾-3 cents down; rye 1-1¼ down; lard 12 to 18 cents a hundredweight lower.

Other grains here gave ground with wheat. Corn declined 1¼ cents and finished near its lows.

Frankie Masters and Orchestra on Maryland Stage Today Only

"The best laid plans of mice and men often go astray" is a quotation from a famous literary figure which has often been used and as often proved to be very true as most of us go through our span of years.

It proved itself in no uncertain manner in the case of young Frankie Masters, the genial orchestra leader who brings his famous aggregation of musicians and entertainers to the Maryland theater today only at 1:50, 4, 7 and 9 p. m. through arrangements with the Music Corporation of America.

For the distinguished baton waver, upon enrolling at Indiana University had no intention of ever devoting his life to dispensing dance rhythms. Instead, he majored in economics and banking, and hoped some day to establish himself in the brokerage field.

As a matter of fact, he did attempt to align himself with the banks in his native town of Robinson, Illinois, following his graduation, but they would have none of him and Frankie true to the above adage, found all of his plans going astray. A chance invitation to accompany a group of musicians on a trip around the world met with a hasty acceptance and Masters inadvertently threw away all further plans for becoming a banker.

The screen attraction with Frankie Masters and his orchestra will be Tony Martin and Rita Hayworth in "Music In My Heart", with Edith Fellows, Alan Mowbray and Eric Blore in the supporting roles.

Rise of Chicago And Merchant Prince Film's Dual Theme

The inspiring growth of Chicago, following its destruction by the great holocaust in 1871, and the rise of a merchant prince who staked his fate and fortune on the future of the inland metropolis, forms the dual theme of "Three Sons," now showing at the Liberty.

Said to be based on the composite careers of several tycoons whose success grew from the ashes of the Chicago fire, the gripping story presents Edward Ellis as a shrewd merchant who settles in the Illinois city and establishes a bargain store in a livery stable. Confident of the city's future, he is determined to build up a dynasty for his children.

His business steadily grows into a huge enterprise along with the development of the new Chicago, and in the meantime three sons and a daughter are born and attain maturity. But the father's dreams that his sons will become his business partners are dissipated when too much money and luxury spoil them and lead them into scandalous entanglements.

O'BRIEN'S SCREEN FIGHT

A fight scene, filmed during the making of "The Marshal of Mesa City," now showing at the Liberty, George O'Brien's new outdoor drama, between O'Brien and Harry Cording, will be remembered on the RKO Radio lot for many days to come.

Both men have years of experience in screen battles, but each say the fight in "The Marshal of Mesa City" was one of the toughest they've ever done. Lasting for ten minutes it looked as though it would be anyone's fight but when O'Brien landed a terrific right to Cording's jaw, which sent him flying through a closed door, the battle was over.

Fortunately, knowing how to fight for the screen, neither of the men were hurt beyond a few minor bruises, but while it lasted the battle was terrific and one which will be remembered a long time by those who saw it filmed.

David Howard directed "The Marshal of Mesa City", for RKO Radio. Members of the strong supporting cast include Virginia Vale, Leon Ames, Harry Brandon, Lloyd Ingraham, Mary Gordon, Slim Whitaker and Joe McGuinn.

'These Glamour Girls' And 'The Law Commands'

Ever since he wrote "The Masquerade" for his schoolmates of Washburn High School in Minneapolis, Richard Carlson had saved a bow for Broadway, although he didn't think he would soon be appearing on the screen. But, not many years after, Hollywood claimed him and he now appears in "These Glamour Girls" playing at the Embassy theater. Born in Albert Lea, Minnesota, April 29, Carlson moved to Minneapolis when six years old and there received his education, graduating from the University of Minnesota. He started as an English instructor at the university, captured a $2500 prize for writing, and started his own repertory company. After producing three plays, he found that $2500 didn't go far. So he left for New York and appeared in a number of Broadway hits before coming to Hollywood where he made his motion picture debut in "The Young in Heart." He married Mona Mayfield two days before starting his role in "These Glamour Girls."

The second feature being Tom Keene in the action drama "The Law Commands."

Giant's Voice Studio's Worst Sound Problem

Add to the headaches suffered by producers translating literary fantasies to the screen through the medium of the animated cartoon: Max Fleischer's efforts to strike a balance between the voice of the giant-size "Gulliver" and the voices of the peanut-sized "Lilliputians" in his Technicolor film version of "Gulliver's Travels!"

"Gulliver" stands over six feet and the "Lilliputians" only stand about six inches. Consequently, there had to be a variation in depth and power of the voice to give the illusion of a giant talking when compared to the diminutive people.

The experimentation required several days. At first Dave Fleischer, director of the picture, attempted to capture the illusion by stationing persons voicing the roles of the "Lilliputians" farther from the microphone than Sam Parker, who voiced the role of "Gulliver." The sensitiveness of the microphones, however, precluded solving the problem in this manner.

Finally, Parker was stationed behind the microphone and close to it while the others were stationed in front and about five feet away. By amplifying the power when Parker was talking, the microphone picked up just the proper amount of distortion and volume to give a pleasant, deep voice to Gulliver. Diminishing the power for the Lilliputians provided the proper contrast.

"Gulliver's Travels," the Technicolor cartoon feature playing at the Strand today and tomorrow, brings to life Jonathan Swift's immortal fantasy of the English seaman who was shipwrecked in "Lilliput," a land where everything—people, buildings, scenery—were all in miniature size.

UNEXPECTED CHORE

FIRST LOVE

Deanna Durbin, as she appears in her initial romantic drama, Universal's "First Love." Opening tomorrow at the Maryland Theater for a four day showing.

MELODY-MAN

'D. A.' MacMurray, 'Thief' Stanwyck in Comedy Hit

A saucy story of a district attorney who falls in love with a girl he's trying to send to prison, directed with the Mitchell Leisen magic from an original story by Preston Sturges, is presented in "Remember the Night," Paramount's latest contribution to gaiety opening Friday at the Strand Theatre.

The role of district attorney is played by Fred MacMurray, recently in the comedy success "Honey-moon in Bali," while the lovely felon portraying the girl who steals his heart is Barbara Stanwyck, whose most recent screen success is "Golden Boy." Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson and Sterling Holloway round out the big supporting cast.

One of the features of "Remember the Night" is a swing rendition of the perennially popular "Back Home in Indiana," rendered by Martha Mears of radio fame and The King's Men. The music is used to set the mood of the picture, most of the action of which is centered on an Indiana farm. "Fuzzy" Knight also appears as the leader of a farm-boy orchestra, which, among other things, supplies a real old-fashioned "heel and toe" polka.

"Remember the Night" is described as a light comedy romance of the type made famous by Leisen, who is best known for his "Swing High, Swing Low," "Artists and Models Abroad," and the Claudette Colbert hit, "Midnight." The author, Preston Sturges, is best remembered for his "Strictly Dishonorable", "One Rainy Afternoon" and "Easy Living."

Garfield and Lane Team Starred In Garden Drama

"Dust Be My Destiny," the new film opening today at the Garden, has John Garfield and Priscilla Lane in the starring role, and although this is the third picture in which they have been teamed, it is the first one in which they achieve what promises to be lasting marital happiness.

For all its happy ending, however, the new picture carries the young couple over a hard and rocky road before they reach the end of the rainbow. Throughout most of the film's poignant and often melodramatically exciting course, the two youngsters flee like a couple of hunted animals from officers who believe the boy has murdered his girl-wife's stepfather.

Yes, they're married very early in the proceedings, but it is a long time before they are able to lead a normal, happy married life. And, in the end, it is only the noble courage of the young wife which brings about this happy consummation.

"Heaven with a Barbed Wire Fence," the 20th Century-Fox film which opens today at the Garden Theatre, is a picture that fills an important void in the screen's treatment of modern youth and its problems. An excellent, entertaining production, this film is a story of a hitch-hike girl and a boy on the road. All of us have heard of youngsters like these; here is the opportunity to roam with them and discover just what they are like. Jean Rogers, Raymond Walburn, Marjorie Rambeau, Glenn Ford and Nicholas Conte are featured in the cast. Ricardo Cortez directed, with Sol M. Wurtzel executive producer.

Holland Extends Front in Private War

New Polder Nearly Encircled in Big Zuider Zee Offensive

By Cornelius Vanderbreggen, Jr.
AP Feature Service

The author of this sea" war" article has recently returned from Holland, where he visited and studied the amazing project he describes.

Twenty years ago Holland started a war. It was admittedly an imperialistic war — against the waters of the Zuider Zee.

Dutch engineers believed they could sever this body of water from the North Sea by a huge dike. With that accomplished they would embank four large undersea areas, pump out the water, bring to light more than 800 square miles of fertile land and thus increase the agricultural area of the Netherlands by 10 per cent, the total area by 7 per cent.

A Langkrieg

Plans were carefully outlined in 1919. A year later materials and financial resources had been mobilized. The war began. No one was foolish enough to imagine that it would be a blitzkrieg. The most optimistic prediction was that it would last 40 years.

One of the things that had convinced the Dutch of their need for more cultivatable land was the occurance of serious food shortages during the World War.

Today Europe is aflame again, but Holland has not abated operations against its formidable enemy. Up to last September the following victories had been chalked against the Zuider Zee.

1. The 19-mile long Afsluitdijk (partitioning dike) had been completed after a twelve year fight. The Zuider Zee existed no more. In its place was an inland lake named after its tributary, the Ijssel River.

2. The first polder (dike - surrounded area) had been pumped dry. Named after the adjoining island of Wieringen, it contained 48,000 acres of fertile soil. Villages had arisen on its flat expanses, red-roofed farmhouses had been built. Farmers had sown their first crops in 1933. Three hundred farmers had applied for the 29 available holdings in 1939. The Dutch had started to call Wieringermeer Polder the Promised Land.

3. The $15,000,000 estimated as necesary for creating the Northeast Polder had been obtained. An offensive had been launched.

Planting The Flag

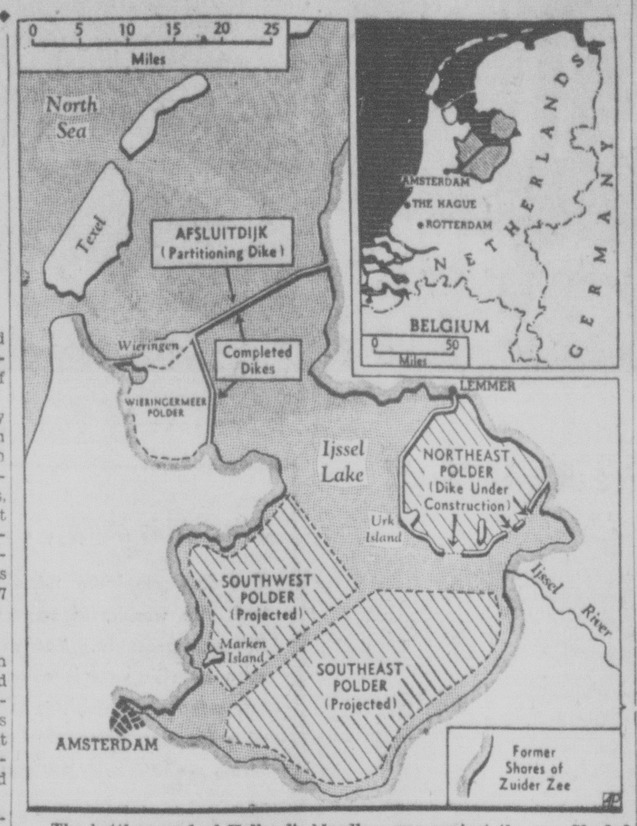
A month and a day after Germany invaded Poland, the clay dike between the island of Urk and the town of Lemmer was completed.

All Holland rejoiced. The burgomaster of Urk met the burgomaster of Lemmer on top of the 18-foot-wide dike and shook hands. A woman from Urk, in local costume, planted the red, white, and blue flag of Holland in the new dike.

In less than a year the twenty-mile dike stretching eastward from Urk is to be completed. Only three gaps remain. Pumping stations have been completed. As soon as the impoldering has been effected, pumps will churn, millions of gallons of water will be ejected into Ijssel Lake, and the Northeast Polder — 132,000 acres of the newest land in the world will come into existence.

Before this unpopulated area has been completely subjugated by agrarian members of Holland's constantly increasing populace work will start on the 140,000-acre Southwest Polder. Then the 230,000-acre Southeast Polder will be brought to light.

When Holland's war is over — in about 1960 — it will have made homes for some 300,000 Dutch people. It will have created 6,000 economic holdings. It will have noticeably increased the output of wheat, rye, barley that are so necessary for a nation that eats two meals of bread daily. Yet not one foreign border will have been crossed, not one gun will have been fired, not one soldier will have been slaughtered on the field of battle to accomplish it.



The battleground of Holland's bloodless war against the sea. Shaded sections of inset show locations of polders (reclaimed areas).

How To Lose an Election and Win Office

Twisp, Wash., (AP)—During the recent mayorality election in this central Washington town, instead of condemning and outpromising one another, each of the two candidates campaigned for—not against—his opponent.

George H. Gibson passed out cigars, kissed babies and made speeches. But he always urged voters to re-elect Mayor W. H. Farmer. He even had circulars printd to boost Farmer.

Mayor Farmer arranged and urged parades in which honking automobiles carried banners reading: "We want Gibson for mayor."

Gibson, who hard arranged to lead an old gray mare through town bearing a banner "the old gray mayor ain't what he used to be, but vote for him anyway," was unexpectedly called out of Twisp and the parade fell through.

That might be the reason Gibson "lost." He was elected by an eight vote majority.

Hops off Train In Pajamas

Louisville Ky., (AP) — Ben Cregor broker, had arranged a business trip and about midnight was driven to the railroad station by guests whom he had been entertaining in his suburban home.

Once on the train, he took off his clothing and wriggled into his pajames in a sleeping car berth when he suddenly remembered he had left his brief case, carrying all the documents needed, at home.

Without hesitation, despite the cold weather, he pulled on an overcoat over his pajames, dashed out of the train-shed and hailed a taxicab. At breakneck speed, the taxi carried him to his home 15 miles away and back to the station again.

He sprinted to the train and hopped aboard just as the conductor gave the starting signal.

Cecil Democrat Will Be 100 Saturday

Elkton, Md., Jan 23 (AP) — The Cecil Democrat—a weekly newspaper whose first editor paid with his life for his views—will celebrate its one-hundreth anniversary Saturday.

But, said editor-owner Frederick B. Leffler, the present policy "is not to lambast anybody too much."

Armor T. Foreward, first editor, was shot and killed in a quarrel in 1843 with Palmer B. Ricketts, editor of the rival "Cecil Whig," after an intense battle of pens.

The weekly, one of Maryland's oldest newspapers, was actually started in 1834, but its first name "The Cecil Gazette and Farmers and Mechanics Advertiser" was changed to "Cecil Democrat and Farmers Journal" in 1840. The name was shortened in 1850.

Unicorn Protective Society Disbands

Unicorn, Pa., Jan. 23 (AP) — The Unicorn Protective Society, organized seventy-two years ago to combat horse stealing, has decided to disband.

The organization's last annual report said merely:

"No business, no losses, no exciting events."

The Adams, Harrison and Roosevelt families have each given two presidents to the United States.

Holland Extends Front in Private War

By Cornelius Vanderbreggen, Jr.
AP Feature Service

The author of this sea" war" article has recently returned from Holland, where he visited and studied the amazing project he describes.

Twenty years ago Holland started a war. It was admittedly an imperialistic war — against the waters of the Zuider Zee.

Dutch engineers believed they could sever this body of water from the North Sea by a huge dike. With that accomplished they would embank four large undersea areas, pump out the water, bring to light more than 800 square miles of fertile land and thus increase the agricultural area of the Netherlands by 10 per cent, the total area by 7 per cent.

A Langkrieg

Plans were carefully outlined in 1919. A year later materials and financial resources had been mobilized. The war began. No one was foolish enough to imagine that it would be a blitzkrieg. The most optimistic prediction was that it would last 40 years.

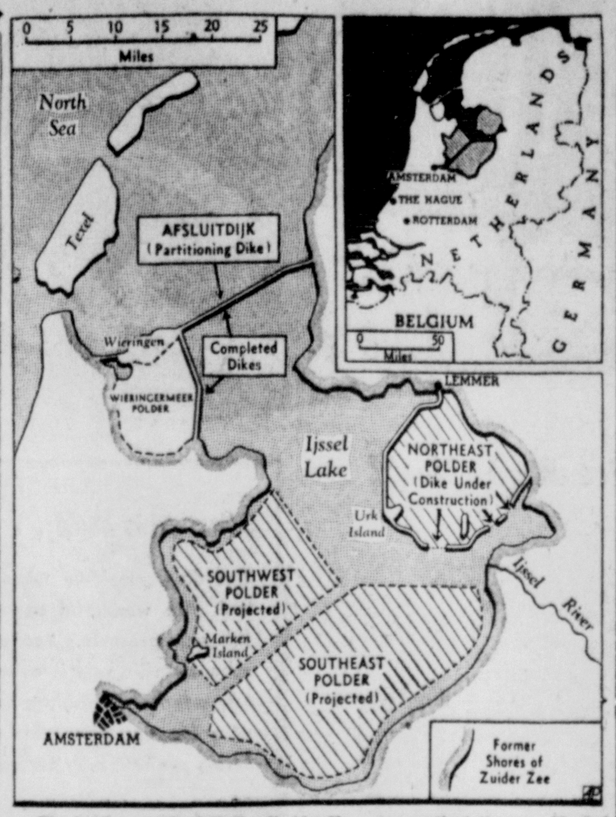
One of the things that had convinced the Dutch of their need for more cultivatable land was the occurance of serious food shortages during the World War.

Today Europe is aflame again, but Holland has not abated operations against its formidable enemy. Up to last September the following victories had been chalked against the Zuider Zee.

1. The 19-mile long Afsluitdijk (partitioning dike) had been completed after a twelve year fight. The Zuider Zee existed no more. In its place was an inland lake named after its tributary, the Ijssel River.

2. The first polder (dike - surrounded area) had been pumped dry. Named after the adjoining island of Wieringen, it contained 48,000 acres of fertile soil. Villages had arisen on its flat expanses, red-roofed farmhouses had been built. Farmers had sown their first crops in 1933. Three hundred farmers had applied for the 29 available holdings in 1939. The Dutch had started to call Wieringermeer Polder the Promised Land.

3. The $15,000,000 estimated as necessary for creating the Northeast Polder had been obtained. An offensive had been launched.



The battleground of Holland's bloodless war against the sea. Shaded sections of inset show locations of polders (reclaimed areas).

Planting The Flag

A month and a day after Germany invaded Poland, the clay dike between the island of Urk and the town of Lemmer was completed.

All Holland rejoiced. The burgomaster of Urk met the burgomaster of Lemmer on top of the 18-foot-wide dike and shook hands. A woman from Urk, in local costume, planted the red, white, and blue flag of Holland in the new dike.

In less than a year the twenty-mile dike stretching eastward from Urk is to be completed. Only three gaps remain. Pumping stations have been completed. As soon as the impoldering has been effected, pumps will churn, millions of gallons of water will be ejected into Ijssel Lake, and the Northeast Polder — 132,000 acres of the newest land in the world will come into existence.

Before this unpopulated area has been completely subjugated by agrarian members of Holland's constantly increasing populace work will start on the 140,000-acre Southwest Polder. Then the 230,000-acre Southeast Polder will be brought to light.

When Holland's war is over — in about 1960 — it will have made homes for some 300,000 Dutch people. It will have created 6,000 economic holdings. It will have noticeably increased the output of wheat, rye, barley that are so necessary for a nation that eats two meals of bread daily. Yet not one foreign border will have been crossed, not one gun will have been fired, not one soldier will have been slaughtered on the field of battle to accomplish it.

How To Lose an Election and Win Office

Twisp, Wash., (AP)—During the recent mayorality election in this central Washington town, instead of condemning and outpromising one another, each of the two candidates campaigned for—not against—his opponent.

George H. Gibson passed out cigars, kissed babies and made speeches. But he always urged voters to re-elect Mayor W. H. Farmer. He even had circulars printd to boost Farmer.

Mayor Farmer arranged and urged parades in which honking automobiles carried banners reading: "We want Gibson for mayor."

Gibson, who hard arranged to lead an old gray mare through town bearing a banner "the old gray mayor ain't what he used to be, but vote for him anyway," was unexpectedly called out of Twisp and the parade fell through.

That might be the reason Gibson "lost." He was elected by an eight vote majority.

Hops off Train In Pajamas

Louisville Ky., (AP) — Ben Cregor broker, had arranged a business trip and about midnight was driven to the railroad station by guests whom he had been entertaining in his suburban home.

Once on the train, he took off his clothing and wriggled into his pajames in a sleeping car berth when he suddenly remembered he had left his brief case, carrying all the documents needed, at home.

Without hesitation, despite the cold weather, he pulled on an overcoat over his pajames, dashed out of the train-shed and hailed a taxicab. At breakneck speed, the taxi carried him to his home 15 miles away and back to the station again.

He sprinted to the train and hopped aboard just as the conductor gave the starting signal.

Cecil Democrat Will Be 100 Saturday

Elkton, Md., Jan. 23 (AP) — The Cecil Democrat—a weekly newspaper whose first editor paid with his life for his views—will celebrate its one-hundreth anniversary Saturday.

But, said editor-owner Frederick H. Leffler, the present policy "is not to lambast anybody too much."

Armor T. Foreward, first editor, was shot and killed in a quarrel in 1843 with Palmer B. Ricketts, editor of the rival "Cecil Whig," after an intense battle of pens.

The weekly, one of Maryland's oldest newspapers, was actually started in 1834, but its first name "The Cecil Gazette and Farmers and Mechanics Advertiser" was changed to "Cecil Democrat and Farmers Journal" in 1840. The name was shortened in 1850.

Inexpensive Love

Manila, P. I., (AP) — Looking at it one way, the Philippine islands are the ideal place to have a girl friend. More than 880 species of orchids occur in the islands, with millions of the blooms to be found wild.

Unicorn Protective Society Disbands

Unicorn, Pa., Jan. 23 (AP) — The Unicorn Protective Society, organized seventy-two years ago to combat horse stealing, has decided to disband.

The organization's last annual report said merely:

"No business, no losses, no exciting events."

The Adams, Harrison and Roosevelt families have each given two presidents to the United States.

Wrap-Around, Self-Help Style

Marian Martin
PATTERN 9290

Little girls love to feel grown-up and "on their own"! That's why this sturdy wrap-around style in gingham or percale will appeal to your youngster. For even tiny fingers will take just a jiffy to adjust the easy ties of Marian Martin's Pattern 9290 without aid! Mothers will appreciate this frock for still another reason: it's so easy to sew and to iron because it opens out in a flat piece. There's a nice choice of sleeve styles, a pocket may be added for extra dash, and ric-rac trim looks colorful. The neat panties included with this pattern complete a perfect romping or school-time style. The Marian Martin Sew Chart included with the pattern guides you step by step.

Pattern 9290 may be ordered only in children's sizes 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 6 requires 2⅛ yards 35 inch.

Send fifteen cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address, and style number.

Spring — in feminine language—means time for new clothes! Let Marian Martin's new pattern book show you the budget way to style. Need new afternoon or after-dark frocks? Interested in the "cotton field" or in "prints that bloom in Spring"? Just take your "pick"!

Piles — Get Relief Now

Millions of sufferers in the last 30 years have found a way to get quick relief from the itching and smarting of piles. They use a delightful cooling, soothing and astringent formula —Peterson's Ointment. No wonder one sufferer writes, "The itching and smarting stopped, and I slept all night. Peterson's Ointment is marvelous." 35c a box, all druggists, 60c in tube with applicator. Money back if not delighted.

"Good Home Lighting Is easy on the eyes, I. E. S. Lamps Mean Good Lighting"

Flood Control League Opposes Spending Cut

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP) — The Ohio Valley Conservation and Flood Control League has declared flood control to be "absolutely necessary for national preparedness" and opposed sharp reduction of expenditures on authorized projects.

In a statement issued here by Alan N. Jordon, executive secretary, the league urged its members to ask Congress to appropriate $133,000,000 for fiscal 1941, beginning next July 1, instead of $70,000,000 as recommended by President Roosevelt's budget.

The statement asserted army engineers had estimated $206,624,000 could be spent profitably during the fiscal period.

"If the budget figure stands," said the statement, "it will probably take three times as long to complete the projects that have been authorized and money appropriated to start, and some projects not started at all.

"Nearly half of the necessities for the last war depended on the Ohio valley. In 1937 practically all war production factories were flooded and out of commission, and highways were under water from 60 to 90 days. The valley was paralyzed and not in position to protect the country, and this can happen again in time of war."

The league forwarded to its members today invitations to attend a meeting at Portsmouth, Ohio, on February 6.

Piles — Get Relief Now

Millions of sufferers in the last 30 years have found a way to get quick relief from the itching and smarting of piles. They use a delightful cooling, soothing and astringent formula —Peterson's Ointment. No wonder one sufferer writes, "The itching and smarting stopped, and I slept all night. Peterson's Ointment is marvelous." 35c a box, all druggists, 60c in tube with applicator. Money back if not delighted.

Flood Control League Opposes Spending Cut

Washington, Jan. 23 (AP) — The Ohio Valley Conservation and Flood Control League has declared flood control to be "absolutely necessary for national preparedness" and opposed sharp reduction of expenditures on authorized projects.

In a statement issued here by Alan N. Jordon, executive secretary, the league urged its members to ask Congress to appropriate $133,000,000 for fiscal 1941, beginning next July 1, instead of $76,000,000 as recommended by President Roosevelt's budget.

The statement asserted army engineers had estimated $206,624,000 could be spent profitably during the fiscal period.

"If the budget figure stands," said the statement, "it will probably take three times as long to complete the projects that have been authorized and money appropriated to start, and some projects not started at all.

"Nearly half of the necessities for the last war depended on the Ohio valley. In 1937 practically all war production factories were flooded and out of commission, and highways were under water from 60 to 90 days. The valley was paralyzed and not in position to protect the country, and this can happen again in time of war."

The league forwarded to its members today invitations to attend a meeting at Portsmouth, Ohio, on February 6.

Armstrong-Montanez Title Bout Tonight

ormer Favored t 1 to 3 Odds To eep Welter Title

owd of 16,000 Expected To Witness 15-Round Bout

ontanez Rated Stiff Body Puncher with Good Chance

By SID FEDER

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—Hammer- Henry Armsarong puts his world terweight championship on the for the fifteenth time tomorrow nt in Madison Square Garden inst the stiff-punching body at- of Pedro Montanez of Puerto co.

They tangle over the fifteen-round te and Promoter Mike Jacobs fig- tonight that some 16,000 of the thful would be on hand for the tivities, contributing to a gross e over the $50,000 mark.

The little buzzsaw who climbs o the ring about 10 P. M. (E.S.T.) morrow night is a slower Arm- ong than the rip-tearing negro mmiter who skyrocketed out of west a couple of years back to come the first fighter in ring his- y to hold three championships ultaneously. But he still sets a hot pace and he is punching rper and harder.

Henry 1 to 3 Favorite

As a result, the odds-layers have de Henry the Hammer a 1 to 3 t. This corner, remembering the mstrong who piled up nearly fif- straight victories on his all-con- ering sweep through 1937, '38 and before Lou Ambers outpointed n for the lightweight crown last gust, strings along with Arm- ong.

Although Armstrong rightly is fa- ed by betting folks, the 1 to rice seems somewhat far-fetched the face of Montanez' record. e Henry, Pedro the Pounder has two get-togethers with Ambers, d, like Henry, he has split a pair decisions with the 135-pound ti- holder. He has been a consistent- good compaigner in both the htweight and welterweight classes. What's more, Pedro is one of the ghest body punchers among the g's little men. A good portion of ring triumphs have been chalk- up simply by pitching at his op- nent's breadbasket until the other ows holler "uncle."

Barnacles? Why No! Fight Managers Are Great Guys

BY JOHN LARDNER
(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Jan. 23—I was talking the other day of one of the adventures of Harry Pollack, an old-time fight manager who was ready with his fists, as old-time fight managers often were. Professor Benny Leonard, the freud of Broadway, now rises to remind me of a time when Mr. Pollack did the catching instead of the pitching.

The man from whom Professor Leonard won his world's lightweight championship was Freddie Welsh, born Fred Hall Thomas, in Pontyridd, Wales. Mr. Welsh operated under the management of Mr. Pollak.

On the day after one of Welsh's more substantial engagements, Mr. Pollak went to the promoter, as usual, to collect the check, telling Freddie that he would cash it and leave Welsh's split at Welsh's hotel. When the champion picked up his money he gave it a quick shuffle—pure force of habit—and found it, according to his own reckoning, to be $1,500 short.

Freddie Followed His Nose

No one can put two and two together with more speed than a Welshman. Following his nose, Freddie soon arrived at a nearby tavern where Mr. Pollak, his manager, was in the habit of assisting the flow of wit and reason. He found Mr. Pollak at the bar, buying for the house and describing how he and Welsh had won their glorious victory the night before.

"Come over here a minute," said Mr. Welsh, leading his pilot to one side.

"Ah, Frederick, my boy, said Mr. Pollak expansively, "what can I do for you?"

"Give me that fifteen hundred dollars," said Mr. Welsh.

"What fifteen hundred dollars?" said Mr. Pollak.

Foreseeing that this might go on all night, Mr. Welsh abandoned words for action. He closed his teeth about Mr. Pollak's right ear and detached the organ cleanly from the side of Mr. Pollak's head. They put the ear on the radiator to dry, and as soon as he regained the power of speech Mr. Pollak conceded Mr. Welsh's financial point and turned over the fifteen hundred dollars.

Professor Leonard and other fighters and former fighters are disposed to admire Mr. Welsh's tactics. They hold that a fighter can get nowhere talking to his manager, because, in every case known to history, his manager can outtalk him. They say that direct action is the only way to do business with your barnacle or parasite, by which coarse expressions they mean your manager.

Naturally, this point of view is repulsive to managers.

Gould Defends Managers

"When you stop to think it over," says Joe Gould, who shyly rates himself the greatest of all managers, "fighters should be grateful to guys like me as long as they live. Lookit all a manager does for a fighter!"

"And what does a manager do for a fighter?" you ask, if you have plenty of time on your hands.

"Take my case," says Mr. Gould. "Of course, I take off my hat to no manager."

"Of course not," interrupts Billy McCarney, also a manager. "You never take off your hat. You eat with your hat on."

"I take off my hat to no man," continues Mr. Gould coldly. "Look at the bums I've made money for—guys that would be ham-and-eggers if I didn't handle them. Jim Braddock is a nice guy, but he was no great fighter. Look at Tommy Farr. He never won a fight in this country, but I got him a couple of great money shots, just like he was a winner.

"But that ain't all," Mr. Gould goes on firmly. "It ain't only the brainwork we do. We do physical work. Why, when I was breaking into this racket, us managers used to run our legs off and wear our dogs to the bone just to help some tramp fighter.

"It was like this: they was always a lot of no-decision fights in those days, and when we was fighting out of town, the winner of the fight was the guy whose manager got to the telegraph office first. I would make a break for the telegraph office right after the fight and I would wire the city newspapers like this: 'Bill Gump toyed with Jo Nogood here tonight and win every round in the opinion of neutral observers'. Meanwhile, Nogood's manager would have another wire ready, like 'Nogood outpointed Gump by a wide margin here tonight'.

"It all depended on who got the wire in first," concludes Mr. Gould, "and that was generally me. And you talk about a fighter biting a manager's ear off! Why, they ought to of threw the ungrateful punk in jail for life!"

Central Defeats Beall Teams with 500 Fans On Hand

Central's Champion Girls Romp Off with 46-6 Triumph

It looked like the "good old days" in Lonaconing last evening as more than 500 fans, the biggest crowd since way back when, turned out to see Professor Arthur F. Smith's rejuvenated Central High boys' quint win a merry battle from the Beall high of Frostburg crew in a W.M.I. League game, 38-25.

It was a walk-away for the Central girls' as they won 46-6 but it emphasized the fact that they can start hemstitching the gonfalon for the girls of the Orange and Black again this year.

Beall Closes Gap

Mel Henry's hammer-and-tongs tossers led Beall all the way but it was an exciting battle when the Frostburg floormen came from way down under to get within five points of Central, 25-20 at the end of the third period.

At the pace Beall was breaking down Central's margin it seemed that the final quarter migh see another nip and tuck chase to the wire but Central had the push and pushed to a wide margin victory. While holding the Frostburg quint to five points Coney's cagers stepped on the gas and exploded a 13 point assault in the last period, and with it went the ball game by a 13 point margin.

Central led at the quarter 9-4 and at the half 20-9.

Orr paced the Coney crew with 15 points, Frizzell coming right behind with 13 leaving just ten points for Main and Dixon to share at a six and four ratio, respectively.

Prichard and Brode led Beall's bombers with nine apiece.

Central Coasts

Central's girls blanked Beall for the first two periods and led 10-0 and 23-0 at the time out intervals. Beall got three points in the third to trail 37-3 and tallied three more in the final period as Central added nine, the reserves getting a chance to cavort before the home crowd.

Eileen Clark and Mary Joe Muster shared the spotlight with Miss Muster taking a double share as she scored 26 points to 13 for her running-mate. Miss Thomas of Beall went out on fouls.

LaSalle To Meet Johnstown Team Away This Evening

Locals Hopeful Despite Great Record of Rival Crew

LaSalle high school's basketball team takes its six game winning streak and its unbroken string of scholastic successes to Johnstown Pa., tonight to meet the strong Johnstown Catholic quint.

Coach Art Slocum's scrappy courtsters who have surprised their most optimistic followers this year on several occasions are hopeful that they can turn the trick on the Flood City school despite the fact it has been a power in Western Pennsylvania scholastic basketball ball for the past three years, winning 44 of 48 games.

But Johnstown tasted defeat once in nine games this season, even though it came back to even the count with a 27-25 win last Saturday over the highly regarded Farrell, Pa., high, one of the Quaker States's leading public school teams. This year's Johnstown team also had a 36-23 victory over St. Joseph's high of Oil City, Pa., defending state Catholic high school champions.

Have Winning Way

Johnstown is reputed to have the advantage in height, speed, experience and shooting ability but LaSalle seems to have something that no scholastic team has "put a finger on" so far. Maybe the Northenders will have a little more of the same stuff on display tonight in the Flood City to at least let the Johnstown team know it's in a ball game.

It seems that just because they had a flood in Johnstown once some people have the idea that everyone going there must be swamped. Frequently some people have been "all wet" in premature predictions, and it can happen again. Anyhow LaSalle means to play and to try to win.

Other games tonight in which teams from nearby sections will see action are, Parsons at Piedmont, Berkeley Springs at St. Mary's of Hagerstown, Kingwood at Oakland, Barton at Grantsville and Potomac State at Frostburg State, Ridgeley will go to Thomas on Thursday for a conference encounter.

Milnar Gets Raise

Cleveland, Jan. 23, (AP)—Al Milnar today became the third pitcher to sign a 1940 contract with the Cleveland Indians. The lanky southpaw, who won 14 and lost 12 games last season, received a substantial salary increase.

Among the attractions for tourists near Tucson, Ariz., are the thousands of giant cacti in Saguaro forest.

TODAY'S GOOFY GADGET

Fan yourself with your jaw

To harness the energy which for years has been wasted by gum chewers, Russell E. Oakes, who makes a hobby out of "nut" inventions, has perfected a jaw-operated fan. A battery of such devices, he says, would be a good plan for automatic air-conditioning of restaurants.

Tomorrow: Bedside light douser.

Davis Rockets Bow To Crane Five 27-19

Crane Clothier basketeers packed all their scoring into the last two periods in defeating the Davis (W. Va.) Rockets, 27 to 19, last night at the Central Y.M.C.A. The Clothiers led 2-1 at the end of the first period, 10-7 at the half and 18-11 at the three-quarter mark.

Smith, Crane guard, was high scorer, looping in six baskets and four of four foul pitches for 16 tallies. Tewell topped the losers with six points. The city's two clothier teams—Kaplons and Cranes—will clash Thursday night at the "Y" at 9 o'clock. Last night's lineups:

Bobby Jones Lines Up against Change Of Golfing Rules

"Grand Slam" Champ of 1930 Makes Serious Bid for "Masters"

Atlanta, Jan. 23 (AP)—Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., lined up firmly with the "noes" today on the question of changing the ancient golf rule which requires the winner of the previous hole to drive first at each tee.

Fred Cocoran, tournament manager for the Professional Golfers' Association, said recently in San Francisco that among the touring pros there seemed to be "an overwhelming sentiment" in favor of revising the rule to make the "honor" optional.

"Wouldn't Be Golf"

Asked for his reaction, the "grand slam" champion of 1930 and winner of thirteen British and American national titles said:

"Fundamentally, I am instinctively against changing the rules of golf x x x you might change it; you might even improve it—in the opinion of players. But it wouldn't be golf. The old 'honor' is one of the fundamental regulations of the game.

"Besides which, I can't see that it would or could make much difference. Ordinarily, it's an advantage to drive first. Especially if you are going well."

He suggested, also, that making the honor optional would just be one more thing for the competitor to think about "and when you're concentrating in golf, either match or stroke play, the less distraction you have, the better."

Practicing for "Masters"

Driven away from almost daily practice and playing sessions by a record snow, Jones declined any comment on what he thinks he may do in the "Masters'" tournament at Augusta this Spring but didn't deny he had been playing and practicing more in the past few months than he has in years.

Jones retired from general competition after winning the British and American open and amateur titles in 1930 but plays in this single invitational meet each year. So far he has not had marked success in the "Masters" and his more careful preparations for the 1940 event—which will boast its usual fast field—bolsters belief that he intends to make a serious bid this time.

Game Called Off

hey tangle over the fifteen-round te and Promoter Mike Jacobs fig-d tonight that some 16,000 of the thful would be on hand for the tivities, contributing to a gross e over the $50,000 mark.

The little buzzsaw who climbs o the ring about 10 P. M. (E.S.T.) orrow night is a slower Arm-ng than the rip-tearing negro hamiter who skyrocketed out of west a couple of years back to ome the first fighter in ring his-y to hold three championships ultaneously. But he still sets a hot pace and he is punching rper and harder.

Henry 1 to 3 Favorite

lthough Armstrong rightly is fa-ed by betting folks, the 1 to price seems somewhat far-fetched the face of Montanez' record. e Henry, Pedro the Pounder has two get-togethers with Ambers, like Henry, he has split a pair decisions with the 135-pound ti-holder. He has been a consistent-good compaigner in both the tweight and welterweight classes. What's more, Pedro is one of the ghest body punchers among the 's little men. A good portion of ring triumphs have been chalk-up simply by pitching at his op-ent's breadbasket until the other ows holler "uncle."

Barnacles? Why No! Fight Managers Are Great Guys

(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance)

New York, Jan. 23—I was talking the other day of one of the adventures of Harry Pollack, an old-time fight manager who was ready with his fists, as old-time fight managers often were. Professor Benny Leonard, the freud of Broadway, now rises to remind me of a time when Mr. Pollack did the catching instead of the pitching.

The man from whom Professor Leonard won his world's lightweight championship was Freddie Welsh, born Fred Hall Thomas, in Pontyridd, Wales. Mr. Welsh operated under the management of Mr. Pollak.

On the day after one of Welsh's more substantial engagements, Mr. Pollak went to the promoter, as usual, to collect the check, telling Freddie that he would cash it and leave Welsh's split at Welsh's hotel. When the champion picked up his money he gave it a quick shuffle—pure force of habit—and found it, according to his own reckoning, to be $1,500 short.

Freddie Followed His Nose

No one can put two and two together with more speed than a Welshman. Following his nose, Freddie soon arrived at a nearby tavern where Mr. Pollak, his manager, was in the habit of assisting the flow of wit and reason. He found Mr. Pollak at the bar, buying for the house and describing how he and Welsh had won their glorious victory the night before.

"Come over here a minute," said Mr. Welsh, leading his pilot to one side.

"Ah, Frederick, my boy, said Mr. Pollak expansively, "what can I do for you?"

"Give me that fifteen hundred dollars," said Mr. Welsh.

"What fifteen hundred dollars?" said Mr. Pollak.

Foreseeing that this might go on all night, Mr. Welsh abandoned words for action. He closed his teeth about Mr. Pollak's right ear and detached the organ cleanly from the side of Mr. Pollak's head. They put the ear on the radiator to dry, and as soon as he regained the power of speech Mr. Pollak conceded Mr. Welsh's financial point and turned over the fifteen hundred dollars.

Professor Leonard and other fighters and former fighters are disposed to admire Mr. Welsh's tactics. They hold that a fighter can get nowhere talking to his manager, because, in every case known to history, his manager can outtalk him. They say that direct action is the only way to do business with your barnacle or parasite, by which coarse expressions they mean your manager.

Naturally, this point of view is repulsive to managers.

Gould Defends Managers

"When you stop to think it over," says Joe Gould, who shyly rates himself the greatest of all managers, "fighters should be grateful to guys like me as long as they live. Lookit all a manager does for a fighter!"

"And what does a manager do for a fighter?" you ask, if you have plenty of time on your hands.

"Take my case," says Mr. Gould. "Of course, I take off my hat to no manager."

"Of course not," interrupts Billy McCarney, also a manager. "You never take off your hat. You eat with your hat on."

"I take off my hat to no man," continues Mr. Gould coldly. "Look at the bums I've made money for—guys that would be ham-and-eggers if I didn't handle them. Jim Braddock is a nice guy, but he was no great fighter. Look at Tommy Farr. He never won a fight in this country, but I got him a couple of great money shots, just like he was a winner.

"But that ain't all," Mr. Gould goes on firmly. "It ain't only the brainwork we do. We do physical work. Why, when I was breaking into this racket, us managers used to run our legs off and wear our dogs to the bone just to help some tramp fighter.

"It was like this: they was always a lot of no-decision fights in those days, and when we was fighting out of town, the winner of the fight was the guy whose manager got to the telegraph office first. I would make a break for the telegraph office right after the fight and I would wire the city newspapers like this: 'Bill Gump toyed with Jo Nogood here tonight and win every round in the opinion of neutral observers'. Meanwhile, Nogood's manager would have another wire ready, like 'Nogood outpointed Gump by a wide margin here tonight'.

"It all depended on who got the wire in first," concludes Mr. Gould, "and that was generally me. And you talk about a fighter biting a manager's ear off! Why, they ought to of threw the ungrateful punk in jail for life!"

Central Defeats Beall Teams with 500 Fans On Hand

Central's Champion Girls Romp Off with 46-6 Triumph

It looked like the "good old days" in Lonaconing last evening as more than 500 fans, the biggest crowd since way back when, turned out to see Professor Arthur F. Smith's rejuvenated Central High boys' quint win a merry battle from the Beall high of Frostburg crew in a W.M.I. League game, 38-25.

It was a walk-away for the Central girls' as they won 46-6 but it emphasized the fact that they can start hemstitching the gonfalon for the girls of the Orange and Black again this year.

Beall Closes Gap

Mel Henry's hammer-and-tongs tossers led Beall all the way but it was an exciting battle when the Frostburg floormen came from way down under to get within five points of Central, 25-20 at the end of the third period.

At the pace Beall was breaking down Central's margin it seemed that the final quarter migh see another nip and tuck chase to the wire but Central had the push and pushed to a wide margin victory. While holding the Frostburg quint to five points Coney's cagers stepped on the gas and exploded a 13 point assault in the last period, and with it went the ball game by a 13 point margin.

Central led at the quarter 9-4 and at the half 20-9.

Orr paced the Coney crew with 15 points, Frizzell coming right behind with 13 leaving just ten points for Main and Dixon to share at a six and four ratio, respectively.

Prichard and Brode led Beall's bombers with nine apiece.

Central Coasts

Central's girls blanked Beall for the first two periods and led 10-0 and 23-0 at the time out intervals. Beall got three points in the third to trail 37-3 and tallied three more in the final period as Central added nine, the reserves getting a chance to cavort before the home crowd.

Eileen Clark and Mary Joe Muster shared the spotlight with Miss Muster taking a double share as she scored 26 points to 13 for her running-mate. Miss Thomas of Beall went out on fouls.

LaSalle To Meet Johnstown Team Away This Evening

Locals Hopeful Despite Great Record of Rival Crew

LaSalle high school's basketball team takes its six game winning streak and its unbroken string of scholastic successes to Johnstown Pa., tonight to meet the strong Johnstown Catholic quint.

Coach Art Slocum's scrappy courtsters who have surprised their most optimistic followers this year on several occasions are hopeful that they can turn the trick on the Flood City school despite the fact it has been a power in Western Pennsylvania scholastic basketball ball for the past three years, winning 44 of 48 games.

But Johnstown tasted defeat once in nine games this season, even though it came back to even the count with a 27-25 win last Saturday over the highly regarded Farrell, Pa., high, one of the Quaker States's leading public school teams. This year's Johnstown team also had a 36-23 victory over St. Joseph's high of Oil City, Pa., defending state Catholic high school champions.

Have Winning Way

Johnstown is reputed to have the advantage in height, speed, experience and shooting ability but LaSalle seems to have something that no scholastic team has "put a finger on" so far. Maybe the Northenders will have a little more of the same stuff on display tonight in the Flood City to at least let the Johnstown team know it's in a ball game.

It seems that just because they had a flood in Johnstown once some people have the idea that everyone going there must be swamped. Frequently some people have been "all wet" in premature predictions, and it can happen again. Anyhow LaSalle means to play and to try to win.

Other games tonight in which teams from nearby sections will see action are, Parsons at Piedmont, Berkeley Springs at St. Mary's of Hagerstown, Kingwood at Oakland, Barton at Grantsville and Potomac State at Frostburg State. Ridgeley will go to Thomas on Thursday for a conference encounter.

Milnar Gets Raise

Cleveland, Jan. 23. (AP)—Al Milnar today became the third pitcher to sign a 1940 contract with the Cleveland Indians. The lanky southpaw, who won 14 and lost 12 games last season, received a substantial salary increase.

Among the attractions for tourists near Tucson, Ariz., are the thousands of giant cacti in Saguaro forest.

Paw Paw Defeats Elk Garden 35-18

Paw Paw, Jan. 23 (Special to The News)—After trailing for more than a period, Coach Arnet Swisher's Paw Paw High court artists came to life here tonight in the second stanza and then set a fast pace to defeat Elk Garden 35-18 in a Potomac Valley Conference battle.

Francis Bohrer, who stands three inches over six feet, paced the winners with 15 markers on five twin-pointers and the same amount of charity flings. Charles Robey was runnerup with 10 counters. Lyons and Murphy were the losers' best, the former bagging six points and the latter five. The lineups:

PAW PAW	G	FG	Pts.
Robison f	2	0-0	4
F. Bohrer f	5	5-6	15

Bobby Jones Lines Up against Change Of Golfing Rules

"Grand Slam" Champ of 1930 Makes Serious Bid for "Masters"

Atlanta, Jan. 23 (AP)—Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., lined up firmly with the "noes" today on the question of changing the ancient golf rule which requires the winner of the previous hole to drive first at each tee.

Fred Cocoran, tournament manager for the Professional Golfers' Association, said recently in San Francisco that among the touring pros there seemed to be "an overwhelming sentiment" in favor of revising the rule to make the "honor" optional.

"Wouldn't Be Golf"

Asked for his reaction, the "grand slam" champion of 1930 and winner of thirteen British and American national titles said:

"Fundamentally, I am instinctively against changing the rules of golf x x x you might change it; you might even improve it—in the opinion of players. But it wouldn't be golf. The old 'honor' is one of the fundamental regulations of the game.

"Besides which, I can't see that it would or could make much difference. Ordinarily, it's an advantage to drive first. Especially if you are going well."

He suggested, also, that making the honor optional would just be one more thing for the competitor to think about "and when you're concentrating in golf, either match or stroke play, the less distraction you have, the better."

Practicing for "Masters"

Driven away from almost daily practice and playing sessions by a record snow, Jones declined any comment on what he thinks he may do in the "Masters'" tournament at Augusta this Spring but didn't deny he had been playing and practicing more in the past few months than he has in years.

Jones retired from general competition after winning the British and American open and amateur titles in 1930 but plays in this single invitational meet each year. So far he has not had marked success in the "Masters" and his more careful preparations for the 1940 event—which will boast its usual fast field—bolsters belief that he intends to make a serious bid this time.

Game Called Off

Waynesburg, Pa., Jan. 23 (AP) — The basketball game scheduled between Waynesburg College and Salem (O.) tomorrow night has been cancelled because of mid-year examinations. The Jackets will return here after their game with West Virginia Wesleyan at Buckhannon, W. Va., tonight to take their exams.

Allegany High Boys and Girls Win Easily

Campobello Quint Turns Back Bruce By 41 to 31 Score

Mont Leads Blue and White with Nine Goals and 20 Points

Allegany Girls' Team Turns In 28-6 Win over Bruce

Playing before a small but enthusiastic crowd, the Blue and White cagers of Allegany High School defeated Bruce by a score of 41 to 31, at the Campobello gym last night.

Sea-sawing back and forth the first few minutes of play while trying to figure the other's defense, gave the impression that it might be a thrilling battle but the Allegany boys kicked that idea in the head after Twigg, Bruce's star guard, pushed in an under the basket goal for the Westernport's team only leading session of the game.

Mont started the Campers rolling with his first of nine field goals for the evening and was followed with a goal by See, his running mate, to make the count 4-2. After DiUbaldo's follow-up shot, the Campers were never headed the rest of the fray.

Duet Runs Amuck

With Gaffney and Mont running amuck, the Bruce outfit didn't have a chance. The Campers, having things pretty well their own way, ended the period leading 11-7.

When play resumed Allegany tallied with an under the hoop shot but the Blue and White boys missed a good many easy shots at this stage of the game until Sherman, guard, broke the jinx and tallied from the side court. Gaffney turned loose his football blocking to great effect during this period for a free ball and Bruce called time out. Sites then went into action and bagged two goals before he was put under check. Mont and Sharret bagged a goal apiece as the half ended 19-12 with the Campers on the long end of the score.

Bruce Defense Fails

With a brief intermission, play resumed with Bruce throwing up a stiff defense, but to no avail for after Reeves' goal, the Campers went on another scoring spree by the way of See and Gaffney to make the count 22-12. DiUbaldo, the one man show from up the creek, dropped in two beauties only to be checked by Sharrett. Mont's foul and goals that Twigg added with a set shot while Gaffney and Mont scored from the field.

As the final session got under way Gaffney tallied on a throw-in play to boost the score to 35-22. Twigg then made a pretty long-shot as double fouls were called on Gaffney and DiUbaldo. The latter made his free throw with "Big Jim" missing. After a round of wild play on the part of a desperate and game Bruce High outfit, Mont managed to bag two field goals, DiUbaldo and Twigg, the stars of the up-creek team bagged points to make the count 37-26, then came the shot of the evening when Gaffney threw the ball over his head for a tally. He was just as much surprised as the spectators at his feat of fortune.

With but a minute and a half remaining Coach Bowers sent in his subs, with the exception of Sharrett to finish the fray. Tommy Mont and Jim Gaffney were the big guns for the Campers with Mont getting twenty points and Gaffney ten. Twigg tallied nine points for the losers.

The Allegany girls downed the Bruce lassies by a score of 28-6. Wotring led the Campers with ten points while Thomas was high for the visitors with four tallies.

The summary of the boys game follows:

ALLEGANY	G	FG	Pts.

'Biscuit, Kayak II May Run Saturday

Los Angeles, Jan. 23—Nominated today for the running of the $10,000 San Felipe Handicap Saturday at Santa Anita were Seabiscuit and Kayak II. Seabiscuit's owner, Charles Howard was not certain whether his star would start. He said it depended upon the weight allowance.

Loyola Beats Terrors

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP) — Loyola College registered a 50 to 36 victory over Western Maryland's basketball team tonight to maintain its position at the top of the heap in the state collegiae race. It was Loyola's third straight league win and Western Maryland's first setback.

Vic Bock, with 16 points, was high for the winners and Frank Suffern caged 10 to lead the visitors.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Jan. 23 (AP) — He couldn't make it one way, but the one-track ambition—to be a member of the New York Giants—that burned in the breast of Eddie Brannick found another gateway, and today he has a record of thirty-six years continuous service with the organization, and the word "secretary" after his name.

It was a long, tough road for the genial Irishman who today, at forty-six, is one of the best liked, or to be more accurate, most beloved, men in the game.

He sat in his big, comfortable office, a short, sturdy, black-haired, red-faced figure with long, lean jaw and eyes which twinkled and were deadly serious by turns. Words of philosophy, stories of baseball's great—the McGraws, the Mathewsons, the McGinnitys—flowed easily from the lips of this little walking encyclopedia of baseball.

"I dreamed as a boy of becoming a Giant ball player," he mused. "But I weighed only 135, and never could make it. On my eleventh birthday, in 1905, President John T. Brush made me his office boy.

"I got $3 a week for three years. Other kids would say: 'Aw, come on, I know where you can get $4.50.' But I loved it and stuck it out. You know, that's what is the trouble with the young fellows today. They leave school and expect to step into a white collar job as boss. They're too impatient.

"And they don't have heroes. Why, I used to go to bed at night like this," he crossed his arms reverently over his chest, "thinking of Mr. Mathewson. He was my hero."

Eddie misters practically everybody. John McGraw is never anyone but Mr. McGraw, whose memory still brings awe to Eddie's voice.

"It's been a great life, and I've been happy," he continued. "The contacts you make — politicians, business executives, sportsmen, the big and little in all walks of life. And I learned from experience.

"I'll never forget once when Mr. Mathewson walked up to me while I was smoking a cigar. You know, for three years I got $3 a week, then Mr. Brush suddenly raised me to $18, then to $100 a month, and I thought that was wonderful.

"Anyway," Mr. Mathewson asked me how much I paid for the cigar, and I told him 15 cents. He said: 'Don't do it. Smoke five centers and you'll enjoy them just as much. Remember, always watch your credit. Deny yourself a lot, and never be jealous of what the other fellow has.'"

Brannick shares with Bill Klem, the "old arbiter," the honor of being the oldest man in the league in point of continuous service. He was advanced to road secretary in 1912, and when he made his first training trip to Marlin, Tex., it was the first time he had been west of Hoboken, and he had visions of being scalped or burned at the stake.

He has been secretary since 1936, combining the duties with those of road secretary, as he thinks a secretary should be in contact with the club at all times.

He is a master diplomat and even today, he will sit with creased brow, fretting over whether some green newspaper man present is comfortable.

His popularity is such that he was voted the No. 1 life membership in the Baseball Writers Association, and on his 30th anniversary with the Giants he was presented a $2,500 purse at a beefsteak dinner tendered in his honor.

Brannick thinks Hans Wagner was the best all-around player he ever saw, and Nap Lajoie the best hitter.

But there will never be a hero who can quite replace Mr. Mathewson.

LaSalle Meeting Again Next Week on Campaign

About 15 members of the LaSalle Athletic Association met in an enthusiastic session last night at Carroll Hall to accept the resignation of Coach Harold Langton, and to name a committee to seek a coach for next season.

The committee has been given the name of some coaches preferred by the school, and inquiries will be sent these first.

The chief aim of the group is to begin at once the work of putting pressure behind the second phase of the three year subscription campaign inaugurated last year. It is planned to raise sufficient funds to pay the salary of a full-time coach who will be also a member of the teaching faculty of the school.

It was agreed that the group meet again next Tuesday night and that other members of the association be encouraged to attend and give their support to the efforts to further LaSalle's athletic ambitions.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—As a general rule, annual meetings of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association are almost as much matters of routine as the yearly conclaves of their golfing brethren. This year's meeting, in New York Feb. 10, is likely to be the exception that proves the rule.

Bone of contention will be the proposed amendments which forbid a player to receive tournament expenses, or clubs to pay them, without the sanction of the player's sectional association.

Fort Hill Defeats Barton 53-17 with Team of Reserves

Sentinel Squad Hard Hit by Illness but Wins Easily

Coach Bobby Cavanaugh had to reach down in his reserves here last night, not to pull a game out of the fire, but because that old "Greek go-getter," Kid Influenza, had most of his Fort Hill high regulars out of their basketball togs and under the bed-covers. Cavanaugh reached down and brought up 14 players who were good enough to administer a 53-17 defeat to Barton night's hale and hardy but not too adept aggregation on the Sentinel court.

Cavanaugh was faced with the task of putting almost an entire new team on the field what with four regulars and two first string reserves down with colds of one degree or another. But since the "Greeks had a word for it," Cavanaugh had an answer and ten of the 14 players he sent into the scampering scored one or more of the 23 field goals that filtered through the fish nets as the scales turned sharply against the fully-manned Barton regular crew.

Barton got only seven field goals and trailed all the way at 15-4, 38-6 and 44-14.

Nesbitt topped the Sentinel skirmishes with nine points, Spears had eight and Bell seven. R. Gowans was top-tally thrower for Barton with four field goals, muffing two tries at the free-throw line.

In the preliminary game Barton's girls defeated Fort Hill, 21-11, all of the Sentinel's baskets being from the foul stripe on free throws. throws.

Ridgeley Cagers Win over Keyser

Coach Hubert Price's Ridgeley High cagers chalked up their seventh win of the season last night by defeating the Keyser High Golden Tornado outfit in a Potomac Valley Conference game at Ridgeley. The score was 35 to 22.

Captain John Lookabaugh personally conducted his mates to triumph, snipping the cords six times from the field for a 12-point total. Little Carl DeRosa was runnerup with 11 tallies on four fielders and three of three free tosses. Edward Burns was Keyser's top bomber with nine counters.

The Pricemen were on top throughout, taking a 3-2 lead at the first quarter, increasing it to 12-7 at the halfway mark and then exploding a 15-point bombshell in the third semester to clinch the game. Keyser tallied 10 markers during the third stanza and each team scored five points in the final chapter. The lineups:

Jimmy Wilson of Reds Disagrees With Card Pickers

Cincinnati Coach Says Team Will Retain League Flag

Bradenton, Fla., Jan. 23 (AP) — He may be a little partisan, but Coach Jimmy Wilson of the National League champion Cincinnati Reds strongly disagrees with Bill Terry and other baseball experts who pick the St. Louis Cardinals to win the senior circuit's 1940 pennant.

"As long as you are the champ, they've got to beat you," was Jimmy's reply to those who expect to see Deacon Bill McKechnie's crew dislodged.

Acknowledging the utmost respect for the opinions of Managers Terry of the New York Giants, Gabby Hartnett of the Chicago Cubs and James Prothro of the Phillies, who have agreed the Cardinals will lead the pack, Wilson said he didn't think St. Louis could beat out Cincinnati.

The Cards, he is convinced, can't match the Red mound staff of Bucky Walters, the National League Number 1 pitcher last season, Paul Derringer, Whitey Moore, Jim Turner, Gene Thompson and Johnny Vander Meer.

"I look for Vander Meer to return to his old form," said Jimmy. "He was sick during spring training last year and got off to a bad start," he explained.

The discussion drifted to Catcher Ernie Lombardi and his sprawl at home plate in the last game of the world series with the New York Yankees last year. Wilson rose quickly to the big backstop's defense.

Ernie was hurt and stunned in the collision with Charlie Keller, Jimmy aserted and said he believed Lombardi recovered as quickly as anyone would have under the circumstances.

W. Va. Wesleyan Loses Home Game

Buckhannon, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP) — West Virginia Wesleyan lost its first home basketball contest 60-49 to powerful Waynesburg tonight.

The going was hectic in the first period, when the score was tied six times, but then the Jackets got a lead and held it. Wesleyan's crack freshman forward, Frank Ellis, had an "off" night and was handcuffed to eight points. His teammates fared little better, Gwosden getting 14 and Andrick 10.

Center Bob Simmons of Waynesburg topped the scoring with 22 points. Pasquale netted 16.

It was Wesleyan's fourth defeat—the second at the hands of the visitors, who have an advantage of being taller. Waynesburg has only lost one game.

Fairmont Drops to Alderson-Broaddus

Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—Ken Griffith looped in twenty-three points to lead Alderson-Broaddus to an easy 58-46 victory over the Fairmont Teachers here tonight.

After a close first half, which found the visitors on the long end of a 26-21 score, Fairmont went to pieces completely and the Battlers tallied almost at will.

Fairmont rallied midway in the last half to pull within seven points but Alderson-Broaddus rebounded and five minutes before the gun was in front 51-32.

Five players, three on the Fairmont team, were banished on fouls. Blaine Ankrom led the Fairmont scorinfg with 11 points.

Though he's the oldest and only life-time member of the National Football Rules Committee, Amos Alonzo Stagg remains one of the most active. It was Stagg who, after a long series of experiments with his own College of the Pacific squad, proposed and put through the "speed-up" rules change which next Fall will limit teams to twenty-five, rather than thirty, seconds in the huddle.

What Makes Swimming a Very Popular Sport?

Allegany High Boys and Girls Win Easily

Mont Leads Blue and White with Nine Goals and 20 Points

Allegany Girls' Team Turns In 28-6 Win over Bruce

Playing before a small but enthusiastic crowd, the Blue and White cagers of Allegany High School defeated Bruce by a score of 41 to 31, at the Campobello gym last night.

Sea-sawing back and forth the first few minutes of play while trying to figure the other's defense, gave the impression that it might be a thrilling battle but the Allegany boys kicked that idea in the head after Twigg, Bruce's star guard, pushed in an under the basket goal for the Westernport's team only leading session of the game.

Mont started the Campers rolling with his first of nine field goals for the evening and was followed with a goal by See, his running mate, to make the count 4-2. After DiUbaldo's follow-up shot, the Campers were never headed the rest of the fray.

Duet Runs Amuck

With Gaffney and Mont running amuck, the Bruce outfit didn't have a chance. The Campers, having things pretty well their own way, ended the period leading 11-7.

When play resumed Allegany tallied with an under the hoop shot but the Blue and White boys missed a good many easy shots at this stage of the game until Sherman, guard, broke the jinx and tallied from the side court. Gaffney turned loose his football blocking to great effect during this period for a free ball and Bruce called time out. Sites then went into action and bagged two goals before he was put under check. Mont and Sharret bagged a goal apiece as the half ended 19-12 with the Campers on the long end of the score.

Bruce Defense Fails

With a brief intermission, play resumed with Bruce throwing up a stiff defense, but to no avail for after Reeves' goal, the Campers went on another scoring spree by the way of See and Gaffney to make the count 22-12. DiUbaldo, the one man show from up the creek, dropped in two beauties only to be checked by Sharrett. Mont's foul and goals that Twigg added with a set shot while Gaffney and Mont scored from the field.

As the final session got under way Gaffney tallied on a throw-in play to boost the score to 35-22. Twigg then made a pretty long-shot as double fouls were called on Gaffney and DiUbaldo. The latter made his free throw with "Big Jim" missing. After a round of wild play on the part of a desperate and game Bruce High outfit, Mont managed to bag two field goals, DiUbaldo and Twigg, the stars of the up-creek team bagged points to make the count 37-26, then came the shot of the evening when Gaffney threw the ball over his head for a tally. He was just as much surprised as the spectators at his feat of fortune.

With but a minute and a half remaining Coach Bowers sent in his subs, with the exception of Sharrett to finish the fray. Tommy Mont and Jim Gaffney were the big guns for the Campers with Mont getting twenty points and Gaffney ten. Twigg tallied nine points for the losers.

The Allegany girls downed the Bruce lassies by a score of 28-6. Wotring led the Campers with ten points while Thomas was high for the visitors with four tallies.

The summary of the boys game follows:

'Biscuit, Kayak II May Run Saturday

Los Angeles, Jan. 23—Nominated today for the running of the $10,000 San Felipe Handicap Saturday at Santa Anita were Seabiscuit and Kayak II. Seabiscuit's owner, Charles Howard was not certain whether his star would start. He said it depended upon the weight allowance.

Loyola Beats Terrors

Baltimore, Jan. 23 (AP) — Loyola College registered a 50 to 36 victory over Western Maryland's basketball team tonight to maintain its position at the top of the heap in the state collegiae race. It was Loyola's third straight league win and Western Maryland's first setback.

Vic Bock, with 16 points, was high for the winners and Frank Suffern caged 10 to lead the visitors.

By WHITNEY MARTIN

New York, Jan. 23 (AP) — He couldn't make it one way, but the one-track ambition—to be a member of the New York Giants—that burned in the breast of Eddie Brannick found another gateway, and today he has a record of thirty-six years continuous service with the organization, and the word "secretary" after his name.

It was a long, tough road for the genial Irishman who today, at forty-six, is one of the best liked, or to be more accurate, most beloved, men in the game.

He sat in his big, comfortable office, a short, sturdy, black-haired, red-faced figure with long, lean jaw and eyes which twinkled and were deadly serious by turns. Words of philosophy, stories of baseball's great—the McGraws, the Mathewsons, the McGinnitys—flowed easily from the lips of this little walking encyclopedia of baseball.

"I dreamed as a boy of becoming a Giant ball player," he mused. "But I weighed only 135, and never could make it. On my eleventh birthday, in 1905, President John T. Brush made me his office boy.

"I got $3 a week for three years. Other kids would say: 'Aw, come on, I know where you can get $4.50.' But I loved it and stuck it out. You know, that's what is the trouble with the young fellows today. They leave school and expect to step into a white collar job as boss. They're too impatient.

"And they don't have heroes. Why, I used to go to bed at night like this," he crossed his arms reverently over his chest, "thinking of Mr. Mathewson. He was my hero."

Eddie misters practically everybody. John McGraw is never anyone but Mr. McGraw, whose memory still brings awe to Eddie's voice.

"It's been a great life, and I've been happy," he continued. "The contacts you make — politicians, business executives, sportsmen, the big and little in all walks of life. And I learned from experience.

"I'll never forget once when Mr. Mathewson walked up to me while I was smoking a cigar. You know, for three years I got $3 a week, then Mr. Brush suddenly raised me to $18, then to $100 a month, and I thought that was wonderful.

"Anyway," Mr. Mathewson asked me how much I paid for the cigar, and I told him 15 cents. He said: 'Don't do it. Smoke five centers and you'll enjoy them just as much. Remember, always watch your credit. Deny yourself a lot, and never be jealous of what the other fellow has.'"

Brannick shares with Bill Klem, the "old arbiter," the honor of being the oldest man in the league in point of continuous service. He was advanced to road secretary in 1912, and when he made his first training trip to Marlin, Tex., it was the first time he had been west of Hoboken, and he had visions of being scalped or burned at the stake.

He has been secretary since 1936, combining the duties with those of road secretary, as he thinks a secretary should be in contact with the club at all times.

He is a master diplomat and even today, he will sit with creased brow, fretting over whether some green newspaper man present is comfortable.

His popularity is such that he was voted the No. 1 life membership in the Baseball Writers Association, and on his 30th anniversary with the Giants he was presented a $2,500 purse at a beefsteak dinner tendered in his honor.

Brannick thinks Hans Wagner was the best all-around player he ever saw, and Nap Lajoie the best hitter.

But there will never be a hero who can quite replace Mr. Mathewson.

LaSalle Meeting Again Next Week on Campaign

About 15 members of the LaSalle Athletic Association met in an enthusiastic session last night at Carroll Hall to accept the resignation of Coach Harold Langton, and to name a committee to seek a coach for next season.

The committee has been given the name of some coaches preferred by the school, and inquiries will be sent these first.

The chief aim of the group is to begin at once the work of putting pressure behind the second phase of the three year subscription campaign inaugurated last year. It is planned to raise sufficient funds to pay the salary of a full-time coach who will be also a member of the teaching faculty of the school.

It was agreed that the group meet again next Tuesday night and that other members of the association be encouraged to attend and give their support to the efforts to further LaSalle's athletic ambitions.

New York, Jan. 23 (AP)—As a general rule, annual meetings of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association are almost as much matters of routine as the yearly conclaves of their golfing brethren. This year's meeting, in New York Feb. 10, is likely to be the exception that proves the rule.

Bone of contention will be the proposed amendments which forbid a player to receive tournament expenses, or clubs to pay them, without the sanction of the player's sectional association.

Fort Hill Defeats Barton 53-17 with Team of Reserves

Sentinel Squad Hard Hit by Illness but Wins Easily

Coach Bobby Cavanaugh had to reach down in his reserves here last night, not to pull a game out of the fire, but because that old "Greek go-getter," Kid Influenza, had most of his Fort Hill high regulars out of their basketball togs and under the bed-covers. Cavanaugh reached down and brought up 14 players who were good enough to administer a 53-17 defeat to Barton night's hale and hardy but not too adept aggregation on the Sentinel court.

Cavanaugh was faced with the task of putting almost an entire new team on the field what with four regulars and two first string reserves down with colds of one degree or another. But since the "Greeks had a word for it," Cavanaugh had an answer and ten of the 14 players he sent into the scampering scored one or more of the 23 field goals that filtered through the fish nets as the scales turned sharply against the fully-manned Barton regular crew.

Barton got only seven field goals and trailed all the way at 15-4, 38-6 and 44-14.

Nesbitt topped the Sentinel skirmishes with nine points, Spears had eight and Bell seven. R. Gowans was top-tally thrower for Barton with four field goals, muffing two tries at the free-throw line.

In the preliminary game Barton's girls defeated Fort Hill, 21-11, all of the Sentinel's baskets being from the foul stripe on free throws.

Ridgeley Cagers Win over Keyser

Coach Hubert Price's Ridgeley High cagers chalked up their seventh win of the season last night by defeating the Keyser High Golden Tornado outfit in a Potomac Valley Conference game at Ridgeley. The score was 35 to 22.

Captain John Lookabaugh personally conducted his mates to triumph, snipping the cords six times from the field for a 12-point total. Little Carl DeRosa was runnerup with 11 tallies on four fielders and three of three free tosses. Edward Burns was Keyser's top bomber with nine counters.

The Pricemen were on top throughout, taking a 3-2 lead at the first quarter, increasing it to 12-7 at the halfway mark and then exploding a 15-point bombshell in the third semester to clinch the game. Keyser tallied 10 markers during the third stanza and each team scored five points in the final chapter. The lineups:

Jimmy Wilson of Reds Disagrees With Card Pickers

Cincinnati Coach Says Team Will Retain League Flag

Bradenton, Fla., Jan. 23 (AP) — He may be a little partisan, but Coach Jimmy Wilson of the National League champion Cincinnati Reds strongly disagrees with Bill Terry and other baseball experts who pick the St. Louis Cardinals to win the senior circuit's 1940 pennant.

"As long as you are the champ, they've got to beat you," was Jimmy's reply to those who expect to see Deacon Bill McKechnie's crew dislodged.

Acknowledging the utmost respect for the opinions of Managers Terry of the New York Giants, Gabby Hartnett of the Chicago Cubs and James Prothro of the Phillies, who have agreed the Cardinals will lead the pack, Wilson said he didn't think St. Louis could beat out Cincinnati.

The Cards, he is convinced, can't match the Red mound staff of Bucky Walters, the National League Number 1 pitcher last season, Paul Derringer, Whitey Moore, Jim Turner, Gene Thompson and Johnny Vander Meer.

"I look for Vander Meer to return to his old form," said Jimmy.

"He was sick during spring training last year and got off to a bad start," he explained.

The discussion drifted to Catcher Ernie Lombardi and his sprawl at home plate in the last game of the world series with the New York Yankees last year. Wilson rose quickly to the big backstop's defense.

Ernie was hurt and stunned in the collision with Charlie Keller, Jimmy asserted and said he believed Lombardi recovered as quickly as anyone would have under the circumstances.

W. Va. Wesleyan Loses Home Game

Buckhannon, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP) — West Virginia Wesleyan lost its first home basketball contest 60-49 to powerful Waynesburg tonight.

The going was hectic in the first period, when the score was tied six times, but then the Jackets got a lead and held it. Wesleyan's crack freshman forward, Frank Ellis, had an "off" night and was handcuffed to eight points. His teammates fared little better, Gwosden getting 14 and Andrick 10.

Center Bob Simmons of Waynesburg topped the scoring with 22 points. Pasquale netted 16.

It was Wesleyan's fourth defeat—the second at the hands of the visitors, who have an advantage of being taller. Waynesburg has only lost one game.

Fairmont Drops to Alderson-Broaddus

Fairmont, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—Ken Griffith looped in twenty-three points to lead Alderson-Broaddus to an easy 58-46 victory over the Fairmont Teachers here tonight.

After a close first half, which found the visitors on the long end of a 26-21 score, Fairmont went to pieces completely and the Battlers tallied almost at will.

Fairmont rallied midway in the last half to pull within seven points but Alderson-Broaddus rebounded and five minutes before the gun was in front 51-32.

Five players, three on the Fairmont team, were banished on fouls. Blaine Ankrom led the Fairmont scorinfg with 11 points.

Though he's the oldest and only life-time member of the National Football Rules Committee, Amos Alonzo Stagg remains one of the most active. It was Stagg who, after a long series of experiments with his own College of the Pacific squad, proposed and put through the "speed-up" rules change which next Fall will limit teams to twenty-five, rather than thirty, seconds in the huddle.

What Makes Swimming a Very Popular Sport?

Fort Hill Meets Massanutten in Dual Swim Tonight

Virginia Prep School Send Classy Team Here

Scholastic swimming dual [illegible] competition will be inaugurated [illegible] Cumberland this evening [illegible] Coach Kenneth Mowen's Fort [illegible] High mermen oppose Massanutten Military Academy junior [illegible] in a program of eight events [illegible] Central Y. M. C. A. pool. The [illegible] will start at 8:30. There will be a nominal charge.

Massanutten ranks with Mercersburg among eastern prep schools in the development of strong aquatic teams. In recent years [illegible] representing the Woodstock [illegible] school have carried off top honors in Washington, Philadelphia and New York interscholastic and intra-school meets. Massanutten tankmen have also carried off [illegible] laurels with regularity.

"Some of the boys who will be sent Massanutten here tonight," Coach Mowen said yesterday, "are capable of making almost any high school team in the country. The prime reason for scheduling the meet is to enable Western Marylanders to see some of the finest schoolboy swimmers and divers in the east."

The program includes 40-yard freestyle, 40-yard breast stroke, 100-yard freestyle, 40-yard back stroke, 100-yard freestyle, medley relay, backyard freestyle relay and diving.

The meet will be the first of a series of dual engagements for Sentinel swimmers this season, the Fort Hill mermen calling for a return appearance by Massanutten and home-and-home meets with Hagerstown Y. M. C. A.

Philadelphia A's Basketball Team Plays Here Sunday

Quaker City Court Crew Undefeated in 17 Games to Date

Meet Collegians at 3 p. m., Dragons To Play Prelim.

Coach Art Slocum's Cumberland Collegians will face the Philadelphia Athletics basketball team, this coming Sunday at three o'clock on the SS. Peter and Paul school court.

The Quaker City Five is the leading road team representing the "City of Brotherly Love" but when the A's step out on the court they have little love for friend or foe when it comes to banging away at the buckets.

Undefeated in seventeen starts, the Athletics have defeated leading quints from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and New England. Listed among their victims are: the New Briton Cremos, formerly of the American League; Utica Professionals, Port Chester, New York; Bridgeports' General Electrics, Passiac (N.J.) Reds, and the Reading Keys.

Former College Stars

Rated as one of the best clubs in the New York-Pennsylvania-New Jersey area, the Athletics roster is studded with former college stars.

The forwards are Bernie Snyder, former star of the American League and Drexel University, and Eddie Kremer of Ohio State University. Center is Art Burns of Villinova. Guards are Tom Carter, Georgetown University; Phil Cagney, Duke University; John McElheny, Temple University, and "Butch" Weintraub who has signed to play with the Philadelphia Spahs.

George Bensoff, one of the best players in the Philadelphia area, carried as a utility player and handles any position capably.

In the preliminary game at 1:45 p. m. the Cumberland Dragons meet the Rockville, Pa., team.

GEORGE BENSOFF

Bensoff, utility player of the Philadelphia A's basketball team which meets the Cumberland Collegians next Sunday at SS. Peter & Paul school gym, here, is regarded as one of the best all-around courtmen in the Philadelphia area. He stands six feet, two inches and covers as much court as he does atmosphere.

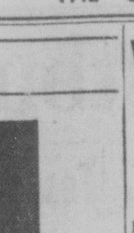
THE Sportlight BY GRANTLAND RICE



BASEBALL'S BLUEBIRD

San Francisco — You can't run into Ty Cobb without thinking of baseball. When I run into Ty, the Georgia Ghost, I turn the pages back thirty-six years to 1904 around Atlanta and Royston, Ga., where I first ran across the phenomenal stripling who later on was to set his game on fire.

The thought then was, "If winter comes, can Cobb be far behind?" For Cobb was the bluebird harbinger of spring. It was at that time that Cobb kept writing me letters, signing Smith, Jones, Brown and Robinson — all telling me what a great player young Tyrus Raymond Cobb was.

I fell for the gag, not knowing that Cobb was writing them and mailing them to me from every tank town stop. Anyway, Ty helped to make me quite a prophet when in the wake of these letters, I wrote an article headed, "Keep your eye on Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the riptown roarer of Royston." A great many millions kept their startled eyes on the same Cobb for just twenty-four years.

The Cobb of 1940

The Ty Cobb of 1940 lives just outside San Francisco, and his two favorite sports are hunting and golf. At the age of 54 his hair is thinner and part of the old streamlined body has packed on some weight—but not too much.

I asked Ty why it was that he always used that grip on a bat—with both hands spread well apart.

"It shows what habit will do in sport," Ty said. "I began playing baseball with much older and bigger kids. I couldn't grip the big bats that they had near the handle. I had to spread my hands and poke at the ball. I couldn't swing the big bats any other way. After that I couldn't change. But I was probably better off as a place hitter than I might have been as a slugger. I never believed in slugging anyway.

"I believe in getting on — and then getting around. Today they only believe in hitting a fast ball out of the park. In my opinion, baseball science has given way to power.

"I'm still for speed and science. Base stealing today is a lost art. It seems to be gone forever. Did you know that several high-class ball players last season failed to steal a base? I remember one year I had 96 steals. That's almost the same as 96 extra hits, for those steals put me in position to score."

An Amazing Record

In my opinion, Ty Cobb ran up one of the great records of sport—something close to an all-time record — maybe the all-time top. For a period of thirteen consecutive years he led the American League in batting exactly twelve times.

And all the hitters he had to beat out were Napoleon Lajoie, Shoeless Joe Jackson, Tris Speaker, Eddie Collins, Nig Clarke, Sam Crawford, Bobby Veach and a flock of others who were shooting from .350 to .400. One year Joe Jackson hit .410 and Cobb still beat him out, with a far deader ball than they have had for the last ten or fifteen years.

Here is a record — twelve batting championships out of thirteen consecutive major league play. That will never be approached again.

The Soft Spot

I asked Ty what he thought the difference was between the old-timers and the present crop.

"Stamina," Ty said. "I mean legs and arms. I've lived on my legs most of my life. As you remember in 24 big league years I never spared my legs. I've played many a game with almost no skin on either thigh.

"I believed then and I believe now in toughening up your system—not sparing it. Between seasons I hunted all winter, eight or ten hours a day. That's what Bill Dickey has done — and you know where Bill Dickey stands in baseball.

"The same goes for pitchers. The modern crop has weak arms. Look at Cy Young, winning 512 ball games. Show me a pitcher today who can even pitch 400 games. Remember Ed Walsh? One year Ed won 40 games and saved 12 others. He worked in 66 games that year — around 1908. And then pitched through a city series, working in almost every game.

"Most of these kids today can't take it. They have come up the easy way. They have to be pampered. A lot of them need a nurse. We had to come up the hard way. What a difference that makes—in any game.

"Any pitcher today who can win 20 games is almost a hero. Can you imagine Cy Young, who averaged over 20 games for well over 20 years, out there today?

"The kids today rarely use their legs. They ride in place of walking. I always had to walk. Maybe five miles — maybe twenty miles. The old-time pitchers had to work in fifty or sixty games. Maybe more. I've seen them come out long before the ball game was scheduled to start in order to get the kinks out of tired arms, working out slowly for over thirty minutes. But not today.

"I thought Dizzy Dean was going to be a throwback to the old days—until Diz hurt his arm. He always wanted to pitch. To be in there. But there are not many left like that. They'd rather be resting up.

"In my opinion, a real pitcher should be good for at least 45 ball games — maybe 50, if he is really needed. I mean men like Walsh, Cy Young, Alexander, Matty, Chesbro, Joe Wood — the top guys. They could take it — and they loved it. Not this modern crowd. At least, most of them. They haven't the stamina needed to go on when there is no one to take their place.

"I'll say this for Babe Ruth. He could always take it — and like it. So could Lou Gehrig. You never had to pamper Ruth or Gehrig. They were ball players of the old school. So was Matty. So was Alexander, drunk or sober. What a pitcher.

"I'll still go for stamina and fortitude. And I'll string with brains and speed. They still count. When they don't, then you haven't either a game or civilization. You haven't anything worth while. Not in sport."

Ty is riding the years in great shape. He is far and away the all-time top of all sporting stars on the financial side. You can make this doubled and redoubled.—(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Wrigley Denies He Has Any Holdouts

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP) — Owner Phil Wrigley denied he had any holdout problems even though some of his Chicago Cubs have asked for more money than was offered in their original contracts.

"Some of the boys are asking for more money, but I've always encouraged discussions over salary problems," explained the Cub owner. "I wouldn't call them holdouts at all."

He said Dizzy Dean's contract was returned again today unsigned.

"Dean didn't say how much he wanted but said he thought he was worth more than we offered," Wrigley added. "I don't know what I'll do about it yet, I haven't made up my mind."

He said nothing more had been heard from Hank Leiber, Augie Galan, Stan Hack or Clay Bryant.

Notre Dame To Play Four Home Games Next Season

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 23 (AP) — Elmer Layden, Notre Dame athletic director, has released the Irish 1940 nine-game football schedule which calls for four home tilts.

Georgia Tech, originally to have played host to the Irish at Atlanta, will come to South Bend Oct. 12. The College of the Pacific opens the Irish season here Oct. 5.

The complete schedule:

Oct. 5 — College of Pacific here; Oct. 12 — Georgia Tech here; Oct. 19 — Carnegie Tech here; Oct. 26—Illinois at Champaign; Nov. 2 — Army at New York; Nov. 9 — Navy at Baltimore, Md.; Nov. 16 — Iowa here; Nov. 23 — Northwestern at Evanston, Ill., and Dec. 7 — Southern California at Los Angeles.

Catamount Passers Defeat Shenandoah

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 23—Potomac State School's Catamount cagers slated to open their annual series with Frostburg State College in the Maryland town tomorrow night went through only a limber up workout today following last night's 78-57 victory over Shenandoah College at Dayton, Va.

Coach "Horse" Lough's boys played one of their best games of the season in trimming Dayton after enjoying a 35-22 lead at halftime.

Gomez and Powell Sign with Yanks

New York, Jan. 23 (AP) — To Lefty Gomez and Jake Powell go the honors of being the first of the New York Yankees to sign their 1940 contracts.

Gomez, who won only 12 and lost eight last year, personally delivered his contract to President Ed Barrow today. Powell, relief outfielder who hit .244 in 31 games in 1939, mailed his in from Dayton, Ohio.

Kelly-Springfield

The Kellys swept all three with the Buckeyes and the Registereds took three from the Kant-Slips as the Rayons won two of three from the Sure-Stops in Kelly Springfield League matches on the Savoy Alleys.

Connie Mack "Hot" On McCoy's Trail

Philadelphia, Jan. 23 (AP)—Connie Mack wants Benny McCoy, former Detroit Tiger rookie second baseman, so much that, he said today, he has offered to top any proposition McCoy receives from a major League club.

The 77-year-old manager of the Athletics said he was "doing business" with McCoy, whom Judge Landis made a free agent Jan. 14, and would send his son, Earle, to Grandville, Mich., late this week with a blank contract.

Philadelphia A's Basketball Team Plays Here Sunday

Quaker City Court Crew Undefeated in 17 Games to Date

Meet Collegians at 3 p. m., Dragons To Play Prelim.

Coach Art Slocum's Cumberland Collegians will face the Philadelphia Athletics basketball team, this coming Sunday at three o'clock on the SS. Peter and Paul school court.

The Quaker City Five is the leading road team representing the "City of Brotherly Love" but when the A's step out on the court they have little love for friend or foe when it comes to banging away at the buckets.

Undefeated in seventeen starts, the Athletics have defeated leading quints from Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and New England. Listed among their victims are the New Briton Cremos, formerly of the American League; Utica Professionals, Port Chester, New York; Bridgeports' General Electrics, Passiac (N.J.) Reds, and the Reading Keys.

Former College Stars

Rated as one of the best clubs in the New York-Pennsylvania-New Jersey area, the Athletics roster is studded with former college stars.

The forwards are Bernie Snyder, former star of the American League and Drexel University, and Eddie Kremer of Ohio State University. Center is Art Burns of Villinova. Guards are Tom Carter, Georgetown University; Phil Cagney, Duke University; John McEllheny, Temple University, and "Butch" Weintraub who has signed to play with the Philadelphia Spahs.

George Bensoff, one of the best players in the Philadelphia area, carried as a utility player and handles any position capably.

GEORGE BENSOFF

Bensoff, utility player of the Philadelphia A's basketball team which meets the Cumberland Collegians next Sunday at SS. Peter & Paul school gym, here, is regarded as one of the best all-around courtmen in the Philadelphia area. He stands six feet, two inches and covers as much court as he does atmosphere.

The Sportlight BY GRANTLAND RICE

BASEBALL'S BLUEBIRD

San Francisco — You can't run into Ty Cobb without thinking of baseball. When I run into Ty, the Georgia Ghost, I turn the pages back thirty-six years to 1904 around Atlanta and Royston, Ga., where I first ran across the phenomenal stripling who later on was to set his game on fire.

The thought then was, "If winter comes, can Cobb be far behind?" For Cobb was the bluebird harbinger of spring. It was at that time that Cobb kept writing me letters, signing Smith, Jones, Brown and Robinson — all telling me what a great player young Tyrus Raymond Cobb was.

I fell for the gag, not knowing that Cobb was writing them and mailing them to me from every tank town stop. Anyway, Ty helped to make me quite a prophet when in the wake of these letters, I wrote an article headed, "Keep your eye on Tyrus Raymond Cobb, the riptown roarer of Royston." A great many millions kept their startled eyes on the same Cobb for just twenty-four years.

The Cobb of 1940

The Ty Cobb of 1940 lives just outside San Francisco, and his two favorite sports are hunting and golf. At the age of 54 his hair is thinner and part of the old streamlined body has packed on some weight—but not too much.

I asked Ty why it was that he always used that grip on a bat—with both hands spread well apart.

"It shows what habit will do in sport," Ty said. "I began playing baseball with much older and bigger kids. I couldn't grip the big bats that they had near the handle. I had to spread my hands and poke at the ball. I couldn't swing the big bats any other way. After that I couldn't change. But I was probably better off as a place hitter than I might have been as a slugger. I never believed in slugging anyway.

"I believe in getting on — and then getting around. Today they only believe in hitting a fast ball out of the park. In my opinion, baseball science has given way to power.

"I'm still for speed and science. Base stealing today is a lost art. It seems to be gone forever. Did you know that several high-class ball players last season failed to steal a base? I remember one year I had 96 steals. That's almost the same as 96 extra hits, for those steals put me in position to score."

An Amazing Record

In my opinion, Ty Cobb ran up one of the great records of sport—something close to an all-time record — maybe the all-time top. For a period of thirteen consecutive years he led the American League in batting exactly twelve times.

And all the hitters he had to beat out were Napoleon Lajoie, Shoeless Joe Jackson, Tris Speaker, Eddie Collins, Nig Clarke, Sam Crawford, Bobby Veach and a flock of others who were shooting from .350 to .400. One year Joe Jackson hit .410 and Cobb still beat him out, with a far deader ball than they have had for the last ten or fifteen years.

Here is a record — twelve batting championships out of thirteen consecutive major league play. That will never be approached again.

The Soft Spot

I asked Ty what he thought the difference was between the old-timers and the present crop.

"Stamina," Ty said. "I mean legs and arms. I've lived on my legs most of my life. As you remember in 24 big league years I never spared my legs. I've played many a game with almost no skin on either thigh.

"I believed then and I believe now in toughening up your system—not sparing it. Between seasons I hunted all winter, eight or ten hours a day. That's what Bill Dickey has done — and you know where Bill Dickey stands in baseball.

"The same goes for pitchers. The modern crop has weak arms. Look at Cy Young, winning 512 ball games. Show me a pitcher today who can even pitch 400 games. Remember Ed Walsh? One year Ed won 40 games and saved 12 others. He worked in 66 games that year — around 1908. And then pitched through a city series, working in almost every game.

"Most of these kids today can't take it. They have come up the easy way. They have to be pampered. A lot of them need a nurse. We had to come up the hard way. What a difference that makes—in any game.

"Any pitcher today who can win 20 games is almost a hero. Can you imagine Cy Young, who averaged over 20 games for well over 20 years, out there today?

"The kids today rarely use their legs. They ride in place of walking. I always had to walk. Maybe five miles — maybe twenty miles. The old-time pitchers had to work in fifty or sixty games. Maybe more. I've seen them come out long before the ball game was scheduled to start in order to get the kinks out of tired arms, working out slowly for over thirty minutes. But not today.

"I thought Dizzy Dean was going to be a throwback to the old days—until Diz hurt his arm. He always wanted to pitch. To be in there. But there are not many left like that. They'd rather be resting up.

"In my opinion, a real pitcher should be good for at least 45 ball games — maybe 50, if he is really needed. I mean men like Walsh, Cy Young, Alexander, Matty, Chesbro, Joe Wood — the top guys. They could take it — and they loved it. Not this modern crowd. At least, most of them. They haven't the stamina needed to go on when there is no one to take their place.

"I'll say this for Babe Ruth. He could always take it — and like it. So could Lou Gehrig. You never had to pamper Ruth or Gehrig. They were ball players of the old school. So was Matty. So was Alexander, drunk or sober. What a pitcher.

"I'll still go for stamina and fortitude. And I'll string with brains and speed. They still count. When they don't, then you haven't either a game or civilization. You haven't anything worth while. Not in sport."

Ty is riding the years in great shape. He is far and away the all-time top of all sporting stars on the financial side. You can make this doubled and redoubled.—(Released by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Wrigley Denies He Has Any Holdouts

Chicago, Jan. 23 (AP) — Owner Phil Wrigley denied he had any holdout problems even though some of his Chicago Cubs have asked for more money than was offered in their original contracts.

"Some of the boys are asking for more money, but I've always encouraged discussions over salary problems," explained the Cub owner. "I wouldn't call them holdouts at all."

He said Dizzy Dean's contract was returned again today unsigned.

"Dean didn't say how much he wanted but said he thought he was worth more than we offered," Wrigley added. "I don't know what I'll do about it yet, I haven't made up my mind."

He said nothing more had been heard from Hank Leiber, Augie Galan, Stan Hack or Clay Bryant.

Notre Dame To Play Four Home Games Next Season

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 23 (AP) — Elmer Layden, Notre Dame athletic director, has released the Irish 1940 nine-game football schedule which calls for four home tilts.

Georgia Tech, originally to have played host to the Irish at Atlanta, will come to South Bend Oct. 12. The College of the Pacific opens the Irish season here Oct. 5.

The complete schedule:

Oct. 5 — College of Pacific here; Oct. 12 — Georgia Tech here; Oct. 19 — Carnegie Tech here; Oct. 26—Illinois at Champaign; Nov. 2 — Army at New York; Nov. 9 — Navy at Baltimore, Md.; Nov. 16 — Iowa here; Nov. 23 — Northwestern at Evanston, Ill., and Dec. 7 — Southern California at Los Angeles.

Catamount Passers Defeat Shenandoah

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 23—Potomac State School's Catamount cagers slated to open their annual series with Frostburg State College in the Maryland town tomorrow night went through only a limber up workout today following last night's 78-57 victory over Shenandoah College at Dayton, Va.

Coach "Horse" Lough's boys played one of their best games of the season in trimming Dayton after enjoying a 35-22 lead at halftime.

Gomez and Powell Sign with Yanks

New York, Jan. 23 (AP) — To Lefty Gomez and Jake Powell go the honors of being the first of the New York Yankees to sign their 1940 contracts.

Gomez, who won only 12 and lost eight last year, personally delivered his contract to President Ed Barrow today. Powell, relief outfielder who hit .244 in 31 games in 1939, mailed his in from Dayton, Ohio.

P. S. C. Orders Investigation of Frostburg Water Company

Grahamtown Due To Get City Water Pending Probe

Public Service Commission Acts after Frequent Shortages

Baltimore, Jan. 23. (AP)—The Public Service Commission today ordered an investigation into the rates, charges, services, properties and affairs of the Frostburg Water Company and of the Frostburg-Grahamtown Water Company.

Pending the investigation, the commission ordered that the Frostburg-Grahamtown Company should obtain water from the city of Frostburg for its Grahamtown customers.

Grahamtown, with a population of about 60 families, has been dependent for its water supply upon the Frostburg-Grahamtown Company, which purchases its supply from the Frostburg Water Company.

"The services of the companies has become so inadequate and unreliable that the entire community of Grahamtown has been without water for several days at a time," the commission's order stated.

Research Program Is Announced For Unit of Maryland University

Airphoto of the new $250,000 Dairy Barns and Livestock Unit of the University of Maryland.

College Park, Jan. 23—Dr. Kenneth Ikeler, head of the animal and dairy husbandry department of the University of Maryland, has announced the plan of his department for research work in connection with the new $250,000 dairy cattle and livestock unit recently completed here under a State-WPA building program.

Dr. Ikeler said he felt the experienced and well trained personnel of the University in a leading position to render new and valuable service to the $40,000,000 State livestock industry.

Fifteen different research projects are now underway, involving (1) Breeding and Testing; (2) Feeding and Nutrition; (3) Livestock Disease Studies (cooperating with veterinary science); (4) Studies in Quality Milk and Its Products; (5) Quality Meat Studies; and (6) Marketing of Livestock and Its products (cooperating with agriculture economics).

Additional Projects

Several additional research projects are contemplated on pasture studies in swine production, and in certain phases of protein, vitamin and mineral studies.

In addition to these Dr. Ikeler pointed out "the need for research work to increase the efficiency of milk production by the concentration of improved germ plasm in carefully controlled dairy cattle breeding experiments to offset the increased cost of milk production."

The new facilities of the University, including buildings, equipment, and land, according to Dr. Ikeler, will enable the University to offer the highest type of livestock instruction to Maryland students.

Improvements Made

"Much needed improvements have been made in the flocks and herds, and in the teaching, research, extension, and disease control work," he said.

Seven major buildings, all of cinder block construction, are included in the new unit. They include a large dairy barn built in the form af an "H," the bar of the H being the feed storage barn; a bull barn; a hospital unit; a beef cattle barn with a central alley between box stalls and with storage space overhead; a horse barn similar to the beef cattle barn; a "T" shaped sheep barn with storage space in front and a single wing containing sheep pens for research work; a storage shed; and a research and classroom building.

Twelve Men Employed

Twelve men are employed by the University for teaching, research, and extension work in the field of animal and dairy husbandry. They ahe Professor Kenneth Ikeler, department head; Dr. Devoe Meade, breeding and nutrition; Professor H. C. Barker, dairy cattle extension Professor J. M. Vial, livestock extension specialist; Professor F. H. Leinbach, animal husbandry instruction and research; Dr. K. L. Turk, dairy cattle instruction and research; Dr. C. W. England, dairy manufacturing; M. H. Berry, associate in dairy cattle research; J. A. Conover, associate in dairy cattle extension; George B. Hughes, associate in dairy plant operation; H. E. Butler, assistant in dairy plant inspection; and J. B. Outhouse, instructor in slaughter livestock.

Kingwood, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—H. S. Whetsell, 72, publisher of the Preston County Journal who was stricken ill at his desk yesterday, was reported in "satisfactory" condition today at a clinic here. He formerly was chairman of the West Virginia State Newspaper Council.

Ex-Road Official Dies at Parsons

M. W. Parsons Succumbs at Age of 72 after Illness of 5 Months

Parsons, W. Va., Jan. 23—M. W. Parsons, 72, died this morning at the home of Jake S. Lambert, near Parsons, after being ill for five months.

He was born at Holly Meadows, a son of Jesse and Catherine Parsons, and was a road supervisor of Tucker county forty years ago. He was a farmer most of his life.

A sister, Mrs. Eliza Lambert, resides at Holly Meadows, and a brother, William L. Parsons, lives near Salinas, Calif.

More Snow Falls

Snow fell most of today throughout Tucker county. The State Road Commission has been kept busy this week keeping the road open between Davis and Harmon, where drifts are reported from five to eight feet deep. The school bus was behind schedule in Canaan Valley yesterday. Skaters are enjoying the frozen pond above the old pulp mill. Black Fork and Shavers Fork rivers here are also frozen over. It was 16 above zero at Davis last night.

Parsons Brief

The Parsons High School 4-H Club met at the court house last night, with Harold Repair in charge. A talk was made by Arnett L. Kidd, county club agent, and a courtesy tournament was held.

Parsons high school will play at Piedmont tomorrow night and will meet Thomas high here Friday night. The Davis game at Piedmont last night was postponed until next Monday night because of weather conditions.

New Snow Covers West Virginia; Travel Hazardous

Death Toll Rises to Five; Huntington Peddler Killed in Storm

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—Another snow storm added today to the hazards of winter travel in West Virginia.

Moving in across the southern portion of the state, it slowed traffic on roads which had been comparatively free of snow for several days.

Mercury in Twenties

In the Elkins sector, it added to the fall which has covered the mountains for two weeks.

With the temperature generally in the mid-20's, the snow slung to the ground and pavements, measuring one inch and deeper.

At Huntington, John E. Sartin was struck and killed during the storm while pushing his peddler's cart.

The accident increased deaths attributed to the present cold wave to five.

Engineers Watch Ohio

The continued freezing weather caused army engineers to keep a close watch on ice conditions in the Ohio river.

Ice was packed above the Gallipolis dam for seventy miles to Long Bottom, O.

The engineers, however, said they did not believe present conditions should give rise to flood alarms.

At dam 23, thirty-four miles above Point Pleasant, the ice blocked the river and raised the level five feet above normal.

Cinder Crews Out

Road commission cinder crews were ordered out, but in the south, inspectors said they did not believe the fall was heavy enough to warrant the use of plows.

In the north, however, deep drifts were reported throughout the mountains. In Preston county, some secondary roads were closed because of the drifts.

Reunion Features 50th Anniversary Of Eckhart Couple

Occasion Celebrated in Same House in Which Wedding Took Place

Frostburg, Jan. 23—Mr. and Mrs. Aaron L. Snyder Sr., well-known residents of Eckhart, observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary today in the same house in which they were married Jan. 23, 1890, by the Rev. James M. Miller, then pastor of the First English Baptist church of Frostburg. They had as their guests during the day their four children: Mrs. Clara M. Stark and Aaron Snyder Jr., of Eckhart, and Harry Snyder and Mrs. Etta Thomas, of Frostburg.

Mr. Snyder, a retired coal miner and for many years an active member of the Knights of Malta, has been inactive since suffering a paralytic stroke twelve years ago, but he is mentally keen and greatly liked by all who know him.

Mrs. Snyder, the former Miss Laura M. Porter, is a daughter of Mrs. Margaret Porter and the late Hanson L. Porter. Her mother, now 88 years old, who resides with another daughter, Mrs. Clara M. Stark, was unable to visit the Snyder home today for the family reunion because of the inclement weather.

Mr. Snyder stated today that he worked as a coal miner for the Consolidation Coal Company from May, 1881, to December, 1928, and, except for sickness, never lost a day's work and never was penalized for inferior work.

Mr. and Mrs. Snyder are members of the Eckhart Methodist church.

Eckhart Sportsmen Mark Third Anniversary Monday

Fulcher P. Smith, state game and inland fish commissioner; J. Wesley Kelly, executive secretary of the Western Maryland Outdoor Life Federation, and Joseph Minke, district deputy game warden, will be the speakers at the third anniversary celebration of the Eckhart unit of the Western Maryland Square Circle Sportsman's Association Monday evening, Jan. 29, at 7:30 o'clock, at the club house, Frog Hollow road, near Eckhart.

The program will include boxing bouts by the well known Booth brothers and others. Music will be furnished by the Little German Band, and humorous sketches will be contributed by William Hart, Frostburg's leading black face artist.

The guests will include the executive board of the Western Maryland Square Circle Association. Admission will be free to all who hold membership cards.

In addition to celebrating the third anniversary of the unit, the banquet will signalize the opening of a membership drive. The committee in charge consists of William Filsinger, John Watson, Marshall Porter and George Walters.

Student Teachers Serve 'Interneship' This Week

Inaugurating the third year of its "interneship" program Frostburg State Teachers college, in cooperation with school authorities of Garrett, Allegany, Washington, and Frederick counties, is having a group of its senior students spend this week in practice-teaching centers off the college campus.

The students began their practice teaching in September, spending one-half day in the campus elementary school. At the end of seventeen weeks they were given an opportunity to co-operate with a teacher in their home county in a school co-operatively selected by the college, the student, and the county superintendent of schools.

Students and their assignments include:

Allegany county: Miss Katherine Meese, Lonaconing; Robert Kirby, Dutch Hollow; Louis Connor, Eckhart; Miss June Luethke, Borden Mines; and Donald McLuckie, Frostburg.

Garrett county: Miss Ruth Ault, Rich Hill; Miss Lena George, Lageer; Miss Ethel Storey, McKinley; Hopwood Wooddell, Hutton.

Frederick county: Miss Ruth Wochtel, Myersville.

Testimony on Shumakers' Last Raid Wins New Trial for Their Cousin

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—Seventeen-year-old Earl Foltz won a new trial today because witnesses testifying about a rifle theft told of the last expedition of his cousins, members of the Shumaker gang.

Foltz was convicted in Hardy county and sentenced to from one to ten years in the state penitentiary.

The Supreme Court, noting Foltz's contention that the testimony about the trapping of the Shumakers tended to confuse and prejudice the jury, pointed out in its opinion that the Circuit Court fixed the value of the rifle at more than $20, making the charge a felony. The jury should have decided that point, the court said.

Sold Stolen Gun

Trial records showed a rifle and other guns were stolen from R. L. Orndorff's store in January, 1939, by Lee Shumaker, slain head of the gang, and his two brothers, and that Foltz later sold one of the rifles for $10.

The state brought out at the trial the story of how the Shumakers were trapped by state police hidden in a warehouse into which the brothers had forced their way. Lee Shumaker was killed, Wade was fatally wounded and Roy was sentenced to a prison term.

Louis Aliff also won a new trial in another criminal case. The Supreme Court, directing a new trial in Raleigh county on a burglary charged filed after the house of Billie O'Dell at Lester was robbed, said that "where the state relies upon evidence in whole or in part circumstantial, defendant's guilt must be proven to the exclusion of every reasonable hypothesis of innocence."

Silicosis Case Heard

In a silicosis case, the court ruled that the section of the silicosis compensation act specifying two years' continuous employment under the same conditions in order to qualify for payment does not mean a man must work for the same employer that length of time.

It overruled the Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board in the case of C. W. Hodges, miner for the New River Company. The compensation commissioner found Hodges within his rights and referred the case to the medical board. The employer appealed and the board dismissed the proceeding.

Beckley Water Shortage 'Worst in 35 Years'

Beckley, W. Va., Jan. 23 — Mayor A. K. Minter urged in a second proclamation today that citizens conserve the town water supply, saying the shortage is the "worst in thirty-five years."

Although additional sources have been tapped, the supply still is only one-third of normal, and residents can draw water only while the company's pumps are operating. They operate a few hours each day.

Water company officials said the shortage was caused by the general drought and freezing weather, which has prevented nomal seepage to water supplies.

Ex-Coal Official Jailed and Fined In Traffic Death

90-Day Jail Term, $5[illegible] Fine Imposed on Baltimorean at Romney

Romney, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—A fine of $500 and costs and a 90-day jail sentence were imposed today upon C. W. Shinnamon of Baltimore, former executive secretary of the Bituminous Coal Production Board for District 3, in the highway death of Mrs. Harold Schuck of Harrisonburg, Va.

Shinnamon pleaded "no defense" Jan. 15 before Judge Harlan F. Calhoun to an indictment charging him with responsibility for the death of the woman, who died in a Winchester, Va., hospital a few days after the car in which she and her husband were riding collided with Shinnamon's machine near here on April 16.

Judge Calhoun, in sentencing Shinnamon, said he would be eligible for a conditional parole after serving thirty days, providing the fine and costs have been paid.

Shinnamon, who began serving his sentence today, formerly resided in Chevy Chase, Md., and had headquarters in Fairmont, W. Va., while with the coal board.

Bureau of Agricultural Economics statistics show that 8.9 per cent of cash farm income in 1939 was derived from Government payments.

P. S. C. Orders Investigation of Frostburg Water Company

Grahamtown Due To Get City Water Pending Probe

Public Service Commission Acts after Frequent Shortages

Baltimore, Jan. 23. (AP)—The Public Service Commission today ordered an investigation into the rates, charges, services, properties and affairs of the Frostburg Water Company and of the Frostburg-Grahamtown Water Company.

Pending the investigation, the commission ordered that the Frostburg-Grahamtown Company should obtain water from the city of Frostburg for its Grahamtown customers.

Grahamtown, with a population of about 60 families, has been dependent for its water supply upon the Frostburg-Grahamtown Company, which purchases its supply from the Frostburg Water Company.

"The services of the companies has become so inadequate and unreliable that the entire community of Grahamtown has been without water for several days at a time," the commission's order stated.

Research Program Is Announced For Unit of Maryland University

Airphoto of the new $250,000 Dairy Barn and Livestock Unit of the University of Maryland.

College Park, Jan. 23—Dr. Kenneth Ikeler, head of the animal and dairy husbandry department of the University of Maryland, has announced the plan of his department for research work in connection with the new $250,000 dairy cattle and livestock unit recently completed here under a State-WPA building program.

Dr. Ikeler said he felt the experienced and well trained personnel of the University in a leading position to render new and valuable service to the $40,000,000 State livestock industry.

Fifteen different research projects are now underway, involving (1) Breeding and Testing; (2) Feeding and Nutrition; (3) Livestock Disease Studies (cooperating with veterinary science); (4) Studies in Quality Milk and Its Products; (5) Quality Meat Studies; and (6) Marketing of Livestock and Its products (cooperating with agriculture economics).

Additional Projects

Several additional research projects are contemplated on pasture studies in swine production, and in certain phases of protein, vitamin and mineral studies.

In addition to these Dr. Ikeler pointed out "the need for research work to increase the efficiency of milk production by the concentration of improved germ plasm in carefully controlled dairy cattle breeding experiments to offset the increased cost of milk production."

The new facilities of the University, including buildings, equipment, and land, according to Dr. Ikeler, will enable the University to offer the highest type of livestock instruction to Maryland students.

Improvements Made

"Much needed improvements have been made in the flocks and herds, and in the teaching, research, extension, and disease control work," he said.

Seven major buildings, all of cinder block construction, are included in the new unit. They include a large dairy barn built in the form af an "H," the bar of the H being the feed storage barn; a bull barn; a hospital unit; a beef cattle barn with a central alley between box stalls and with storage space overhead; a horse barn similar to the beef cattle barn; a "T" shaped sheep barn with storage space in front and a single wing containing sheep pens for research work; a storage shed; and a research and classroom building.

Twelve Men Employed

Twelve men are employed by the University for teaching, research, and extension work in the field of animal and dairy husbandry. They ahe Professor Kenneth Ikeler, department head; Dr. Devoe Meade, breeding and nutrition; Professor H. C. Barker, dairy cattle extension Professor J. M. Parsons, W. Va., Jan. 23—M. W. Parsons, 72, died this morning at the home of Jake S. Lambert, near Parsons, after being ill for five months.

He was born at Holly Meadows, a son of Jesse and Catherine Parsons, and was a road supervisor of Tucker county forty years ago. He was a farmer most of his life.

A sister, Mrs. Eliza Lambert, resides at Holly Meadows, and a brother, William L. Parsons, lives near Salinas, Calif.

More Snow Falls

Snow fell most of today throughout Tucker county. The State Road Commission has been kept busy this week keeping the road open between Davis and Harmon, where drifts are reported from five to eight feet deep. The school bus was behind schedule in Canaan Valley yesterday. Skaters are enjoying the frozen pond above the old pulp mill. Black Fork and Shavers Fork rivers here are also frozen over. It was 16 above zero at Davis last night.

Parsons Brief

The Parsons High School 4-H Club met at the court house last night, with Harold Repair in charge. A talk was made by Arnett L. Kidd, county club agent, and a courtesy tournament was held.

Parsons high school will play at Piedmont tomorrow night and will meet Thomas high here Friday night. The Davis game at Piedmont last night was postponed until next Monday night because of weather conditions.

Ira Fitzwater, Dayton, Ohio, was called here by the illness of his mother, Mrs. Ida Fitzwater, who is a patient at Tucker County hospital.

Dr. Don Thomas, Elkins, has been assisting here in the hospital the past few days.

Mrs. Covert Poling is recuperating at the hospital.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—Funeral services were held today for 81-year-old James H. Aldridge, retired Baltimore and Ohio railroad shop foreman, who died in a Chicago hospital. A native of Norfolk, Va., he first was employed by the B & O at Baltimore in 1876.

New Snow Covers West Virginia; Travel Hazardous

Death Toll Rises to Five; Huntington Peddler Killed in Storm

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—Another snow storm added today to the hazards of winter travel in West Virginia.

Moving in across the southern portion of the state, it slowed traffic on roads which had been comparatively free of snow for several days.

Mercury in Twenties

In the Elkins sector, it added to the fall which has covered the mountains for two weeks.

With the temperature generally in the mid-20's, the snow slung to the ground and pavements, measuring one inch and deeper.

At Huntington, John E. Sartin was struck and killed during the storm while pushing his peddler's cart.

The accident increased deaths attributed to the present cold wave to five.

Engineers Watch Ohio

The continued freezing weather caused army engineers to keep a close watch on ice conditions in the Ohio river.

Ice was packed above the Gallipolis dam for seventy miles to Long Bottom, O.

The engineers, however, said they did not believe present conditions should give rise to flood alarms.

At dam 23, thirty-four miles above Point Pleasant, the ice blocked the river and raised the level five feet above normal.

Cinder Crews Out

Road commission cinder crews were ordered out, but in the south, inspectors said they did not believe the fall was heavy enough to warrant the use of plows.

In the north, however, deep drifts were reported throughout the mountains. In Preston county, some secondary roads were closed because of the drifts.

Reunion Features 50th Anniversary Of Eckhart Couple

Occasion Celebrated in Same House in Which Wedding Took Place

Frostburg, Jan. 23—Mr. and Mrs. Aaron L. Snyder Sr., well-known residents of Eckhart, observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary today in the same house in which they were married Jan. 23, 1890, by the Rev. James M. Miller, then pastor of the First English Baptist church of Frostburg. They had as their guests during the day their four children: Mrs. Clara M. Stark and Aaron Snyder Jr., of Eckhart, and Harry Snyder and Mrs. Etta Thomas, of Frostburg.

Mr. Snyder, a retired coal miner and for many years an active member of the Knights of Malta, has been inactive since suffering a paralytic stroke twelve years ago, but he is mentally keen and greatly liked by all who know him.

Mrs. Snyder, the former Miss Laura M. Porter, is a daughter of Mrs. Margaret Porter and the late Hanson L. Porter. Her mother, now 88 years old, who resides with another daughter, Mrs. Clara M. Stark, was unable to visit the Snyder home today for the family reunion because of the inclement weather.

Mr. Snyder stated today that he worked as a coal miner for the Consolidation Coal Company from May, 1881, to December, 1928, and, except for sickness, never lost a day's work and never was penalized for inferior work.

Mr. and Mrs. Snyder are members of the Eckhart Methodist church.

Eckhart Sportsmen Mark Third Anniversary Monday

Fulcher P. Smith, state game and inland fish commissioner; J. Wesley Kelly, executive secretary of the Western Maryland Outdoor Life Federation, and Joseph Minke, district deputy game warden, will be the speakers at the third anniversary celebration of the Eckhart unit of the Western Maryland Square Circle Sportsman's Association Monday evening, Jan. 29, at 7:30 o'clock, at the club house, Frog Hollow road, near Eckhart.

The program will include boxing bouts by the well known Booth brothers and others. Music will be furnished by the Little German Band, and humorous sketches will be contributed by William Hart, Frostburg's leading black face artist.

The guests will include the executive board of the Western Maryland Square Circle Association. Admission will be free to all who hold membership cards.

In addition to celebrating the third anniversary of the unit, the banquet will signalize the opening of a membership drive. The committee in charge consists of William Filsinger, John Watson, Marshall Porter and George Walters.

Student Teachers Serve 'Interneship' This Week

Inaugurating the third year of its "interneship" program Frostburg State Teachers college, in cooperation with school authorities of Garrett, Allegany, Washington, and Frederick counties, is having a group of its senior students spend this week in practice-teaching centers off the college campus.

The students began their practice teaching in September, spending one-half day in the campus elementary school. At the end of seventeen weeks they were given an opportunity to co-operate with a teacher in their home county in a school co-operatively selected by the college, the student, and the county superintendent of schools.

Students and their assignments include:

Garrett county: Miss Ruth Ault, Rich Hill; Miss Lena George, Lageer; Miss Ethel Storey, McKinley; Hopwood Wooddell, Hutton.

Frederick county: Miss Ruth Wochtel, Myersville.

The January meeting of the J. U. Club was held last evening at the home of Miss Anna Walbert, Centennial street. Following the business meeting, refreshments were served.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Congregational church will meet Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the social hall of the church. Mrs. Daniel Evans will be hostess and Mrs. Emma Williams will have charge of the devotionals.

The banns of marriage were announced in St. Michael's church Sunday morning for the first time between Joseph Chabot, Vale Summit, and Miss Anna Powell, Frostburg.

Mrs. H. Reford Aldridge, Broadway, will deliver an address at the mid-week service of First Methodist church Wednesday evening.

The senior unit of St. Joan of arc, Catholic Students Mission Crusade, will hold a public dance Thursday night at St. Michael's hall. The committee in charge consists of Helen McKenzie, chairman; Mary Smeltz, Beuna Wells, Catherine Colgan, Helen Lewis, Joseph Perreti, Margaret Eberly, Pauline Smith, Betty Weimer and Margaret Bahen.

Following their weekly luncheon Monday evening at the Gunter hotel, the Frostburg Rotary club voted unanimously to endorse Dr. Thomas Bess, of Keyser, W. Va., for governor of District 180, Rotary International. The contest for the post will be decided at the annual district conference at Hagerstown, April 6, 7 and 8.

Frostburg Personals

Dr. John C. Pfeiffer, ill at his home, West Loo street, for several weeks, was reported somewhat improved today.

Mrs. Addis Casey, of La Plata, is here the guest of her sister, Mrs. Lucy Gover, and her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Casey. She is the former Miss Mary Hale.

Testimony on Shumakers' Last Raid Wins New Trial for Their Cousin

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—Seventeen-year-old Earl Foltz won a new trial today because witnesses testifying about a rifle theft told of the last expedition of his cousins, members of the Shumaker gang.

Foltz was convicted in Hardy county and sentenced to from one to ten years in the state penitentiary.

The Supreme Court, noting Foltz's contention that the testimony about the trapping of the Shumakers tended to confuse and prejudice the jury, pointed out in its opinion that the Circuit Court fixed the value of the rifle at more than $20, making the charge a felony. The jury should have decided that point, the court said.

Sold Stolen Gun

Trial records showed a rifle and other guns were stolen from R. L. Orndorff's store in January, 1939, by Lee Shumaker, slain head of the gang, and his two brothers, and that Foltz later sold one of the rifles for $10.

The state brought out at the trial the story of how the Shumakers were trapped by state police hidden in a warehouse into which the brothers had forced their way. Lee Shumaker was killed, Wade was fatally wounded and Roy was sentenced to a prison term.

Louis Aliff also won a new trial in another criminal case. The Supreme Court, directing a new trial in Raleigh county on a burglary charged filed after the house of Billie O'Dell at Lester was robbed said that "where the state relies upon evidence in whole or in part circumstantial, defendant's guilt must be proven to the exclusion of every reasonable hypothesis of innocence."

Silicosis Case Heard

In a silicosis case, the court ruled that the section of the silicosis compensation act specifying two years' continuous employment under the same conditions in order to qualify for payment does not mean a man must work for the same employer that length of time.

It overruled the Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board in the case of C. W. Hodges, miner for the New River Company. The compensation commissioner found Hodges within his rights and referred the case to the medical board. The employer appealed and the board dismissed the proceeding.

Beckley Water Shortage 'Worst in 35 Years'

Beckley, W. Va., Jan. 23 — Mayor A. K. Minter urged in a second proclamation today that citizens conserve the town water supply, saying the shortage is the "worst in thirty-five years."

Although additional sources have been tapped, the supply still is only one-third of normal, and residents can draw water only while the company's pumps are operating. They operate a few hours each day.

Water company officials said the shortage was caused by the general drought and freezing weather, which has prevented nomal seepage to water supplies.

Ex-Coal Official Jailed and Fined In Traffic Death

90-Day Jail Term, $50 Fine Imposed on Baltimorean at Romney

Romney, W. Va., Jan. 23 (AP)—A fine of $500 and costs and a 90-day jail sentence were imposed today upon C. W. Shinnamon of Baltimore, former executive secretary of the Bituminous Coal Producers Board for District 3, in the highway death of Mrs. Harold Schuck of Harrisonburg, Va.

Shinnamon pleaded "no defense" Jan. 15 before Judge Harlan F. Calhoun to an indictment charging him with responsibility for the death of the woman, who died in a Winchester, Va., hospital a few days after the car in which she and her husband were riding collided with Shinnamon's machine near here on April 16.

Judge Calhoun, in sentencing Shinnamon, said he would be eligible for a conditional parole after serving thirty days, providing the fine and costs have been paid.

Shinnamon, who began serving his sentence today, formerly resided in Chevy Chase, Md., and had headquarters in Fairmont, W. Va., while with the coal board.

Bureau of Agricultural Economics statistics show that 8.9 per cent of cash farm income in 1939 was derived from Government payments.

Pack Up Your Skin Ills

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE WAY of clearing the pores of dust is to have a clay pack once a week. Better do it when you have the house to yourself because you'll look terrible and terrifying. It's like something that has been dug up.

Get some kaolin from your druggist. Kaolin is our old friend, Fuller's earth, an excellent cleansing agent, which has been purified by chemical processes. If the skin is oily, mix the powder with witch hazel until you have a paste the consistency of whipped cream. Smooth it on a clean skin surface, include the neck and the ear lobes. Better smack back your hair, using your wave cap, since the pack won't do your hirsute thatch any good.

Pick up your mystery story and read for half an hour. As the pack dries, it will flake, and then it is time to remove it. Use tepid water for the purpose: follow with an ice rub. Get out the fragrant massage cream, give the flesh a brisk tapping; it will soon be colorful, have freshness.

For dry skins olive oil can be substituted for the witch hazel, or you can use a liquid cleansing oil, one of those semi-liquid preparations.

In combatting blackheads it is well to remember that the various avenues of eliminations should be kept active—the intestinal tract by eating fruit and bulky vegetables; the skin by daily bathing; lungs by deep breathing; kidneys by drinking plenty of water.

Light-colored eyebrows can be darkened with mascara or touched with a crayon. Neither one should be allowed to touch the skin; not because it will do harm but because artifice is apparent.

Permanent dyeing is done in beauty shops. The eyes are carefully protected with gauze, the surrounding skin treated so that the dye will not penetrate. It's no task for the home girl who likes to experiment; only professionals should attempt it.

It is not always safe to use a dye on eyelashes; dreadful accidents have happened, although there are harmless coloring agents. One must be sure that the operator is using them.

Candy Kitchen passers, holding down first place in the South End Booster League, handed the runner-up Garrett & Zilch outfit its first defeat of the season last night on the Penn Avenue School court in one of two loop battles. The score was 26 to 16. In the other tilt Keegan's Gassers took a 27-16 decision from the Smith Grocers.

Roy Whiteman, "Bones" Kammauf and Harold Fraley led the Candy Kids to their seventh straight victory by scoring 19 points Charles Callis and Reese Early tallied six points apiece in pacing the losers. The Kitcheners led all the way.

The Gassers piled up a 14 to 0 lead in the first quarter of their game but were prevented from turning the game into a rout when the Grocers settled down to play them on better than even terms the remainder of the contest. "Bus" Miller, with 10 markers and Bob Butts, with seven, were Keegan's leading scorers while Tom Spicer and Myrlin Burke shared scoring honors for the losers with six points each.

In games scheduled tonight the Merchants, who are tied for third place with the Keegan team, will battle with the Columbus Lodge crew which has failed to crash the win column in six tussles at 8:15, and Post's Pirates will engage the Webers at 7:30. Monday night's lineups:

Winter Carnival Plans Completed

Miss Betty Schneider To Be Crowned Queen at Frostburg Friday

Frostburg, Jan. 23 — Plans were complete today for the annual Winter Carnival Dance to be held Friday at State Teachers college.

The main feature of the dance will be the crowning of the Carnival Queen, Miss Betty Schneider, of Frostburg, by Dr. John L. Dunkle, president of the college. Miss Schneider will wear a novel skating outfit furnished by a Frostburg store.

The maid of honor will be Miss Ruth Wachtel of Myersville. The other attendants are Betty Breakiron, Betty Greenya, Ruth Hammer, Mary King Wilson, all of Cumberland; Frances Lammert, Frostburg, and Alma Moore, Hagerstown. They will wear snow suits to carry out the winter spirit, which is the theme of the dance.

The dance, with the crowning of the Queen, has long been an annual affair under the auspices of The Maryland Singers and The Little Theater.

Decorations to carry out the theme are being arranged by Miss Sally Craft and Harold Messman. The Aristocrats orchestra will furnish the music.

Fabyan Suit Snagged

Salem, Mass., Jan. 23 (AP)—Judge John A. Costello today informed Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, Brookline tennis star, that she had not proved cruel and abusive treatment in her suit for divorce from Marshall Fabyan, of Manchester.

He added, however, that he would take the case under advisement if she wanted to file briefs. Mrs. Fabyan testified yesterday that her husband had lost interest in tennis and had become critical of her tennis friends.

Pack Up Your Skin Ills

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE WAY of clearing the pores of dust is to have a clay pack once a week. Better do it when you have the house to yourself because you'll look terrible and terrifying. It's like something that has been dug up.

Get some kaolin from your druggist. Kaolin is our old friend, Fuller's earth, an excellent cleansing agent, which has been purified by chemical processes. If the skin is oily, mix the powder with witch hazel until you have a paste the consistency of whipped cream. Smooth it on a clean skin surface, include the neck and the ear lobes. Better smack back your hair, using your wave cap, since the pack won't do your hirsute thatch any good.

Pick up your mystery story and read for half an hour. As the pack dries, it will flake, and then it is time to remove it. Use tepid water for the purpose; follow with an ice rub. Get out the fragrant massage cream, give the flesh a brisk tapping; it will soon be colorful, have freshness.

For dry skins olive oil can be substituted for the witch hazel, or you can use a liquid cleansing oil, one of those semi-liquid preparations.

In combatting blackheads it is well to remember that the various avenues of eliminations should be kept active—the intestinal tract by eating fruit and bulky vegetables; the skin by daily bathing; lungs by deep breathing; kidneys by drinking plenty of water.

Light-colored eyebrows can be darkened with mascara or touched with a crayon. Neither one should be allowed to touch the skin; not because it will do harm but because artifice is apparent.

Permanent dyeing is done in beauty shops. The eyes are carefully protected with gauze, the surrounding skin treated so that the dye will not penetrate. It's no task for the home girl who likes to experiment; only professionals should attempt it.

It is not always safe to use a dye on eyelashes; dreadful accidents have happened, although there are harmless coloring agents. One must be sure that the operator is using them.

Winter Carnival Plans Completed

Miss Betty Schneider To Be Crowned Queen at Frostburg Friday

Frostburg, Jan. 23 — Plans were complete today for the annual Winter Carnival Dance to be held Friday at State Teachers college.

The main feature of the dance will be the crowning of the Carnival Queen, Miss Betty Schneider, of Frostburg, by Dr. John L. Dunkle, president of the college. Miss Schneider will wear a novel skating outfit furnished by a Frostburg store.

The maid of honor will be Miss Ruth Wachtel of Myersville. The other attendants are Betty Breakiron, Betty Greenya, Ruth Hammer, Mary King Wilson, all of Cumberland; Frances Lammert, Frostburg, and Alma Moore, Hagerstown. They will wear snow suits to carry out the winter spirit, which is the theme of the dance.

The dance, with the crowning of the Queen, has long been an annual affair under the auspices of The Maryland Singers and The Little Theater.

Decorations to carry out the theme are being arranged by Miss Sally Craft and Harold Messman. The Aristocrats orchestra will furnish the music.

Fabyan Suit Snagged

Salem, Mass., Jan. 23 (AP)—Judge John A. Costello today informed Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, Brookline tennis star, that she had not proved cruel and abusive treatment in her suit for divorce from Marshall Fabyan, of Manchester.

He added, however, that he would take the case under advisement if she wanted to file briefs. Mrs. Fabyan testified yesterday that her husband had lost interest in tennis and had become critical of her tennis friends.

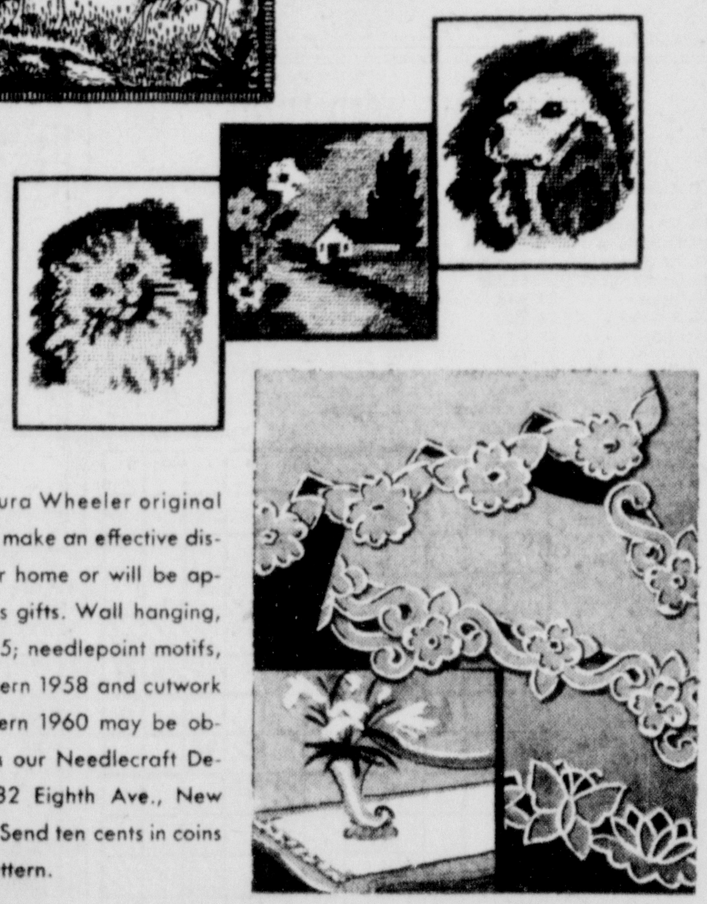
Laura Wheeler asks:

Do you know that needlework adds that final touch of distinction to your home?

Whether you crochet, embroider, knit or make quilts, you will find exactly what you want in the original designs by Laura Wheeler which are a daily feature of this newspaper. You do not have to be an expert needlewoman to use the patterns which are made from these designs as they come complete with detailed instructions and illustrations.



These Laura Wheeler original designs will make an effective display in your home or will be appreciated as gifts. Wall hanging, pattern 1985; needlepoint motifs, center, pattern 1958 and cutwork linens, pattern 1960 may be obtained from our Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth Ave., New York, N. Y. Send ten cents in coins for each pattern.

WHY PAY MORE?!! Here is the famous "Treasure Chest" sheet that has been tested by the Government, averaging 144 threads per square inch. Only heaviest-quality muslin used in Treasure Chests. It's spun and woven by experts, giving 3-inch hem at the head and 1-inch at the foot. Practically free of sizing. These sheets had a laundry test record of 340 times, which makes it equal to 7 years of once-per-week washing and ironing at home. That is why these sheets cost so little, considering the long wear received. Stop in your local Montgomery Ward Order Office at 52 N. Centre or phone 822. NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals will be received in duplicate by the Upper Potomac River Commission, a corporation incorporated under the laws of the State of Maryland, at the office of its Chairman, George W. Legge, Esq., at Room No. 26, in the Liberty Trust Building, Cumberland, Maryland, until 11 o'clock a. m., on Saturday, February 3, 1940, on the following items of equipment. This equipment is for use on the construction of the Savage River Dam.

Item 1 1—Electric Motor Driven Diamond Drill with three speed adjustable screw feed swivel head, complete with worm gear driven winch head with necessary 220 volt, 3-phase, 60-cycle splash proof motor complete with starter. Frame mounted with swivel head hinged to permit drilling at any angle. All gears and ball bearings to be enclosed in grease tight housings.

Item 2 1—Electric motor driven, double acting force pump of sufficient capacity for Item 1. Separately mounted on steel frame and with foot valve and strainer. Motor with starter, characteristics as for Item 1.

Item 3 2—5 Foot Drill Rods, complete with couplings.

Item 4 9—10 Foot Drill Rods, complete with couplings.

Item 5 6—Core Lifters, 2⅜" Core.

Item 6 6—Core Lifters, 1⅜" Core.

Item 7 2—Double Tube Core Barrels, 5 Ft. long, 2⅜" Core.

Item 8 2—Double Tube Core Barrels, 10 Ft. long, 2⅜" Core.

Item 9 2—Double Tube Core Barrels, 10 Ft. long, 1⅜" Core.

Item 10 2—Round Nose Ready Set Cast Bortz Bit Set, 2⅜" Core.

Item 11 2—Round Nose Ready Set Cast Bortz Bit Set, 1⅜" Core.

Item 12 2—Borium Starting Bits, for 3" Hole.

Item 13 100 Feet Flush Joint Casing for 3" Hole.

Each bidder will be required to furnish his or its own specifications in addition to those which are herein set forth as being necessary. Additional information, if required, may be secured at the Commission's Construction Office, at the site of the dam, Savage River, in Garrett County, Maryland. Each bid is to specify date upon which delivery of equipment will be made if contract is awarded to bidder, as time may be of the essence in awarding this contract.

The Upper Potomac River Commission reserves the right to select such equipment, machinery, or vehicles, as may in its judgment be best suited to the purposes for which said equipment, vehicles, or machinery is intended to be used, and further reserves the right to reject any or all proposals.

Public Library Robbed; Police 'Know Nothing'

Cash Register Smashed, Ten Dollars Stolen, As Burglaries Continue

Downtown business men yesterday took precautionary measures to protect their stores in the wake of another breaking and entering job Monday night—this time at the Cumberland Public Library.

Police officials, however, continued to pretend to newspaper reporters that no crimes are being committed in Cumberland. Assistant Chief John J. Treiber said last night that he knew nothing about the library robbery.

Back Door Entered

The cash register at the library was smashed and rifled sometime between 9:15 p. m., and 11:30 p. m by hoodlums who made their entry through the back door of the building, Miss Mary Walsh, librarian, reported.

Ten dollars was taken from the cash register, Miss Walsh said.

Big Fine in Loot

"This is much more than we usually have on hand," Miss Walsh said. "It just happened that an unusually large rental fine amounting to five dollars was paid the afternoon before the robbery. The ten dollars was mostly in dimes, nickels, and quarters."

Miss Walsh reported yesterday that police were conducting an investigation.

New Lock on Door

"It's not so much the amount but the feeling that such a thing could happen and might happen again," Miss Walsh said. "Since Monday we have put an unusually strong lock on that back door; it might be a good idea to mention that."

Meanwhile, a number of merchants hired extra private policemen for nightly patrol duty in the downtown area.

Young Groups Suspected

The increased number of private detectives has been put on duty to combat the pilfering some officers say is due to young gangs of burglars who are taking advantage of inadequate police protection.

Night watchmen in downtown office buildings, urged by their employers to keep on their toes, have reported seeing groups of youths prowling at night in the business section.

No Arrests in City In Last Two Days

Yesterday marked the second straight day that no arrests were made in Cumberland, the blotter at police headquarters showed at midnight.

Not even a parking ticket was given away yesterday, an inquiry showed. No drunks were found who needed arresting. Automobile drivers were being unusually good.

The city jail was empty.

Housewife Found Unconscious In Beauty Parlor

Took '5 Tablets,' 38-Year-Old Woman Says at Hospital

A 38-year-old housewife, found unconscious in the basement of the Spruill Apartments yesterday afternoon, told Allegany hospital attendants that she had swallowed five capsules, which apparently contained headache or sleeping powders.

The woman, Mrs. Viola Long, wife of Kell Long, was reported in a "fair" condition last night.

The attending physician refused to divulge any details concerning the case, and hospital attendants likewise declined to release any information.

Mrs. Long was found about 4 p. m. by the apartment janitor in a chair in the rear room of the Shamrock Beauty Shop, located in the basement of the Decatur street apartment-building where she lived. She was unconscious.

She was rushed to the nearby hospital when efforts to revive her failed.

There she regained consciousness a few times, but not long enough to give details about the incident.

Mrs. Long told a nurse that she took "five capsules"—of what she didn't say—about 1 o'clock.

She was unable to say anything further and made no mention of why she took the powders.

Neighbors in the apartment reported that Mrs. Long took the sedative to get rid of a headache and get some rest. They said they had seen her about noon, and she "looked all right then."

The patient appeared very drowsy when she was admitted to the hospital's dispensary.

She was ordered held "for observation," and her condition was reported "fair" last night.

The Spruill Apartments are located at 303 Decatur street.

Huster Heeds Clemency Plea

WPA Foreman Gets Suspended Fine

Associate Judge William A. Huster heeded a plea for clemency in Circuit court yesterday as he suspended a $150 fine against a Flintstone WPA foreman.

The fine had been imposed on Thomas R. Ash in Trial Magistrates court for driving after his license was revoked.

He had also been fined $25 for obtaining a license by misrepresentation. This fine Judge Huster ordered paid, together with the costs.

Ash, who had appealed the verdicts, pleaded guilty to both charges when the cases were called by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris.

Attorney William L. Wilson Jr., who with Attorney Edward J. Ryan represented him, told the court that Ash made only small wages and was the support of his mother.

The license had been suspended in 1933 after Ash was convicted of drunken driving, Mr. Wilson said. He declared that Ash, one of several men in a car, had "taken the blame" because he was the only one unemployed at the time.

He switched his initials last year in applying for a new license, and it was issued since the record showed no conviction against R. T. Ash.

Mr. Wilson added that his client did not realize that he had the right to apply for re-instatement of the permit in his own name.

Prohibition on Again For Man Who Chased Wife out of House

A 41-year-old Triple Lakes man who allegedly came home drunk Monday night and chased his wife and five children out of their home was found guilty of disorderly conduct, but was acquitted of assault with intent to kill yesterday by Trial Magistrate Frank A. Perdew.

The father, Marshall R. Lease, was acquitted on the assault charge because testimony did not show that he had a murderous weapon and because his wife and children were not harmed.

State Trooper George J. Miller, who made the arrest, testified, however, that Lease called him nasty names.

Although Lease was found guilty of disorderly conduct, he was given a suspended sentence on condition he refrain from drinking alcohol.

Railroader Hurt In Fall at Shop

Wayne J. Skidmore, 52, of Ridgeley, a Western Maryland Railway employe, was injured about the head and chest yesterdey afternoon when he fell about 15 feet from the top of a freight car at the railway's shops.

Skidmore was taken to Memorial hospital. His condition was reported "fair" last night.

Elwood Street Boy Hurt In Fall on Icy Street

Raymond Wempe, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond F. Wempe, 614 Elwood street, sustained a gash on the right side of his head yesterday afternoon when he slipped and fell on an icy sidewalk while returning home from school.

Four sutures were used at Allegany hospital to close the wound. He was able to return home after treatment.

Elvin W. Leasure, 19, of Willowbrook road, suffered lacerations about the head and face Monday night when his sled crashed into a tree in Constitutional Park. He was released from Memorial hospital yesterday.

Phone Manager Wins Cartwheels In Rotary's Prof. Quiz Contest

The eminent Prof. Quiz arrived in Cumberland yesterday and put up at the Fort Cumberland hotel for a round with the local Rotarians.

The professor, in the person of Charles A. Piper, conducted one of his quizzes for the club as a pinch-hitting program filler. The result was that many club members thought the program equally as good as more formal ones, if not better.

Prof. Piper called for six volunteers to stand up and be questioned with a series of puzzlers and near-puzzles concocted by Charles L. Kopp with the connivance of Piper and Charles S. Catherman, the program committee chairman.

Duty's Call Answered

Nobly responding to the call of duty were Thomas E. Gilchrist, Miles G. Thompson, James L. Barrow, Wegster K. Edwards, George Henderson, and Dr. Frank U. Davis. The call proved all the more interesting when Piper announced that five silver dollars—real silver dollars, too, count 'em—would be paid over to the highest scorer and three cartwheels to the next highest.

Arnet Widener, local salesman, was engaged to serve as referee, while Catherman was score keeper.

George Henderson Second

A series of interesting questions, which proved both educational and edifying, were asked and answered, the audience chiming in when any contestant missed fire. Once or twice, by the way, the audience missed fire, also.

Barrow carried away the five silver dollars, having attained top score of 525 points and Hendehson drew the three dollars with a second scoring of 500 flat. Gilchrist registered 450 for third place.

Clubwomen Talk Over Democracy's Problems

Cumberland's mayor and city council last night was pointed out as a pertinent example of "Democracy's Problems Today," topic of the forum conducted by the Busi- Club at the Fort Cumberlandhahra ness and Professional Women's Club at the Fort Cumberland Hotel.

This illustration of the topic was given by James Blackwell, editor of the Voice of Labor and one of four speakers who expressed their views at the spirited and oft-applauded discussion. Other speakers were Harold W. Smith, Miss Lillian Compton, and Miss Louise Shaffer.

Handbill Ordinance Again!

In what was the only direct reference to the Cumberland scene (the talks for the most part were impersonal in tone and covered a broad area),) Mr. Blackwell stated that the duly elected representatives of the people were supposed to vigorously oppose special privileges for special groups.

The speaker then pointed out the mayor and council as a "bullheaded group of people who refused to be realistic about the handbill and picket ordinances" and who "refused to comply with the dictates of the United States Supreme Court."

Council Chided

Declaring that "more groups should become vocal," and that "the laws should apply to the humble as well as the elite," Mr. Blackwell chided the mayor and council for allowing the Cumberland Community Choir the use of the council chamber for choir rehearsals but "brutally rejecting a similar request by the Townsend club.

Smith Raps Interference

Mr. Smith, in a concise discussion of the problem from the viewpoint of business, declared that "the least government is the best government", referred to restrictive taxes, restrictive activities in legislation, and competition of government with business as being responsible for the "feeling of uncertainty that has been created."

Mr. Smith then referred to a recent statement by the articulate Wendell Wilkie to the effect that business would spend a billion and a half dollars in expansion programs if assured hat it would be free of government restrictions.

All Workers "in Business"

The Chamber secretary then neatly summed up the unemployment situation in capsule form by stating that any man who works is in business and that business has seen a decline of recent years due, mainly, to the restrictions already enumerated.

Miss Compton rapped the average American's indifference to the country's most pressing problems in her talk from the professional woman's viewpoint.

No Groups Independent

"We are dependent on other groups," Miss Compton declared, citing the fact that any upsets along the economic front effect all groups.

Referring directly to the class of which she is a member, Miss Compton urged equal opportunity and equal pay for professionl women with other groups regardless of sex and religious belief.

Working Women Defended

"Society has forced women into business," Miss Compton asserted in defending working women and pointing out that women are no longer self-sustaining in the home.

Mr. Blackwell, the third speaker of the evening, emphasized the fact that "organized labor is the very fount and beginning of our existence today," asserted that the first group crushed by totalatarian powers is the organized worker group.

"Abuses" Brought Restrictions

The speaker then took occasion to differ with Mr. Smith, stating that the "restrictions" referred to by the Chamber secretary were the result of "long abuses."

Declaring that the "voice of the people" has been heard in recent elections, Mr. Blackwell stated that the "broad, humanitarian theory in government is destined to continue."

Labor's "Great Awakening"

The speaker declared that there had been a "great awakening" in the labor movement in the last few years, an awakening aided by the New Deal and the National Labor Relations Board.

Terming the Wagner labor act as the "noblest concept of democracy," Mr. Blackwell stated that the government came to the conclusion that "the scales had been weighted on the side of the employer."

Old Argument Attacked

Final speaker of the evening was Miss Shaffer who adeptly attacked the familiar argument that the unemployment problem would be solved if working women were ousted from their jobs.

Quoting statistics, Miss Shaffer pointed out that the positions held by women today would take care of only three per cent of the total number of unemployed men.

Miss Shaffer, attacking discrimination against the woman worker, said that any movement to oust any individual group from employment would mark the beginning of a crumpling democracy.

Wants No Discrimination

"We need laws that make absolutely no discrimination in any one direction, whether it be in the labor ranks, the professional ranks or any other ranks," Miss Shaffer stated emphatically.

"Political democracy we have acquired in this country," the speaker said. "Economy democracy we have begun to acquire."

Labor and the Sales Tax

Asked if unity of the AF of L and the CIO were desirable and if the aims of the two groups were essentially the same, Mr. Blackwell replied yes in each instance.

Asked why labor was opposed to the sales-tax, Mr. Blackwell replied primarily because it hates a tax that "hits Howard Bruce, a Baltimore millionaire, and a $25-a-week working man equally hard.

"Taxes," the speaker said, "should be based primarily on the ability to pay. It is for this reason that a sales tax is discriminating in nature."

Aid for the "Submerged Third"

Asked to clarify an assertion on governmental "planned economy," Mr. Blackwell declared himself for "production for use and not for profit, in other words, an economy that would help the submerged third."

Asked if business hadn't been short-sighted in the matter of hours and wages, Mr. Smith said that business admittedly had made many mistakes, declared that the aim of business was "the best hours and best wages consistent with a fair profit."

Flue Fire Call

A flue fire was extinguished yesterday at 9:20 a. m., at the home of J. W. Noonan, 435 Goethe street, by East Side firemen.

Deaths

John Porter

John Porter, retired railroader, died last night at Allegany hospital where he had been a patient for nearly two years. He was 72.

Born at Mt. Savage, Mr. Porter was a son of the late Steve and Elizabeth Porter. He worked for the Western Maryland and the Cumberland and Pennsylvania for a total of more than thirty-five years. He retired about twenty years ago.

Surviving are three sons, Raymond and Ernest Porter, of Newark, N. J., and Frank Porter, of Cumberland; two daughters, Mrs. James S. Hutton, of Ridgeley, and Mrs. George Tipton, of Locust Grove; three brothers, Douglas Porter, of Ellerslie, Louis Porter, of Glassport, Pa., and Albert Porter, of Frankfort, Ky.; and four sisters, Mrs. Viola Williams, of Baltimore; Mrs. Emma Reynolds, of Mt. Savage; Mrs. Leroy Goodrich, of Cumberland, and Mrs. Nettie Little, of Orange, N. J.

Mrs. Celia Shuck

Mrs. Celia Shuck, of Barton, died last night at Potomac Valley hospital in Keyser, W. Va., where she had been a patient since Jan. 13. She was 46.

Mrs. Shuck, a daughter of the late Dennis and Margaret Brown Healy, was a native of Elk Garden, W. Va., and formerly lived in Westernport.

She was a member of St. Gabriel's Catholic church of Barton.

Surviving are her husband, Connie Shuck, of Lonaconing; two daughters, Miss Helen Shuck, of Keyser, and Mrs. Harmon Arnold, of Barton; three sons, Connie Shuck Jr., of Keyser, Carroll Shuck, of Lonaconing, and Edward Shuck, of Barton; four brothers, John Healy, of Westernport, Frank and James Healy, of Piedmont, and Leo Healy, of Philadelphia; and a sister, Mrs. Sheridan Evans, of Westernport.

The body was removed to the home of her son, Connie Shuck Jr., on South Main street, Keyser.

Mrs. Mary F. Newlon

Mrs. Mary Fanny Newlon, widow of Albert S. Newlon, died last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. A. Adams, 128 South street. She was 89 years and nine months old.

Mrs. Newlon was a native of Culpepper, Va. She was a charter member of the First Baptist church of Westernport.

Surviving, besides her daughter, are three sons, Lewis Newlon, of Fort Ashby, W. Va.; Herbert Newlon, of Cumberland, and Odis Newlon, of Luke; nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

The body was removed to the home of her son, Odis.

William T. Hixon

William T. Hixon, retired B & O. railroad engineer, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at his home, 126 Virginia avenue. He was 74.

A native of Spring Gap, Mr. Hixon was a son of the late Joseph and Hannah Hixon. He worked for the railroad for nearly half a century, retiring about 10 years ago.

Mr. Hixon belonged to the Odd Fellows Lodge in Brunswick. He was a member of the Grace Methodist church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sue M. Hixon; a daughter, Mrs. John M. Fisher, of Fort Ashby, W. Va.; and four grandchildren, Frances M., Edward W., Dorothy J., and Clara L. Fisher, also of Fort Ashby.

Albert V. Davis

Albert V. Davis, of Williams road, died yesterday morning at Memorial hospital where he was admitted Jan. 20. He was 64.

Mr. Davis, a farmer, was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Louis Davis. H was a member of the Methodist church.

Surviving are a brother, Charles L. Davis, of Williams road; and two sisters, Mrs. Hattie Perdew, of Pratt, Md., and Miss Grace E. Davis, of Williams road.

The body will remain at Wolford's funeral home.

Driver Convicted On 27th Birthday

Celanese Worker Guilty Of Drunk Driving

The courtroom was the locale for a "birthday party" yesterday afternoon, but the "guest of honor" was none too well treated by his "hosts."

It was the twenty-seventh birthday of Carl M. Smith, Green Ridge Celanese worker, but that didn't stop a Circuit court jury from upholding his conviction on a drunken driving charge, for which he had been fined $100 in Trial Magistrate's court here.

The jurors did, however, reverse his conviction for reckless driving, in which a $10 fine had been imposed.

Jury Out Half Hour

The verdict was returned after only half an hour's deliberation.

Later, Defense Attorney Edward J. Ryan urged suspension of the fine, noting that Smith was married and the father of a small child.

"There are too many of these cases," Associate Judge William A. Huster commented as he denied the clemency plea and ordered the $100 fine paid, together with the costs. He gave him until April, however, to pay the fine.

Five Police Testify

The jury convicted Smith on the drunken driving count after a state trooper and four city police officers testified he was "under the influence of intoxicants" when they arrested him on Baltimore street Sunday afternoon, Oct. 29.

He was picked up after the La-Vale State Police sub-station had received a call from an un-named citizen about his allegedly irregular driving.

Had Been to Hancock

Taking the stand in his own defense, Smith maintained he had had only two bottles of beer on the day he was arrested.

Nabbed at 3 p. m., he stated that he had drunk one bottle of beer about 10 a. m. another at 1 p. m. He denied that he was at all intoxicated.

His testimony was largely substantiated by his father-in-law, Guy Bucy, who was a passenger in the car.

The two men said they had been to an orchard near Hancock for apples and were en route to the Celanese plant to get a couple of passengers when Smith was arrested.

Defense Testimony

Another defense witness was Dayton Dolly, Flintstone gasoline service station attendant, who said he noticed nothing "out of the way" about Smith when he stopped for gas on his way into Cumberland.

Little direct evidence was presented concerning the reckless driving charge, although two of the officers declared Smith was driving at an excessive rate of speed down Baltimore avenue hill.

SKI BULLETIN

Skiing conditions at New Germany were reported late last night as follows:

Temperature—Ten above.

OPEN SLOPE — Skiing excellent. New powder on packed base.

WHISKEY HOLLOW TRAIL —Road to this trail, blocked since Sunday, was opened up yesterday. Skiing excellent.

Jr. Association 'Boys' Hear Tales Of Cumberlandia

'Hodge-Podge History' Told by F. L. Carl, Newspaper Dean

"Down Bedford street, so quiet, staid,
Time seems to hardly lay his hand;
The maple trees 'neath which I played
Still flourish as they sturdy stand.
'Tis true, at intervals between
The quaint old dormer-windowed bricks,
Some ugly modern house is seen
Whose builder played fantastic tricks
With iron and stone; but those are few.
The most is old, the old I love;
Old homes, old doorways leading through,
Dim lit with fan-lights high above."

Gives 'Hodge-Podge History'

Mr. Carl summing up the talk he made for the organization at the Golden Gate Tea Room, later said, "I told the boys a few things about Cumberland, I guess you might call it a 'hodgepodge history.' "

In stressing the unusual scenic beauties of the Cumberland area, Mr. Carl weaved in the tribute made by Bishop Henry Yates Satterlee—"that the glory of the Alps is no greater than the picturesque area in which Cumberland is located."

Spicy Reminiscences

In his chat spiced with reminiscenses, Mr. Carl skipped goodhumoredly from one topic to another, read Thackeray's glowing description of the Narrows and Cumberland, and the next moment was drolly remarking that "standard supplies for the Cumberland-Washington trip made on flat boats were two gallons of whisky, four tincups, four boatmen, twenty feet of rope and thirty pounds of bacon."

The next minute, Mr. Carl was enthusiastically lauding a recent editorial titled "The School Upon the Hill", that appeared in the Fort Hill Sentinel.

Praises Fort Hill Writer

"Remarkable descriptive power," Mr. Carl said after reading the editorial, one paragraph which rippled as follows: "The beautiful mountains of Maryland stretch forth mile after mile, their tops making a lasting fringe on the horizon with the Knobleys of West Virginia with their roller coaster contour."

Mr. Carl next dipped in that priceless scrapbook he has been keeping all these years, and mischievously proceeded to read a number of the juicier morsels to the delight of the grinning young business men.

Turning to the more drab aspects of Cumberland history, Mr. Carl recalled that "there have been a number of atrocious murders here that have never been solved."

Describes Lynching

A lynching he witnessed was also vividly described by the raconteur of the evening.

Next item regretted by the speaker was the fact that Cumberland, in contrast to Hagerstown and Frederick, "has always been an orphan as far as philanthropy is concerned.

"There certainly has been a paucity in giving for the public weal," Mr. Carl commented.

Recalls 'Nifty Nineties'

Describing the days when he first came to Cumberland in the "nifty nineties," Mr. Carl recalled how "I, an impecunious reporter, found myself wearing a cutaway, fancy waistcoat, striped trousers, ascot and derby hat, sometimes a light gray one."

"The gay nineties called for rather formal dress," Mr. Carl explained.

Hotel Manager Wears Red Flannels As Feature of Birthday Surprise

The rotund Elsa Maxwell never staged a tackier tacky party than the one held last night at 743 Washington street, a jovial witness reported at 11:15 p. m. last night.

Purpose of the shindig was primarily to surprise Albert E. Morgan, manager of the Algonquin hotel, on the occasion of his birthday.

Reliable reports last night indicated that the surprise party was indeed a surprise for the hotel manager—especially after the guests had outfitted him in a blazing suit of red underwear.

The guests at the party danced to the music of Ma Bishop's Mountaineers.

Month-Old Snow Gets White Top; Cold Continues

Western Maryland Snow-Blanketed Since Dec. 27

Snow that has covered Western Maryland since Dec. 27—four weeks ago today — was piled higher yesterday as nearly two inches fell before midnight.

The snow slowed down highway traffic, but the roads were not especially dangerous last night, State police reported. Cumberland streets were slippery, however.

Leo T. Downey, State Roads engineer in this district, reported that nearly a score of trucks were kept through the night putting cinders on slippery spots on the highways.

Mr. Downey also reported that several thousand feet of snow fences have recently been put up along the road to the New Germany winter sports center, helping to prevent drifting there.

The temperature in Cumberland late last night was 24 degrees, with some snow still flying. At Frostburg, and in the Garrett county mountains, the mercury was down to ten.

The official forecast for Maryland was: snow and slightly colder Wednesday, heavy snows Wednesday morning, Thursday generally fair and colder in east and snow flurries and colder in west portion; continued cold Friday and Saturday, northeast backing to north and northwest gales over east portion diminishing by Wednesday night.

Mr. Downey said that his department is determined to see the road to New Germany is kept open, although the main through highway may demand attention first.

Driver Acquitted After Two Years

Jury Frees Him On Drunk Driving

A traffic case more than two years old was resurrected in Circuit court yesterday and a jury reversed a drunken driving conviction, upholding a no-license-in-possession conviction.

The defendant was W. L. Emerick, who had been fined $100 for drunken driving and $10 for driving without a license in possession in October, 1937.

City Police Officer W. B. Lorenstein testified that Emerick had driven his car over the sidewalk of North Mechanic street, near Baltimore, and that he exhibited signs of intoxication when arrested a short time later in a nearby restaurant.

The officer's testimony concerning the defendant's condition was contradicted, however, by two defense witnesses who were passengers in the car.

Attorneys Simon F. Reilly and Harold E. Naughton represented Emerick.

It was indicated that the delay in trying the appeal was caused by the illness and death of Taylor Morrison, who had represented Emerick in Trial Magistrates court.

No More Rounds In Free-For All, Harris Decides

There will be nothing further heard at this term of Circuit court about the Skelly-Klosterman-Fost free-for-all at Triple Lakes last November.

This was decided yesterday when State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris dismissed assault charges against Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Fost and their son, Henry Fost.

The assault charges had been preferred by William Klosterman, the defendants demanded a jury trial when arraigned before Magistrate Roy S. Bowman at Cresaptown.

The cases had been pending on the criminal appeals docket until yesterday's dismissal.

"The evidence in the Skelly case convinces me that none of the Fosts could be successfully prosecuted and the state's attorney said in motioning that the charges be dismissed.

The case to which he referred was that of John Skelly, of Cresaptown, whose trial on charges of assault with intent to murder Frank Fost ended last week with a "hung" jury after eight hours' deliberation.

All the cases grew out of a free-for-all at the home of Henry Fost with the Fosts on one side, Skelly and Klosterman on the other.

Skelly was released under bond for possible trial at the April term of court.

Births

Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Neff, Maryland avenue, announce the birth of a son yesterday afternoon at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burkhart of Ridgeley, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Linville of Keyser, W. Va., announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Memorial hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. James Martin, RFD 3, announce the birth of a son yesterday morning at Allegany hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. McVicker of Chillicothe, Ohio, announce the birth of a son Jan. 20. Mrs. McVicker was Miss Marian Hammond of Cumberland.

Public Library Robbed; Police 'Know Nothing'

Cash Register Smashed, Ten Dollars Stolen, As Burglaries Continue

Downtown business men yesterday took precautionary measures to protect their stores in the wake of another breaking and entering job Monday night—this time at the Cumberland Public Library.

Police officials, however, continued to pretend to newspaper reporters that no crimes are being committed in Cumberland. Assistant Chief John J. Treiber said last night that he knew nothing about the library robbery.

Back Door Entered

The cash register at the library was smashed and rifled sometime between 9:15 p. m., and 11:30 p. m. by hoodlums who made their entry through the back door of the building, Miss Mary Walsh, librarian, reported.

Ten dollars was taken from the cash register, Miss Walsh said.

Big Fine in Loot

"This is much more than we usually have on hand," Miss Walsh said. "It just happened that an unusually large rental fine amounting to five dollars was paid the afternoon before the robbery. The ten dollars was mostly in dimes, nickels, and quarters."

Miss Walsh reported yesterday that police were conducting an investigation.

New Lock on Door

"It's not so much the amount but the feeling that such a thing could happen and might happen again," Miss Walsh said. "Since Monday we have put an unusually strong lock on that back door; it might be a good idea to mention that."

Meanwhile, a number of merchants hired extra private policemen for nightly patrol duty in the downtown area.

Young Groups Suspected

The increased number of private detectives has been put on duty to combat the pilfering some officers say is due to young gangs of burglars who are taking advantage of inadequate police protection.

Night watchmen in downtown office buildings, urged by their employers to keep on their toes, have reported seeing groups of youths prowling at night in the business section.

No Arrests in City In Last Two Days

Yesterday marked the second straight day that no arrests were made in Cumberland, the blotter at police headquarters showed at midnight.

Not even a parking ticket was given away yesterday, an inquiry showed. No drunks were found who needed arresting. Automobile drivers were being unusually good.

The city jail was empty.

Housewife Found Unconscious In Beauty Parlor

Took '5 Tablets,' 38-Year-Old Woman Says at Hospital

A 38-year-old housewife, found unconscious in the basement of the Spruill Apartments yesterday afternoon, told Allegany hospital attendants that she had swallowed five capsules, which apparently contained headache or sleeping powders.

The woman, Mrs. Viola Long, wife of Kell Long, was reported in a "fair" condition last night.

The attending physician refused to divulge any details concerning the case, and hospital attendants likewise declined to release any information.

Mrs. Long was found about 4 p. m. by the apartment janitor in a chair in the rear room of the Shamrock Beauty Shop, located in the basement of the Decatur street apartment-building where she lived. She was unconscious.

She was rushed to the nearby hospital when efforts to revive her failed.

There she regained consciousness a few times, but not long enough to give details about the incident.

Mrs. Long told a nurse that she took "five capsules"—of what she didn't say—about 1 o'clock.

She was unable to say anything further and made no mention of why she took the powders.

Neighbors in the apartment reported that Mrs. Long took the sedative to get rid of a headache and get some rest. They said they had seen her about noon, and she "looked all right then."

The patient appeared very drowsy when she was admitted to the hospital's dispensary.

She was ordered held "for observation," and her condition was reported "fair" last night.

The Spruill Apartments are located at 303 Decatur street.

Huster Heeds Clemency Plea

WPA Foreman Gets Suspended Fine

Associate Judge William A. Huster heeded a plea for clemency in Circuit court yesterday as he suspended a $150 fine against a Flintstone WPA foreman.

The fine had been imposed on Thomas R. Ash in Trial Magistrates court for driving after his license was revoked.

He had also been fined $25 for obtaining a license by misrepresentation. This fine Judge Huster ordered paid, together with the costs.

Ash, who had appealed the verdicts, pleaded guilty to both charges when the cases were called by State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris.

Attorney William L. Wilson Jr., who with Attorney Edward J. Ryan represented him, told the court that Ash made only small wages and was the support of his mother.

The license had been suspended in 1933 after Ash was convicted of drunken driving, Mr. Wilson said. He declared that Ash, one of several men in a car, had "taken the blame" because he was the only one unemployed at the time.

He switched his initials last year in applying for a new license, and it was issued since the record showed no conviction against R. T. Ash.

Mr. Wilson added that his client did not realize that he had the right to apply for re-instatement of the permit in his own name.

Prohibition on Again For Man Who Chased Wife out of House

A 41-year-old Triple Lakes man who allegedly came home drunk Monday night and chased his wife and five children out of their home was found guilty of disorderly conduct, but was acquitted of assault with intent to kill yesterday by Trial Magistrate Frank A. Perdew.

The father, Marshall R. Lease, was acquitted on the assault charge because testimony did not show that he had a murderous weapon and because his wife and children were not harmed.

State Trooper George J. Miller, who made the arrest, testified, however, that Lease called him nasty names.

Although Lease was found guilty of disorderly conduct, he was given a suspended sentence on condition he refrain from drinking alcohol.

Railroader Hurt In Fall at Shop

Wayne J. Skidmore, 52, of Ridgeley, a Western Maryland Railway employe, was injured about the head and chest yesterdey afternoon when he fell about 15 feet from the top of a freight car at the railway's shops.

Skidmore was taken to Memorial hospital. His condition was reported "fair" last night.

Elwood Street Boy Hurt In Fall on Icy Street

Raymond Wempe, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond F. Wempe, 614 Elwood street, sustained a gash on the right side of his head yesterday afternoon when he slipped and fell on an icy sidewalk while returning home from school.

Four sutures were used at Allegany hospital to close the wound. He was able to return home after treatment.

Elvin W. Leasure, 19, of Willowbrook road, suffered lacerations about the head and face Monday night when his sled crashed into a tree in Constitutional Park. He was released from Memorial hospital yesterday.

Clubwomen Talk Over Democracy's Problems

Cumberland's mayor and city council last night was pointed out as a pertinent example of "Democracy's Problems Today," topic of the forum conducted by the Busi- Club at the Fort Cumberlandhahra ness and Professional Women's Club at the Fort Cumberland Hotel.

This illustration of the topic was given by James Blackwell, editor of the Voice of Labor and one of four speakers who expressed their views at the spirited and oft-applauded discussion. Other speakers were Harold W. Smith, Miss Lillian Compton, and Miss Louise Shaffer.

Handbill Ordinance Again!

In what was the only direct reference to the Cumberland scene (the talks for the most part were impersonal in tone and covered a broad area),) Mr. Blackwell stated that the duly elected representatives of the people were supposed to vigorously oppose special privileges for special groups.

The speaker then pointed out the mayor and council as a "bullheaded group of people who refused to be realistic about the handbill and picket ordinances" and who "refused to comply with the dictates of the United States Supreme Court."

Council Chided

Declaring that "more groups should become vocal," and that "the laws should apply to the humble as well as the elite," Mr. Blackwell chided the mayor and council for allowing the Cumberland Community Choir the use of the council chamber for choir rehearsals but "brutally rejecting a similar request by the Townsend club.

Smith Raps Interference

Mr. Smith, in a concise discussion of the problem from the viewpoint of business, declared that "the least government is the best government", referred to restrictive taxes, restrictive activities in legislation, and competition of government with business as being responsible for the "feeling of uncertainty that has been created."

Mr. Smith then referred to a recent statement by the articulate Wendell Wilkie to the effect that business would spend a billion and a half dollars in expansion programs if assured hat it would be free of government restrictions.

All Workers "in Business"

The Chamber secretary then neatly summed up the unemployment situation in capsule form by stating that any man who works is in business and that business has seen a decline of recent years due, mainly, to the restrictions already enumerated.

Miss Compton rapped the average American's indifference to the country's most pressing problems in her talk from the professional woman's viewpoint.

No Groups Independent

"We are dependent on other groups," Miss Compton declared, citing the fact that any upsets along the economic front effect all groups.

Referring directly to the class of which she is a member, Miss Compton urged equal opportunity and equal pay for professionl women with other groups regardless of sex and religious belief.

Working Women Defended

"Society has forced women into business," Miss Compton asserted in defending working women and pointing out that women are no longer self-sustaining in the home.

Mr. Blackwell, the third speaker of the evening, emphasized the fact that "organized labor is the very fount and beginning of our existence today," asserted that the first group crushed by totalatarian powers is the organized worker group.

"Abuses" Brought Restrictions

The speaker then took occasion to differ with Mr. Smith, stating that the "restrictions" referred to by the Chamber secretary were the result of "long abuses."

Declaring that the "voice of the people" has been heard in recent elections, Mr. Blackwell stated that the "broad, humanitarian theory in government is destined to continue."

Labor's "Great Awakening"

The speaker declared that there had been a "great awakening" in the labor movement in the last few years, an awakening aided by the New Deal and the National Labor Relations Board.

Terming the Wagner labor act as the "noblest concept of democracy," Mr. Blackwell stated that the government came to the conclusion that "the scales had been weighted on the side of the employer."

Old Argument Attacked

Final speaker of the evening was Miss Shaffer who adeptly attacked the familiar argument that the unemployment problem would be solved if working women were ousted from their jobs.

Quoting statistics, Miss Shaffer pointed out that the positions held by women today would take care of only three per cent of the total number of unemployed men.

Miss Shaffer, attacking discrimination against the woman worker, said that any movement to oust any individual group from employment would mark the beginning of a crumpling democracy.

Wants No Discrimination

"We need laws that make absolutely no discrimination in any one direction, whether it be in the labor ranks, the professional ranks or any other ranks," Miss Shaffer stated emphatically.

"Political democracy we have acquired in this country," the speaker said. "Economy democracy we have begun to acquire."

Labor and the Sales Tax

Asked if unity of the AF of L and the CIO were desirable and if the aims of the two groups were essentially the same, Mr. Blackwell replied yes in each instance.

Asked why labor was opposed to the sales-tax, Mr. Blackwell replied primarily because it hates a tax that "hits Howard Bruce, a Baltimore millionaire, and a $25-a-week working man equally hard.

"Taxes," the speaker said, "should be based primarily on the ability to pay. It is for this reason that a sales tax is discriminating in nature."

Aid for the "Submerged Third"

Asked to clarify an assertion on governmental "planned economy," Mr. Blackwell declared himself for "production for use and not for profit, in other words, an economy that would help the submerged third."

Asked if business hadn't been short-sighted in the matter of hours and wages, Mr. Smith said that business admittedly had made many mistakes, declared that the aim of business was "the best hours and best wages consistent with a fair profit."

Phone Manager Wins Cartwheels In Rotary's Prof. Quiz Contest

The eminent Prof. Quiz arrived in Cumberland yesterday and put up at the Fort Cumberland hotel for a round with the local Rotarians.

The professor, in the person of Charles A. Piper, conducted one of his quizzes for the club as a pinch-hitting program filler. The result was that many club members thought the program equally as good as more formal ones, if not better.

Prof. Piper called for six volunteers to stand up and be questioned with a series of puzzlers and near-puzzles concocted by Charles L. Kopp with the connivance of Piper and Charles S. Catherman, the program committee chairman.

Duty's Call Answered

Nobly responding to the call of duty were Thomas E. Gilchrist, Miles G. Thompson, James L. Barrow, Wegster K. Edwards, George Henderson, and Dr. Frank U. Davis. The call proved all the more interesting when Piper announced that five silver dollars—real silver dollars, too, count 'em—would be paid over to the highest scorer and three cartwheels to the next highest.

Arnet Widener, local salesman, was engaged to serve as referee, while Catherman was score keeper.

George Henderson Second

A series of interesting questions, which proved both educational and edifying, were asked and answered, the audience chiming in when any contestant missed fire. Once or twice, by the way, the audience missed fire, also.

Barrow carried away the five silver dollars, having attained top score of 525 points and Hendehson drew the three dollars with a second scoring of 500 flat, Gilchrist registered 450 for third place.

Deaths

John Porter

John Porter, retired railroader, died last night at Allegany hospital where he had been a patient for nearly two years. He was 72.

Born at Mt. Savage, Mr. Porter was a son of the late Steve and Elizabeth Porter. He worked for the Western Maryland and the Cumberland and Pennsylvania for a total of more than thirty-five years. He retired about twenty years ago.

Surviving are three sons, Raymond and Ernest Porter, of Newark, N. J., and Frank Porter, of Cumberland; two daughters, Mrs. James S. Hutton, of Ridgeley, and Mrs. George Tipton, of Locust Grove; three brothers, Douglas Porter, of Ellerslie, Louis Porter, of Glassport, Pa., and Albert Porter, of Frankfort, Ky.; and four sisters, Mrs. Viola Williams, of Baltimore; Mrs. Emma Reynolds, of Mt. Driver Convicted On 27th Birthday

The courtroom was the locale for a "birthday party" yesterday afternoon, but the "guest of honor" was none too well treated by his "hosts."

It was the twenty-seventh birthday of Carl M. Smith, Green Ridge Celanese worker, but that didn't stop a Circuit court jury from upholding his conviction on a drunken driving charge, for which he had been fined $100 in Trial Magistrate's court here.

The jurors did, however, reverse his conviction for reckless driving, in which a $10 fine had been imposed.

Jury Out Half Hour

The verdict was returned after only half an hour's deliberation.

Later, Defense Attorney Edward J. Ryan urged suspension of the fine, noting that Smith was married and the father of a small child.

"There are too many of these cases," Associate Judge William A. Huster commented as he denied the clemency plea and ordered the $100 fine paid, together with the costs. He gave him until April, however, to pay the fine.

Five Police Testify

The jury convicted Smith on the drunken driving count after a state trooper and four city police officers testified he was "under the influence of intoxicants" when they arrested him on Baltimore street Sunday afternoon, Oct. 29.

He was picked up after the La-Vale State Police sub-station had received a call from an un-named citizen about his allegedly irregular driving.

The officers were State Trooper George J. Miller, Detective-Sergeant B. Frank Gaffney, Sergeant Raymont Johnson and Officers R. C. Cassen and John Newhouse, all of the city police department.

Had Been to Hancock

Taking the stand in his own defense, Smith maintained he had had only two bottles of beer on the day he was arrested.

Nabbed at 3 p. m., he stated that he had drunk one bottle of beer about 10 a. m. another at 1 p. m. He denied that he was at all intoxicated.

His testimony was largely substantiated by his father-in-law, Guy Bucy, who was a passenger in the car.

The two men said they had been to an orchard near Hancock for apples and were en route to the Celanese plant to get a couple of passengers when Smith was arrested.

Defense Testimony

Another defense witness was Dayton Dolly, Flintstone gasoline service station attendant, who said he noticed nothing "out of the way" about Smith when he stopped for gas on his way into Cumberland.

Little direct evidence was presented concerning the reckless driving charge, although two of the officers declared Smith was driving at an excessive rate of speed down Baltimore avenue hill.

Attorney William L. Wilson Jr., assisted Mr. Ryan in the defense.

Hotel Manager Wears Red Flannels As Feature of Birthday Surprise

The rotund Elsa Maxwell never staged a tackier tacky party than the one held last night at 743 Washington street, a jovial witness reported at 11:15 p. m. last night.

Purpose of the shindig was primarily to surprise Albert E. Morgan, manager of the Algonquin hotel, on the occasion of his birthday.

Reliable reports last night indicated that the surprise party was indeed a surprise for the hotel manager—especially after the guests had outfitted him in a blazing suit of red underwear.

The party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Sherman with the recreation basement decorated with all the rustic gadgets and geegaws that are usually found in a barn.

The guests at the party danced to the music of Ma Bishop's Mountaineers.

One guest arrived garbed as a snow queen, another couple as early Virginians, and yet another in pajamas.

SKI BULLETIN

Jr. Association 'Boys' Hear Tales Of Cumberlandia

'Hodge-Podge History' Told by F. L. Carl, Newspaper Dean

"Down Bedford street, so quiet, staid,
Time seems to hardly lay his hand;
The maple trees 'neath which I played
Still flourish as they sturdy stand.
'Tis true, at intervals between
The quaint old dormer-windowed bricks,
Some ugly modern house is seen
Whose builder played fantastic tricks
With iron and stone; but those are few.
The most is old, the old I love;
Old homes, old doorways leading through,
Dim lit with fan-lights high above."

Gives 'Hodge-Podge History'

Mr. Carl summing up the talk he made for the organization at the Golden Gate Tea Room, later said, "I told the boys a few things about Cumberland, I guess you might call it a 'hodgepodge history.' "

In stressing the unusual scenic beauties of the Cumberland area, Mr. Carl weaved in the tribute made by Bishop Henry Yates Satterlee—"that the glory of the Alps is no greater than the picturesque area in which Cumberland is located."

Spicy Reminiscences

In his chat spiced with reminiscenses, Mr. Carl skipped goodhumoredly from one topic to another, read Thackeray's glowing description of the Narrows and Cumberland, and the next moment was drolly remarking that "standard supplies for the Cumberland-Washington trip made on flat boats were two gallons of whisky, four tincups, four boatmen, twenty feet of rope and thirty pounds of bacon."

The next minute, Mr. Carl was enthusiastically lauding a recent editorial titled "The School Upon the Hill", that appeared in the Fort Hill Sentinel.

Praises Fort Hill Writer

"Remarkable descriptive power," Mr. Carl said after reading the editorial, one paragraph which rippled as follows: "The beautiful mountains of Maryland stretch forth mile after mile, their tops making a lasting fringe on the horizon with the Knobleys of West Virginia with their roller coaster contour."

Mr. Carl next dipped in that priceless scrapbook he has been keeping all these years, and mischievously proceeded to read a number of the juicier morsels to the delight of the grinning young business men.

Turning to the more drab aspects of Cumberland history, Mr. Carl recalled that "there have been a number of atrocious murders here that have never been solved."

Describes Lynching

A lynching he witnessed was also vividly described by the raconteur of the evening.

Next item regretted by the speaker was the fact that Cumberland, in contrast to Hagerstown and Frederick, "has always been an orphan as far as philanthropy is concerned.

"There certainly has been a paucity in giving for the public weal," Mr. Carl commented.

Recalls 'Nifty Nineties'

Describing the days when he first came to Cumberland in the "nifty nineties," Mr. Carl recalled how "I, an impecunious reporter, found myself wearing a cutaway, fancy waistcoat, striped trousers, ascot and derby hat, sometimes a light gray one."

"The gay nineties called for rather formal dress," Mr. Carl explained.

Month-Old Snow Gets White Top; Cold Continues

Western Maryland Snow-Blanketed Since Dec. 27

Snow that has covered Western Maryland since Dec. 27—four weeks ago today — was piled higher yesterday as nearly two inches fell before midnight.

The snow slowed down highway traffic, but the roads were not especially dangerous last night, State police reported. Cumberland streets were slippery, however.

Leo T. Downey, State Roads engineer in this district, reported that nearly a score of trucks were kept through the night putting cinders on slippery spots on the highway.

Mr. Downey also reported that several thousand feet of snow fence have recently been put up along the road to the New Germany winter sports center, helping to prevent drifting there.

The temperature in Cumberland late last night was 24 degrees, with some snow still flying. At Piedmont, Frostburg, and in the Garrett county mountains, the mercury was down to ten.

The official forecast for Maryland was: snow and slightly colder Wednesday, heavy snows Wednesday morning, Thursday generally fair and colder in east and snow flurries and colder in west portion; continued cold Friday and Saturday, northeast backing to north and northwest gales over east portion, diminishing by Wednesday night.

Mr. Downey said that his department is determined to see the road to New Germany is kept open, although the main through highway may demand attention first.

Driver Acquitted After Two Years

Jury Frees Him On Drunk Driving

A traffic case more than two years old was resurrected in Circuit court yesterday and a jury reversed a drunken driving conviction, upholding a no-license-in-possession conviction.

The defendant was W. L. Emerick, who had been fined $100 for drunken driving and $10 for driving without a license in possession in October, 1937.

City Police Officer W. B. Lowenstein testified that Emerick had driven his car over the sidewalk of North Mechanic street, in Baltimore, and that he exhibited signs of intoxication when arrested a short time later in a nearby restaurant.

The officer's testimony concerning the defendant's condition was contradicted, however, by two defense witnesses who were passengers in the car.

Attorneys Simon F. Reilly and Harold E. Naughton represented Emerick.

It was indicated that the delay in trying the appeal was caused by the illness and death of Taylor Morrison, who had represented Emerick in Trial Magistrates court.

No More Rounds In Free-For All, Harris Decides

There will be nothing further heard at this term of Circuit court about the Skelly-Klosterman-Post free-for-all at Triple Lakes last November.

This was decided yesterday when State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris dismissed assault charges against Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Fost and their son, Henry Fost.

The assault charges had been preferred by William Klosterman. The defendants demanded a jury trial when arraigned before Magistrate Roy S. Bowman at Cresaptown.

The cases had been pending in the criminal appeals docket until yesterday's dismissal.

"The evidence in the Skelly case convinces me that none of the Fost could be successfully prosecuted," the state's attorney said in moving that the charges be dismissed.

The case to which he referred was that of John Skelly, of Cresaptown, whose trial on charges of assault with intent to murder Fred Fost ended last week with a "hung jury after eight hours' deliberation."

All the cases grew out of a free-for-all at the home of Henry Fost with the Fosts on one side, Skelly and Klosterman on the other.

Skelly was released under bond for possible trial at the April term of court.
